SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Poinsettias.

The time for propagating poinsettias is approaching the end, but cuttings struck at this time will make the best plants for the low pans, and all the cuttings possible should be placed in the propagating bench or frame at once. Stock rooted after September 1 will not prove satisfactory at the holiday season. As soon as rooted they should be potted in 2½-inch pots in a compost composed of three-fourths soil and one-fourth rotted manure. As soon as the night temperature drops below 60° the plants should be removed to the houses and given a light position. As they grow space them out so that they will not become crowded and drawn, a short jointed growth being desirable. While poinsettias can be grown in a cooler temperature, at about 50°, the bracts will not be as large and they will not be in bloom at Christmas. The cause of more failures with these plants is a variable temperature—60° at night gives the best results, and do not allow the temperature to fluctuate, or a loss of leaves will result.

Pelargoniums.

The great improvement in the varieties of the zonal geraniums during the last fifteen years has gradually pushed the show pelargoniums into the background, but there is no handsomer conservatory or house plant for late spring and early summer than these old time favorites, and the plant grower should always have a few of these every season. If there is no stock wait until September and buy from those who have, and purchase the large flowering varieties and a good assortment of colors. Those who have some good stock plants that are nearly through blooming can begin to dry them off, but do not go to extremes, do not dry them enough to turn the foliage yellow. About the middle of August the plant may be cut down and pruned back very severely, leaving only two or three eyes on each shoot. The wood that is cut off should be made into cuttings and every piece will root, if cut into two or three eyes. Insert the cuttings in the propagating bed and keep them well shaded, and not too wet but keep the sand moist. They will root in about three weeks and then should be potted and as soon as they require it a shift made into 4-inch pots. Encourage them to make all the growth possible until November, when they should be placed in a cool house, with a temperature of 40° to 45° and preferably on a shelf near the glass. At the end of February or early in March they should be potted in 6-inch pots, when they will make rapid growth and flower the following May and June.

Calias.

The bulbs of callas will be arriving shortly and everything should be in readiness to start them if it is desired to have blooms in the fall. They can be grown either in benches or in pots, many prefer pot culture, claiming that the bulbs produce more flowers when grown in this manner than when in benches, but the larger flowers are grown in the latter. But whichever way they are to be grown through the winter, the culture at the outset will be the same. The soil should be one-third rotted cow manure and two-thirds good soil and if the soil is of a clayey texture the mixture will stand a liberal addition of sharp sand to keep it open. Pot the bulb in a pot just large enough to hold it and be sure and have good drainage. While the calla is a moisture loving plant and absorbs lots of water it will quickly take on a sickly look if the drainage becomes blocked and the soil becomes soaked with stagnant water. After potting, the plants should be plunged outside, preferably in a cold frame, and if standing in the direct rays of the sun a mulch of short grass, such as lawn mowings or old straw, will prevent the pots from drying out too rapidly and consequently less frequent watering will be required until the roots begin to grow in the soil. As soon as the growths appear the mulch should be removed. The plants can be left out in frames until the middle of September, when they should be removed to the houses and potted into larger sizes or planted in the benches. The old bulbs that bloomed last year can be shaken out and treated in a similar manner. Be sure before potting these to remove all the small bulblets from the old bulbs. If it is desired to increase the stock these can be planted in a flat and they will grow into flowering roots for the succeeding year.

Pruning Shrubs.

The spring blooming shrubs are now nearly all done and the safest rule for pruning is to cut back into shape after the flowers have passed, when the shrubs begin their growth for the next season's crop of flowers. All the small weak growths should be cut out and the plants trimmed into proper shape. Unless this is attended to shrubs rapidly become a tangle of weak growths, bearing but few flowers, and grow into ungainly specimens. Too often this important work is left until too late and the blooming growth for next season is cut off with the result that there are no flowers the succeeding year. Privet hedges should be constantly pruned into shape so as to have a nice appearance and they will stand any amount of cutting as they grow very rapidly. August is the best time to trim berberis and they will need no further cutting back for the balance of the year.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

Retailer Asks for "Square Deal."

The paragraph recently published in THE AMERICAN FLORIST to the effect that the use of artificial flowers in preference to natural stock from storage or "pickled stock" would tend to put the "For Sale" sign on many greenhouses, furnishes the writer with a text upon which he would respectfully present a few remarks. I presume the paragraph above alluded to was particularly referring to conditions at special seasons. In fact, it is easy to believe that the last Memorial day season gave grounds for the prophecy regarding the fate of the "pickler." There is no question as to the truth of the statement. It is only history repeating itself and is in direct harmony with the law of self-protection and justice. That there is a place for artificial and "prepared" products to a moderate degree in the floral trade will be generally conceded, however. But the persistent pushing and exploiting of this class of goods will have a bad effect. No florist can stand for such stock and hold his trade or make a profit. Self defense compels him to push other goods of which there is no question of supply, grade or price.

The remedy for this trouble lies practically altogether with the wholesale grower—and it can be covered by three short words: "A Square Deal." The retail dealer cannot be blamed for wishing to avoid calamity, and calamity to him is often the result of a heavy demand for stock, a large outlay of cash for flowers, a big rush of work and the discovery that he has been sent old or pickled stock when he opens up his shipments from the wholesaler. Often these shipments are so bad that they are not worth lifting from the boxes. I am convinced from what I have seen in boxes marked "flowers," from wholesale growers, that the most of the growers have imagination fairly well developed, therefore I would ask the wholesale grower to imagine the retail florists' feelings when subjected to such conditions as I have above briefly outlined. For each dollar paid for worthless stock the profit is taken from more than a dollar's worth of good stock sold. How much loss can he stand before the entire day's trade from which he expected so much, and which he needed so badly, has figured down to breaking even. It is quite likely that before he can "settle up" the retail florist will "settle down" to the conviction that the less he buys the better, when it comes to cut flowers.

Another point in this disappointing condition of flowers at special seasons, is the fact that many people are buyers who ordinarily do little in that line. The effect on this class of buyers is very bad for the florist's trade. These new customers are met with poor stock in the florist's store, or have their orders filled with inferior stock, or possibly it cannot be filled at all as given—in any event the impression will be made that flower buying is a gamble, and they will only indulge when they can't help it. Such impressions as these do not help the flower business to grow with the class of people who constitute a considerable part of every community, and in whose numbers there is the secret of success of almost every line of retail trade except the floral business. It may occur to some reader to remark at this point that lots of florists don't know how to handle stock or take care of their trade. I concede the point. But the florist who comes under the above category rarely has built up a trade sufficient to put him in the class to which we refer. Where such florists do exist the community in which they do business knows what to expect and when they are dissatisfied the remedy comes in the perfectly natural manner of the survival of the fittest.

Now for the "Square Deal." I maintain that good business judgment should tell the wholesaler, whether grower or commission merchant, that the retailer must have value received for his money. In other words his stock of whatever grade must be dependable and up to grade quality. It would be better to decline his order than to accept it promising "to do our best" and then fill with stuff that cannot by any stretch of imagination be classed as anything but bad. I claim that such handling of an order for the retailer is not "doing his best," but is "doing his customer." The plea of soft growing conditions, extra demand, and bad weather may be made, and often with truth. However, that is not the retailer's fault, and does not justify the grower in sending him stock that is worthless. I further maintain that if there is a loss due to stock reaching the retailer in bad order the retailer should not have to stand for it. The retail florist orders a given amount of stock of certain grades or quality. The wholesale grower is in the market as a seller. It stands to reason that he agrees, by the mere fact that he offers certain goods, that he will be able to deliver those goods to his customer. Failing in such delivery in either quantity or quality bars him from receiving pay for goods or quality which he does not supply. Soft stock, bad weather, extra demand, improper treatment while in transit, may be causes to take into consideration by the wholesale dealer, but such items of risk are beyond the control of the buyer. He cannot, in most cases, even inspect the stock with which his order is to be filled. The cutting of stock, handling, packing for shipment, judgment of quality, in fact, everything vital to its condition are matters in which the consignee has nothing to say or do.

Therefore, why should he stand for goods that are not up to grade—or for goods that are spoiled upon arrival at their destination? Should it be to protect the grower from loss? Well hardly! The retailer has troubles of his own without taking up those of the wholesale man. In spite of the justice of the position I have taken in this matter, and which I think is quite clear, we still read on the invoice tickets that accompany our shipments that "these flowers were fresh when packed—were selected with care," etc., and that arrival at destination in good order is not guaranteed. It must take a more than ordinary gift of foresight for the chap who writes those disclaimers to look down the future and see that each individual shipment which will accompany these disclaimers will be fresh and carefully selected. The truth is, there has been so much reckless work along this line that the courts have long since declared that such disclaimers are not worth the paper they cover. In spite of all the points I have herein set forth, and I have been as brief as possible, why do we find so few wholesale shippers who will act as common sense and justice would suggest as the only square way to do business? Why does the retail florist have such a hard time usually to get a claim allowed for worthless stock—stock which is often acknowledged by the wholesale shipper to have been none too good, but instead is "the best we could do"? If it was the best he could do he still used his judgment in thinking that it would arrive fit for use. If it did not so arrive who should lose because of error of judgment? Why, the man who did the judging, of course. If he did not think it would arrive fit for use then the retailer should not have to pay for stock which the shipper knew was bad.

The writer has bought flowers in the wholesale market for at least twenty years, and has dealt with a number of firms in that time, although the bulk of the steady supply has come from some one grower on a regular order. We have usually stayed from five to ten years with a grower before circumstances would make a change desirable. The circumstances were not always matters of quality of stock, or treatment either, but generally a change of conditions which made a change advisable. I make this statement so that I may not be mistaken for a novice who has suddenly found himself up against what is really an old story to the experienced florist. We have dealt with leading firms almost altogether and they are certainly a fine class of people. But—when it comes to a claim for bad stock received on a special order, especially if from a firm other than our regular grower, then the trouble begins. It actually seems sometimes that they think that the retailer should stand between them and loss from any cause whatever. I am not unmindful of the effects of shipping on flowers, and nothing in this communication is to be construed as a denial that there is nearly always some bruising, sometimes a few broken flowers, etc. That is not the trouble. It is when a whole lot or a considerable quantity of a shipment shows at once that they are bad and should never have been shipped. It is then that I am constrained to take up space on the printed page and ask for "A Square Deal." W. H. CULP.

A Japanese Table Decoration.

Place in the center of a highly polished round table a large brass jardiniere, fill with moss and arrange with cornflowers and heliotrope, using maidenhair ferns for around the edge and to fall over the sides of the receptacle. Then take a Japanese parasol and turn it inside out, sharpening the edge of the handle so as to place it conveniently in the center of the jardiniere. This should not be too high, but high enough to allow suspending from four corners of the parasol Japanese lanterns in which the bluish tint predominates. Fill in the parasol with marguerites and maidenhair ferns. The arrangement of the marguerites should be especially loose and sprays should extend over the edges where the lanterns are attached. Around the base of the jardiniere bank a good sized garland of maidenhair fern. If a square table is used, place a Japanese bowl filled with cornflowers on each corner, extending from each a wide sash ribbon the shade of the cornflowers to the center of the jardiniere. For favors use the covered Japanese bowls tied with a ribbon to match the cornflowers. Fill the bowls with bonbons. The tiny Japanese lantern (the smallest made) suspended from a wire wound with blue ribbon and placed in a Japanese basket filled with marguerites can be artistically arranged. The large Japanese lanterns around the parasol should be so arranged that they can be lighted. Or better still, place an electric light inside. A. E. K.

SYRACUSE, N. Y.—The annual meeting of the New York State Federation of Floral Clubs will be held here during the state fair this fall.

BOSTON, MASS.—A complimentary dinner, attended by many of the leading horticulturists of the eastern states, was given to John K. M. L. Farquhar, July 18. Mr. Farquhar, who was one of the two judges at the Royal International Exhibition in London, only recently returned from his trip across the Atlantic.

WITH THE GROWERS

The Dreer Rose Trial Grounds.

That the hybrid tea is the coming rose is made doubly sure to the doubting mind by a visit to the trial grounds of the H. A. Dreer Co. at Riverton, N. J. Almost a thousand varieties are being tried out here, many of them as yet under number being sent by the introducers to be tested, and if deserving, to receive the endorsement as well as a substantial order for the variety, which is then sent out under name. Jacob G. Eisele says that many new roses are introduced with brilliant descriptions and bearing aristocratic names that ought never to have got beyond the seedling trial grounds. A distinguished lady will visit the gardens of the foreign rose grower, and go into ecstasies over one of the seedlings. At once the variety is duly honored with her name and of course must go into the catalogue with a glowing description. The present trial grounds enable them to prove all the new ones, so that only the really good kinds shall be purchased in quantity and receive their endorsement. In this way their customer's house learns to rely on their especially mentioned varieties or combination lists which include the best of the newer introductions.

The pictures illustrating this article were made the second week in June, when there is the greatest show of bloom. Early in the morning as the sun is rising is the time to see the flowers at their best. There is at all times through the season a show of flowers, as they bloom on all the new growths, superb yellow, Mad. Leon Pain, a light lovely pink, large flower, and the Countess of Ilchester a bright pink, a winner in every way, were among the blocks of twelve. As before stated, many of the varieties were still under number. Entries in a book containing the entire list are made by Mr. Eisele and George Clark, who take great pleasure in looking the roses over daily until they have all been checked off and their good and bad points noted. The trials have demonstrated that many sorts that have made great records on the other side do not do well here and others stand our hot climate and produce better flowers than in their native land. Mrs. Aaron Ward, Mr. Eisele says, gets a much brighter color in midsummer than in early spring. "Anyone that gets this one will remember Dreer," he said, pointing to Grossherzog Friederich, a fine double pink of La France type but not so double and Mr. Eisele says very fine. Wakefield Christie Miller is a fine large pink which is to be forced by a large grower for cut flowers. There were many others of which he spoke encouragingly. He said he went over the beds to select the best dozen with Dr. Haey, a great lover of roses, and it was no time before they had two dozen and could not agree on any that should be discarded.

Varieties that appeared to stand out when seen in flower at this time were Margaret, a magnificent pink, a finely formed flower; Geo. Hofer, very large Magenta pink; Mrs. Herbert Taylor, globular shaped, a handsome light blush pink; Mme. Segon Weber, superb loose pink, very striking; Frau Burgemeister Kirschstein, dark pink but all varieties are at their height during the first two weeks of June. Roses of great merit have been planted in blocks of twelve or more and in this way greatly impress the visitors. Mrs. Aaron Ward, with its beautiful yellow buds, George C. Ward, a very finely formed red, Harry Kirk, a bud, opening light semi-double; Lieut. Chaure, a light red full flower, very striking; General McArthur, brilliant red, large flower; Marquise de Sinety, coppery-blush, a unique flower; The Dandy, a pretty full scarlet; Countess of Ilchester, which Mr. Eisele said is one of the first in any collection, a flat majestic pink very double center, truly a gem; Duchess of Wellington, a superb sulphur yellow, light center, a large flower; Mrs. Aaron Ward, yellow buds, opens nearly white, sure to be in first dozen; George C. Ward, an exquisite flower, light red in color; Laurent Carle, a beautiful scarlet; Harry Kirk, sulphur yellow, pale lemon when open. Everyone should have this rose. Mad. Leon Pain, a lovely light pink; Mons. Paul Lede, a light pink, large and magnificent when in half-bloom; Leonie Lawesch, copper and pink, yellow center, very striking; Alice Chambrion, a cluster rose, is all flowers and buds and always, Mr. Eisele says, a moss of bloom; Mme. Leon Constantin, a vigorous large bluish pink, a perfect flower; Mrs. Chas. Curtis Harrison, a fine deep pink, a long bud on long stem, very pretty; Ecarlete, a semi-red, very striking; Reine Marguerite de Italie, very free, a rather dull red; Lucien de Lewos, a very fine, bluish pink; Henry Paul, very pretty long stemmed pink, upright grower. This is but a partial list of those noted, all of which bore exceptionally fine flowers, and the description of which at best conveys nothing of the beauty and charm of the plants themselves.

Private collections of the hybrids tea class are increasing rapidly as their beauty and free blooming qualities become better known. They are handled here by the hundreds of thousands, each season's importations over topping largely that of the year before.

The hybrid rose beds were also beautiful with their wealth of bloom, but their free flowering offspring are fast leading them in popularity. Two long rows of the rambler class trained to posts were just coming into flower. They had been badly winter "killed," which by the way was not the case of the hybrid tea class, as while they had been cut down a good deal they were few vacancies, most of them having had strength to send up strong flower-bearing shoots. Mr. Eisele finds the best protection is to draw the soil up about the plant about six inches in height and lay green boughs of hemlock or other such material as a covering for the severe winter weather.

Ants in Greenhouse.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—What is the best way to keep ants out of a greenhouse?

Illinois.

SUBSCRIBER.

I have found a very simple and thorough remedy in Paris green and sugar. Add just enough Paris green to white granulated sugar to turn it to a light green color, then dust it lightly among the pots on and under the benches, and the greenhouse will be rid of ants in a very short time. One should be careful not to put any into the pots or on a bench containing soil, as the Paris green is liable to damage the plants.

As to ants being a benefit in the greenhouse in ridding it of other insects, I prefer to get rid of ants by all means, as they are an eyesore to any one working among them. Paris green will rid the house of sow bugs as well as ants. I also believe that ants are dangerous around a greenhouse. We had a lot of kentias in a greenhouse. On one bench the plants were perfectly clean, while on another bench we noticed that a few of the palms had scale. A lot of ants got into these palms and in a short time every palm in the house was infested with scale. It may be, as Mr. Roman says, that ants may be of some benefit, but it is my opinion that if such is the case they would have cleaned the palms of scale. I really think that instead of cleaning plants of scale, ants carry scale from one plant to another. This being my opinion, I mixed some Paris green and sugar one afternoon and dusted it on and under the benches. The next morning there was not a sign of an ant anywhere, and there has been none since.

A quart of sugar, with a little Paris green mixed through it, is enough for a house 25x100 feet. We also use this for sow bugs, finding it much more easily handled than when mixed with oatmeal, and much more effective. It also does away with a lot of mouldy oatmeal scattered through the greenhouses.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

Ceaseless Care Necessary.

This is a busy time for the chrysanthemum grower. The many little details necessary in caring for his plants keep him on the hustle all the time. The plants growing in the benches for cut flower purposes have now attained a luxuriant growth and are continually pushing out side growths, the surplus of which must be removed as soon as they are large enough to be handled without damaging the main growth. Quite often the beginner in growing chrysanthemums finds himself up against a puzzling problem at this time, when the plants are budding up with the summer bud surrounded by side growths. By the summer bud we mean the center bud which forms at the apex of the plant with a growth shoot on each side. Now if this center bud is left at this time and the side growths removed it will dry up and wither away, and the season's growth of the plant will have been wasted. The center bud should therefore be rubbed out and one of the side growth left to go on to set a bud later on, which will be, generally, August 15 or later.

Notable exceptions to this rule must be made with the varieties Golden Glow and Smith's Advance, which are extra early bloomers. The buds they are forming now are the ones that will produce the early flowers; also when the plants begin to harden up the suckers will stool out at the base of the plant. They should be removed, care being taken not to cut the roots. Close attention should be given to the work of supporting the plants either by stakes or strings, according to the method used, but wherever it can be done without a doubt the best way of supporting the plants is by using cross wires across the bench at the base of the plants and overhead wires with upright strings to fasten the plants to. The early planted stock will by this time have drawn considerable of the nourishment out of the soil and a mulch of well rotted cattle manure should be put on the beds to furnish a fresh supply of food to the plants. The manure should be well rotted but not dried out, and it must not be put on thick enough to exclude the air from the soil.

The better way is for the mulch to be about one-half inch thick, and as this wears out it should be followed with another in about three weeks' time. The principal point to bear in mind in chrysanthemum culture is to make it possible for the plants to make a clean growth right along. A check from any cause is a setback to them which takes time to grow out of. One of the frequent causes of the plants getting a setback is the presence of aphids or insects of any kind. To keep them free it will be necessary to spray continually, whether there are any visible signs of aphids or not. It is wonderful how quickly a plant will become infested if there is any let up in the fighting against insects. Any of the late varieties not yet planted should be got into their permanent quarters without delay. A light airy place where a night temperature of 50-52 degrees can be maintained, if necessary to keep out the dampness while the blooms are developing, is what they require. Keep all beds free from weeds and until ready for mulchings give the surface regular scratchings to permit the sun and air to work into the soil and keep it sweet. C. W. JOHNSON.

When should chrysanthemums be propagated to bloom in November?
Iowa. J. E. B.

It depends greatly on the period of the blooming of the variety under consideration. November 1-15 is the season of blooming for the mid-season varieties and later than the fifteenth the season of the late kinds. These can be propagated during April and May and potted into two and one-half inch pots so as to have thrifty stock for planting in the benches the last of June or early in July. A good plan would be to secure from one of the chrysanthemum specialists advertising in THE AMERICAN FLORIST a selection of November blooming varieties with the best time for propagating them.

Plants and Tobacco Smoke.

Prof. Molisch, the plant physiologist of the University of Prague, has shown in some of his earlier work that large numbers of micro-organisms, plants as well as animals, and the seedlings of higher plants are extremely sensitive to the influence of tobacco smoke, some being even killed thereby. Many smoke are very striking. In his more recent experiments he used older plants of various species, including species of spiderwort, echeveria, eupatorium, selaginella, and others. None of these plants showed any ill effects from the treatment, although exposed for a long time to an atmosphere filled with tobacco smoke. Other plants, however, responded in various striking ways.

Brehmeria utilis and Splitgerbera biloba changed their manner of growth. When placed in a large bell jar and a few puffs of smoke from a cigar or cigarette were blown in, the leaves of these plants, ordinarily growing at right angles to the stem, that is, in a horizontal position, began to turn on their stalks, in the course of from 24 to 48 hours, until they were in a vertical plane. In the case of the Brehmeria they continued their rotations beyond this point, describing a spiral. Similar disturbances were produced upon these two plants by illuminating gas. But other plants used in the experiments showed similar effects of tobacco smoke, but did not respond to the illuminating gas.

Earlier experiments showed that various narcotics provoke abnormal development of the breathing holes on the shoot of the potato. Experiments with tobacco smoke on the potato and on other plants led to the same results, often with the accumulation of masses of liquid under the swollen areas. In some plants of the bean family the tobacco smoke caused the leaves to drop off in a very short of the deleterious effects experienced by plants living in laboratories were formerly attributed to the small quantities of illuminating gas which frequently vitiate the atmosphere of such rooms; but Molisch's experiments left no room for doubt that it is really the tobacco smoke that does the harm. time. The sensitive plant (Mimosa pudica) and the black locust (Robinia pseudacacia) and others lost all or nearly all of their leaves in from 24 to 48 hours after being placed in an atmosphere containing tobacco smoke. To a smaller degree smoke from wood and paper, and illuminating gas produced similar results. The fumes of nicotine had very little influence.—Scientific American.

THE CARNATION.

Preparing For Next Year.

The end of the season, so far as the old stock of carnations is concerned, is very near at hand, for the month of June usually terminates the usefulness of those plants that have been blooming since about last September. The cool spring has doubtless helped to prolong the season with carnations this year and many growers have continued in good crop throughout June, but the demand falls off as the summer exodus from the cities to the country begins. In addition to this the grower needs to get busy in preparation for another season. This means that there is much hot and heavy work to be done, for all wires must be removed, plants pulled out, benches emptied, repaired and the woodwork whitewashed. Next in line is to refill with fresh soil, clean out all rubbish, and finally to replant.

These various operations do not occupy very much space upon paper, but they do occupy a good deal of time and indicate a lot of labor, and it is unfortunately labor that must be done at a period when one may expect to have some of the warmest weather of the season. Soil should be well prepared before it is needed for the benches, so that all possible delay may be avoided, and if the soil be made into a compost heap, it should be turned over once or twice in order that the manure may be thoroughly mixed with it. Many growers prefer the method of preparing the soil in the field by heavy manuring, then plowing and harrowing, followed by ridging up, and if not then sufficiently friable, to again plow down the ridges and give another good harrowing, finally ridging up so that the soil is well aerated and in more convenient form for hauling in.

But the amount of labor to be given to this part of the work of preparation will naturally depend very largely upon the condition of the soil at the start, for a light, open soil will not require the same amount of handling that will be needed to put a clay loam in condition for the benches. As to fertilizers, it may be said that most soils give the best results when liberally treated with good stable manure, though good results may be had from some soils by the proper use of chemical fertilizers. The main difficulty is that of finding out the special needs of a soil, for there is no simple method of determining the constituent parts of a soil in order to supply the necessary plant food to it, and growers generally do not find time to become agricultural chemists. This means that experimentation carried on for a number of years, is usually required to find out the best way of feeding a given soil, and unless this be carried out carefully by a check method, one does not feel very sure about the results attained.

The plants in the field should now be making rapid progress, and frequent and clean cultivation should be the order of the day. Keeping the weeds down all the time and the surface of the soil open, but avoiding deep culture on account of the possible disturbance of the roots, some of which are quite near to the surface, is necessary. Another thing to be avoided is the banking of the soil around the plants in the field, for in a damp season especially such a condition increases the liability to attacks of stem rot, that much dreaded fungoid malady that causes the loss of thousands of promising plants each season, both outdoors and in the houses. Topping the young stock in the field will occupy some time each week and is one

The crushed limestone can be used in the proportion of one wheelbarrow to one wagon load of soil, though a little more or less according to the soil's texture, will not do any harm. Limestone can also be used to advantage with a soil that has a tendency to sour quickly. It will keep it open, allowing the air to sweeten it. The soil that we have to deal with is the black prairie soil, common to this section of the country, and it is of such of the regular cultural operations that must not be neglected if one looks for well-branched and sturdy stock at the time of planting-in. W. H. TAPLIN.

Early Planting.

The time for early planting is at hand, but before proceeding with the work of transferring the plants from the field to the inside be sure that every requirement of the plants out in the field has been looked after. Do not allow for any neglect in pinching back the shoots, but keep up the work right along so that a well clothed, stocky plant will be available for planting in; also do not let up with the cultivator, but keep it continually on the go, even if it is figured that the plants will be planted inside during the next ten days. Before bringing in the plants all the necessary preparations of getting the houses ready should be attended to. This being done, we are then ready for the soil. Our next problem is the selection of the most suitable compost at our disposal. This is a matter that should be given close consideration, as so much of the success of the plants depends on the nature of the soil, and by giving it some thought and attention now before bringing into the houses we may improve greatly upon it. If you have a stiff, heavy soil it can be lightened up by mixing some crushed limestone, or screenings, as it is sometimes called, through it and by adding about one-third of well-rotted horse manure.

nature that if the utmost judgment is not used in watering when plants are planted it will sour before the roots can take hold. It is also light in texture and to make it stiffer we add about one-fifth clay, together with the limestone and horse manure, and we find that this improves it greatly. Before putting in the soil we spread a thin layer of well rotted horse manure over the bottom of the benches, which keeps the soil from running through the cracks and will give nourishment to the plants later on.

This manure has been stacked up for more than a year, so there is no straw or other coarse material in it, and it has now more the appearance of soil than manure. Some growers are not in favor of using manure at the bottom of the benches, but we have gained good results through its use. We find that it is not necessary to feed the plants as heavy during the winter when they have this fertilizer at the bottom to work on, but we would not advise using a green manure or anything that is infested with worms. Carnations do the best when the soil is inclined to be a little fine rather than coarse. Consequently it is better to break up any lumps that the soil contains before bringing it in. After putting it on the benches level the surface as even as possible, firming down a little, but it is not necessary to do any treading down. If after the plants have been planted a little while it is found that the soil is at all spongy it can be firmed down a little more. Planting in at this early date requires that a good mud shade be put on the glass to remain for about a week or ten days until the roots get hold of the new soil. When mapping out the planting it is advisable to select plants of an even size for benches by themselves. The larger ones can then be given a little more space than the smaller ones. The plants should not be planted in the fresh soil any deeper than they have been growing in the field; also do not dig at one time more than the planters can properly take care of. After planting, water only at the plants until the roots get hold of the soil and give frequent light sprayings during the day to keep them from wilting.

C. W. JOHNSON.

Stocks.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

Can you tell me which varieties of flowering stocks grow and continue to bloom for some time and which ones have but one cluster of blossoms at the top of plant? I would also like to know about their culture for winter as well as summer. F. A. Illinois.

The Cut-and-Come-Again and the varieties of the Beauty of Nice type are the most continuous bloomers (from the cut flower grower's standpoint) of the stock family. Many of the large flower varieties are very fine as individual spikes of bloom, but they are not very free. Most of the reliable seedsmen have selections of the various types of stocks that have been selected especially for their cut-flower qualities and they can be depended on to furnish you with varieties suitable to your requirements. Snowflake is a good white, Beauty of Nice, a delicate flesh pink and Empress Elizabeth a fine rose colored variety. For winter culture, sow now two and three seeds in a 3-inch pot, thinning them out to one as soon as they are big enough, selecting a healthy one to leave for your plant. It does not follow that it should be the largest of the three, however, because generally the ones to get away from the seed the quickest and strongest are the varieties with single flowers. The plant should be kept free of weeds and are best off at this season outside in frames under raised sash.

In a very short while they will be large enough to select those with double flowers from the single. The double varieties are heavier in foliage and do not start to throw up the flower spike as quickly as the singles. They are also of more stocky growth. These plants can be flowered in pots by shifting them along until you get them into the 8-inch size, which should be the final shift. There is an advantage of growing them this way over the bench method by having them handy to move around to fill up vacant spaces in the cool houses, but if it is the intention to grow them in quantity, then I would advise growing them in benches. They require an open, moderately rich soil, such as is used for mignonette. In fact stocks and mignonette can be grown in the same house to advantage, both of them being suited to the same conditions and temperature, which should be about 46 to 48 degrees at night.

Seeds sown now and potted along will be ready for planting in the benches early in September. They will begin to flower late in the winter and run along into early Spring. A sowing for Spring flowering can be started in September and another for Memorial Day about November. They should be grown cool at all times and never allowed to suffer for water; also do not let them become hard and root-bound while in pots, it being a difficult matter to get them to take hold of the soil after being planted in the beds when they are suffering from these troubles. It is very important to keep the soil in the beds open and sweet by frequent scratchings of the surface, also the plants are greatly benefited by two or three dressings of pulverized sheep manure during the growing season. C. W. JOHNSON.

THE ROSE.

Staking and Disbudding.

At this time the plants to be carried over for early blooming should be getting a new start, and the young stock taking hold. The exceedingly hot wave, which seems to have been universal, had a checking effect on all plants unless especial precautions were taken. During the hot weather it is very essential to syringe the first thing in the morning and again at noon or near the middle of the day, the temperature can usually be reduced from 10 to 15 degrees by this operation. The water should be sprayed around over head, and on the side walls and the walls dampened. Do not let the soil become dry on the surface, where the depressions were left around the base American Beauties, for which a longer stake (6 feet long or longer) is preferred the heavy grade or gauge is better. When staking the plants the wire holders at the ends of the beds should be neatly constructed. Some growers use a wooden framework for some reason. Get a frame made of 1 inch pipe. It is so much neater and more durable that there is really no excuse for putting up a clumsy wooden framework. Stretch the running wires about a foot from the tops of the stakes so as to be able to work freely under the wires and draw them very tight. Number 18 or number 20 galvanized is the size generally used, the latter in long houses of 200 or more feet in length. Of course, where the beds are several hundred feet in length, the braces or wire supports should be placed about 50 feet apart. A little care when placing the stakes will result in a more uniform job, and by placing the stakes about two inches to one side of the plants and on a line with them in the row the stakes will line up nicely. Be sure to keep all the stakes on the same side of each plant.

If one has never tried double staking American Beauties one should do so. That is, use two stakes to the plant, 8 or 10 inches apart, one on either side. This gives one the opportunity to tie the plant firmly and at the same time openly, and will often prevent a dose of "black spot" as the American Beauty must have arid surroundings and open tying for best results. Do not be in too great a hurry to pull the weeds. When they are too small half of the plants, when it was packed. This leaves the greater part of the soil higher and somewhat loose and causes it to dry rapidly. It isn't necessary to soak this part of the bed but it must be kept moist, at least until the beds are leveled off. A good plan is to stake up every thing permanently, for all around work. The five foot stakes (made of wire) are the best, using the smaller gauge for everything except or more than half are broken off, but by letting them grow to a height of about four inches they can all be taken or pulled by the roots and very few will follow a thorough weeding. After three weeks the beds should be leveled off nicely and from then on cultivated once a week. Do not let them go longer as the cultivating of any crop, indoors or out, cannot be done too frequently.

The disbudding from now on will require almost daily attention. Don't be satisfied with first snapping off the buds but look every plant over carefully and pinch back to a good firm eye even if there are only two left on the stem. There will be more the next time. It is a question whether to pinch soft growth or wait till the buds show color. I would suggest waiting until the buds show color before disbudding. There usually isn't any difference noticeable in the results and for a beginner the soft growth-pinch will be less satisfactory. At the same time a good way would be to try both plans and to watch results. At any rate let the buds be well set and showing color on the American Beauty. How are the summer houses coming along—those filled with such as Kaiserin, Carnot, and other novelties kept dormant during the winter and used for summer blooms alone? They should require light mulches frequently and liquid manure every week to keep up the size of the blooms. They should also be tied and disbudded as carefully as the stock handled in the winter. Syringe before sunrise several times for shipment. This will also put a check on red spider. Keep the carried over stocks disbudded until they begin to grow good strong stems and air carefully on windy days. E.

New Roses at Bagatelle.—Arthur W. Paul, who, as for some years past, has this year been one of the judges of the new roses grown at Bagatelle, gives the following particulars of the awards made by the judges at the recent meeting. "The beautiful rosery in the gardens of Bagatelle, now included in the Bois de Boulogne, at Paris, was at the height of its beauty on the morning of June 13, when the annual judging of the new roses sent for trial took place under the direction of the authorities of the City of Paris. The judges consisted of well-known French and foreign rosarians, both amateur and professional, and some 85 new varieties of roses sent in 1911 were examined with a view to be awarded gold medals and certificates. As the result of a rule prohibiting the same raiser from receiving a gold medal more than two years in succession, the varieties of M. Pernet-Ducher were not eligible for this distinction, but a special diploma of honor was awarded to his new H. T. Sunburst, and the red H. T. President Vignet, of the same raiser, was in fine condition. None of the other varieties were considered to be of sufficiently outstanding merit at the time of the judging to receive a medal, but three certificates of Bagatelle were awarded, viz., to Madame Jules Bouche, a flesh-white H. T.; Fru Margretha Moller, a fine rose-colored H. T. of Danish origin; and to Orleans-Rose, a rose-colored polyantha that has been frequently finely exhibited in this country. Some other kinds that followed closely in the number of points awarded were Mrs. Edward Powell, a fine red H. T.; Erna Teschendorff, a brilliant dark-red polyantha; Ethel Malcolm (H. T.); Mrs. Herbert Stevens (Tea); Ellen Poulsen, a soft pink polyantha; and Rodhatte, a crimson hybrid polyantha. Of the varieties of 1912, provisionally examined, with a view to granting awards next year, the following appeared the most promising: Madame Faucher, a light-colored H. T.; Yvonne Lornago, an orange-red hybrid of Tea and Noisette; Madame C. Chambard, a pale pink H. T.; Madame Charles Lutaud, a deep yellow H. T.; Madame Edmond Rostand, H. T., flesh color, with orange center; Melody, a fine yellow H. T.; Merveille des Rouges, crimson polyantha; Mrs. Amy Hammond (H. T.), and Mrs. Joseph Welch (H. T.)."

Halesia Corymbosa.—Some difference of opinion exists as to the correct name of this shrub or small tree, for it is sometimes named as above and in other places Siebold and Zuccarini are followed, and the name of Pterostyrax corymbosum is adopted. A glance at the flowers is quite sufficient to reveal how it differs from the commoner Halesia tetraptera, the well-known Silverbell or Snowdrop-tree of our gardens, for in the latter whole months. All are perfectly hardy, content with sound loam and grateful for an admixture of peat or leaf-mould. They are the very elite of their genus.

Spirea Decumbens as a Wall Plant.—Spirea decumbens is a recognized favorite in the rock garden, where its pretty foliage and clusters of white flowers are always welcome in their season. It is considerably less known as a wall plant, but it may be grown with the greatest success on a wall with a considerable body of soil behind. At Monreith there is a capital plant under such conditions in the case we are accustomed to seeing white bell-shaped flowers terminating short, slender stalks, whereas in H. corymbosa the cream-colored blossoms appear many together in large panicles. Moreover, the individual flowers are smaller and more loosely arranged. By reason of the leaves alone the plant is noticeable, for the larger ones are each 6 inches to 7 inches long, and 3 inches to 4 inches wide. H. corymbosa is a native of Japan, and thrives quite well either as a wall or border plant. Under suitable conditions it may be expected to grow from 15 feet to 20 feet high with a spread of similar dimensions, therefore plenty of room must be allowed for development when a position is first selected. A fair amount of sun is essential to success, for if a good display of flowers is to be procured it is necessary for the wood of the previous year to become thoroughly ripened. Although not a new introduction, the plant is seldom met with as a large example.

Species of Spirea.—The shrubby Spireas may be arranged to sustain a charming display over a long period. There is a type which prevails in several species, all of which bear long arching sprays closely set with rosettes of snowy flowers. Of these, S. arguta began flowering on April 4, and was followed by Spirea Van Houttei on May 15. Scarcely had that species begun to fade before S. bracteata stepped in to continue the display, which by June 10 was at its height; and S. flagelliformis was ready to take up the running in another week or so. If these four species flowered simultaneously it might not be worth while growing more than one of them. The advantage of having all of them is that the effect is prolonged for three wall garden, and it was very pleasing indeed there. The difficulty with this and many other plants suitable for a wall is that of establishing it, and for the purpose young plants are best. If the wall is properly constructed, a stone may be taken out and the Spirea put in with the ball of soil attached, and then a stone well jammed in about it, but so placed that any water which may fall on the wall will run towards the roots.

Clarkia Elegans Nine Feet High.—I should be interested to learn if any of your readers have known Clarkia elegans to grow so strongly as mine have this year. Seeds were sown in September, and the seedlings were grown in cool conditions during the winter and potted on as required. At the present time the plants are in 12-inch pots and in flower. Some of the shoots are nine feet high, and at four feet six inches the growths are one and one-quarter inches in circumference. The plants are carrying hundreds of flowers, which are fully two inches across. This Clarkia is not only useful for conservatory decoration, but also for furnishing cut blooms. The flowers remain fresh a long time in water.—J. H. Herdman, Under Fell Gardens, Burton, Westmorland.

Double Flowered Lilacs.—Complaints are sometimes made that these do not flower with the same freedom as the single-flowered kinds, and in the case of small specimens this frequently holds good. When large this same feature cannot be urged against them, as they then bloom profusely. I have had under my observation a veritable tree of the white-flowered variety Madame Lemoine, which has been a mass of flowers and admired by everyone.

Shipping a Large Kroeschell Boiler

Kroeschell Bros. Co., the well known greenhouse boiler manufacturers of Chicago, is enjoying a very busy season and is shipping a large number of hot water boilers to all parts of the country. The accompanying illustration shows the firm shipping one of their No. 18 Jumbo boilers, the largest hot water boiler that it manufactures. The No. 18 boiler will heat 106,800 square feet of glass for carnations at zero and will carry 61,410 lineal feet of one and one-quarter inch pipe, or nearly 11 miles of one and one-quarter inch pipe in addition to the mains. The weight of this giant is 30,000 pounds and the dimensions are: length, 20 feet, 6 inches; width, 84 inches; height, 66 inches. It has five 8-inch flows and six 8-inch returns and is to be installed for the new vegetable range of Theodore Uffmann & Sons at Rossford, O., near Toledo. A large central hot water heating station is being installed for this plant and the power plant will include the following: One No. 18 Kroeschell and one No. 14 Kroeschell hot water boiler; one steam boiler; three circulating pumps and two feed water heaters. The entire heating system is to be set on the same level as the greenhouse walks, doing away entirely with the boiler pits, and the greenhouses are to be heated with 1 1/4-inch pipe for flows and returns, all piping to be six feet above the ground.

Preventing Frosting by Electricity.

Herman L. Darling of Delta, Colo., in a patent, No. 1,027,403, presents a system of saving buds and blossoms from frost in which a vibratory motion electricity motor is connected to fruit trees and supplied with power so that the vibratory motion generated by the motor will be imparted to the tree.—Scientific American.

OBITUARY.

Adolph Le Moul.

Heartbroken by the death of his wife, two months ago, Adolph Le Moul, beloved florist of the Bowery, New York City, ended his life at his home, 240 Echo place, July 22. Mr. Le Moul was 65 years old and was the owner of three New York florist shops. He had been engaged in dispensing flowers to the public during his entire business career of fifty years and was known and loved by thousands of the public as well as many of the trade. Mr. Le Moul started a floral establishment under Wallack's old theater when Lester Wallack was at the height of his glory and he furnished the actor with his boutonnières. Many others of the stage were his patrons also. A floral Stars and Stripes for the bier of General McClellan was among his masterpieces, though he himself considered the bouquets for the ball given Grand Duke Alexis in 1871 and which contained a facsimile of the Russian crown his finest achievement. His floral decorations at the funeral of Horace Greely were also notable. Much of Mr. Le Moul's later life was spent in his Bowery shop, where he was noted quite as much for his kindly advice and sympathy as for his flowers. The funeral was held July 24.

August Dresel.

August Dresel, of the Crown Point Floral Co., Crown Point, Ind., died at his home in that city July 17. Mr. Dresel was one of the pioneer florists of Chicago. He was born at Holstein, Germany, October 9, 1838, and came to this country in 1864, locating at Lafayette, Ind., where he worked on a farm, moving to Chicago in 1866, where he purchased the Lewis greenhouses on Racine avenue in 1867. He bought a larger greenhouse establishment at 2137 Clybourn avenue in 1868 and disposed of that on Racine avenue. Twenty-five years ago he was interested in the Northwestern Brick Co. for a few years and about the same period bought a block of 20 greenhouses on Belmont and Western avenues. In 1901, because of financial reverses, he assigned his interests in Chicago and moved to Crown Point, starting the present business, which later became a partnership, taking in Henry Wendel. His first greenhouse experience was obtained in Copenhagen, Denmark, before coming to this country. The funeral was held at the residence in Crown Point July 19, with interment at the German Lutheran cemetery, and the floral offerings from Chicago and other friends were quite numerous. J. C. Vaughan and S. J. Pearce represented the Chicago trade.

Mr. Dresel married Miss Mary Kyersgaard at Chicago in 1866 and five children, two daughters and three sons, survive: Mrs. Samuel J. Pearce, 2137 Clybourn avenue, Chicago; Mrs. Sophia Zapel, Chicago; August Dresel, Jr., Chicago; Henry Dresel, New Orleans, La.; Louis Dresel, Pontiac, Mich.

Mr. Wendel will continue the Crown Point business.

Mrs. Barbara Rieman.

Mrs. Barbara J. Rieman, widow of Charles Rieman, a pioneer florist of Indianapolis, Ind., died at the home of her daughter, July 17, at the age of 64. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Rieman continued in the florist business for many years and was well known and liked among Indiana florists. Mrs. Rieman is survived by four children, Mrs. Glezendammer, of Indianapolis; Henry H. Rieman, of St. Louis, Mo.; Otto Rieman, of Mooresville, Ind., and John Rieman, the well-known Indianapolis florist.

Convention Sports.

The prize list for the approaching sporting events to be held in connection with the convention of the Society of American Florists at Chicago next August is now in preparation. Anyone who desires to donate a prize will greatly oblige by sending full particulars as early as possible. It is the desire of those in charge of this department of convention work to make it the biggest and best bowling, shooting and outing occasion ever held in connection with the annual meeting of the national organization. All communications bearing on the convention sports and prizes, therefore, should be addressed to C. J. Graham, 12349 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, O.

The donors should send particulars of their prizes early so as to afford those in charge an opportunity of giving them full publicity.

Smith Monument Proposed.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

I noticed in the last week issues of the trade papers a suggestion from Harry Papworth of New Orleans that it would be a fitting tribute to the late Wm. R. Smith to have a suitable monument erected to his memory at the national capital, and I want to say I believe the Society of American Florists and kindred organizations and individuals could do no greater honor to themselves than by honoring Wm. R. Smith with such a memorial. A more liberal, broader, self-sacrificing horticulturist never lived than that truly grand old man. The thought occurs to me at this time, that for many years previous to Mr. Smith's death, it was his ambition and desire to live long enough to see a permanent home established in Washington for the Society of American Florists. He also desired very much that a horticultural library should be established in this home from which florists from all over the United States and Canada could draw on for information, bulletins, etc. I really cannot think of anything that would do the society and the trade in general so much good as a fitting memorial home named in his honor. Personally I am willing to give time and money toward this worthy cause. I hope this matter will be taken up at the forthcoming convention in Chicago that we may hear different views expressed on this subject.

NEW CARNATIONS REGISTERED.

By Richard Diener & Co., Mountain View, Calif.—California Giant, Prosperity x Enchantress White with lemon tint in center; occasional faint markings of red, as in Prosperity. Size, 5 to 6 inches. Upright, vigorous habit. Stiff stem 3 feet in length. Produces 15 blooms per plant. Strong clove scent. Papaver shaped calyx.

By Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass.—Gorgeous, parentage not given. Persian red. Size, 4 inches and over. Plant extremely robust and healthy. Exceptionally long stems and stiff. Guard petals of bloom broad and well arranged; center high and not too full. Free for a strictly fancy sort.

By Thos. F. Brown, Greenfield, Mich.—Magnificence, Winona x Beacon. True pink. Size, 3½ inches. Habit extra good. Early and productive. Calyx does not split. Good stem and well-formed flower.

By Cottage Gardens Co., Queens, N. Y.—Matchless, White Perfection x Alma Ward. Color, pure white. Size, 3½ to 4 inches. Vigorous habit with long wiry stem. Very prolific. Flowers possess extraordinary substance.

By R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, O.—Pres. J. A. Valentine, Aristocrat x Enchantress. Bright shell pink. Size, 3½ inches. Strong habit, with heavy, leathery foliage. Stems strong and stiff, curving slightly. Moderately free.

By Traendly & Schenck, New York, N. Y.—Salmon Beauty, salmon colored sport from Enchantress. Stronger and more vigorous than the original Enchantress.

By the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind.—The Commodore, Victory x Seedling. Color, velvety deep scarlet. Just over 3 inches. Bluish grass of medium size. Healthy and very free in growth. Free in flower. Stiff stem throughout the season. Never splits.

By Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, Ill.—The Herald, Seeding cross. Color, scarlet. Size, 3 to 3½ inches. Robust upright growth, with very stiff stems. Free bloomer and good habit.

By Scott Bros., Elmsford, N. Y.—Wm. Eccles, Beacon x Victory. Scarlet. Size, 3½ inches. Partakes of Victory in habit. Stems, 2½ to 3 feet, and hold flower rigid. Non-bursting calyx. Sweet perfume.

SOCIETY DIRECTORS TO MEET.

There will be a meeting of the board of directors of the American Carnation Society at Chicago at 9:30 o'clock Thursday, August 22. Members who are in attendance at the convention are invited to meet with the board. The schedule of premiums for carnations at the National Flower Show in April, 1913, will be made up at this meeting. Anyone wishing to offer a special premium for carnations at this show will kindly advise the undersigned. The following specials have already been pledged:

By Kroeschell Bros. Co., Chicago—Gold medal, value $25, for largest 12 carnation blooms.

By S. M. Merwarth & Bro., Easton, Pa.—$50 in 3 prizes, for 100 blooms of carnation "Comfort."

By Thos. W. Lawson, Boston, Mass.—Silver cup, value $50, class not yet named.

By Hitchings & Co., New York, N. Y.—The Hitchings Cup, valued at $30, sweepstakes in section A.

A. F. J. BAUR, Secy.

MIDSUMMER TRADE SATISFACTORY.

The midsummer trade so far has been very satisfactory. Everything sells and at times there is quite a scarcity of cut flowers, especially during a time when there is a funeral rush like last Monday. Several deaths of notable people occurred on the same day and some retailers had to scrape the last flowers to fill orders. The replanting of roses is about done and the last chrysanthemums are benched. The earlier are making a rapid growth. Carnations in the field are not looking well. The extreme heat, which lasted for ten days continuously, proved to be too much for them. They appear to be dry and hard and it will take some time to move them again.

NOTES.

The annual picnic of the Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club was held July 17 at Maple Grove. The attendance was not very large, but was large enough to make the outing most enjoyable. Some of the prize-winners in the games were: Ladies' race—Mrs. Miles, Mrs. Luck, Mrs. Hazel. Ladies over 40—Mrs. Horabin, Mrs. Whiting, Mrs. Piddinck. Members' race—E. J. Hayward, H. Idisningh, T. McDonald. Members past 40—T. Arnold, G. A. Robinson, J. Luck. The tug-of-war resulted in a victory for the team captained by A. C. Wilshire. The bean guess was won by Mrs. Griffin and A. Britton.

The Montreal florists are making elaborate preparations for the coming convention, Aug. 6-9. A record-breaking attendance is expected and all will be assured of a hearty welcome. The space for the trade exhibit is being rapidly taken up. The ladies' committee is at work preparing to receive and entertain the lady delegates, and every delegate will be made welcome.

MARKET BETTER.

The market was very quiet the first part of last week, but took a turn for the better on Thursday when business picked up and trade was a little better. On Saturday there was very little good stock obtainable, but this was not due altogether to the increased demand but to the general shortening up of stock. Carnations on that day were practically off the market and what few asters there were in sold well and gladioli also moved freely. Roses had the call and many orders were filled with very tight stock, and American Beauties were pretty well sold up. Both the local and shipping trade were good and continued so until Monday when trade began to slacken up again. Peonies are still on the market, sweet peas are arriving in fair condition and asters are now much more plentiful. Some exceptionally fine Mrs. Francis King, Augusta and America gladioli are obtainable as well as many new varieties. The receipts of outdoor flowers are considerably smaller and orchids continue to hold up well in price. Lilies of very good quality are plentiful and the shipments of the new crops of roses are considerably larger. Lily of the valley is plentiful but the quality is not up to the standard, although a little choice stock is obtainable. Roses are of good quality and newer varieties, Prince De Bulgarie, Melody, Radiance, Lady Hillingdon and Mrs. Aaron Ward are having a good call. Killarney, White Killarney, Kaiserin, Augusta Victoria and My Maryland are in fine shape and American Beauties are also pretty good. Smilax and adiantum and ferns are much better and galax is also a little above the average. Good white roses were reported to be scarce during the week.

NOTES.

A. L. Vaughan and family have returned from a most enjoyable outing at Fremont, Mich., and the popular wholesaler arrived just in time to help his store force out with the brisk shipping trade on July 22. L. R. Bohannon and family are also at the Michigan resort and are having a royal good time. Mr. Vaughan says that the fishing in the White river district was fine and that he succeeded in landing a couple of fine brook trout and black bass.

The Cook County Florists' Association held a meeting at the Tavern, West Washington street, last Thursday, July 18, with all officers present. Several new members were elected and 10 new names were proposed for membership. A report of the picnic, held at Karthausers Grove July 14 was read and the outing proved to be a great success, as the club was $50 to the good after all expenses had been paid.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will have a booth at the coming S. A. F. convention and all the members and their friends are cordially invited to make it their headquarters while they are in the city. C. L. Washburn jokingly says that A. C. Brown of Springfield and C. E. Gullett of Lincoln have volunteered to act as escorts to any of the young ladies who are in attendance.

Harry Garland is having a delightful time on his western trip and writes from Portland, Ore., that business is good and he is enjoying fine health. Mr. Garland expects to return home very shortly and will be ready to meet all his friends at the coming S. A. F. convention.

The A. L. Randall Co. is giving its store a thorough overhauling and the painters have been busy at work for over a week. Another large ice box will be installed and Frank Johnson and his able assistants will be on hand with a large exhibit at the coming S. A. F. convention.

Hoerber Bros. are cutting some fine America, Mrs. Francis King and Augusta gladioli and are just starting to cut their first asters. F. C. Hoerber says that business is very good and that trade was very lively on Saturday, July 20.

Peter Weiler is busy getting the Superior Machine & Boiler Works' exhibit ready for the S. A. F. convention and thinks this is a splendid opportunity to show the trade what a fine boiler his firm really manufactures.

H. E. Dresel, with the Metairie Ridge Nurseries, New Orleans, La., attended his father's funeral at Crown Point, Ind., and spent a few days in this city this week.

Kyle and Foerster are receiving a good assortment of seasonable stock and showing a good grade of young American Beauty roses.

Percy Jones' store is being repainted and Wm. Abrahamson of the supply department is proving to be quite an artist with the brush.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. is making preparations to ship a carload of hot-water boilers to the Julius Roehrs Co., Ruthersford, N. J.

Chaz. W. McKellar is busy with the paint brush and is now putting on the finishing touches to his new store.

Baseball practice, July 25, at 5 p. m. sharp. Be on deck if you would like to play on the convention team.

A. Lazaroff, Peter Reinberg's shipping clerk, is away on his vacation.

E. E. Pleser, the Peony King, visited his farm at Villa Ridge this week.

Fred Wittbold's son Teddy is on the sick list this week.

John P. Degnan, with Winterson's Seed Store, is enjoying his vacation and Adolph Benesh is again back on the job in the supply department. Edgar Winterson is devoting his time to making some new counters and all his friends are ready to admit that he sure is some carpenter.

Phil. Schupp says that J. A. Budlong has just finished the planting of 120,000 carnation plants and has a nice lot of stock left over. His firm is cutting some very fancy lily of the valley for this time of the year and the quality is nearly equal to that of winter grown stock.

F. F. Scheel is making good use of his auto and is giving several of the young ladies in the market instructions on how to run a machine. One charming young stenographer in particular says that she regrets the fact that the instructions are not to be permanent ones.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is receiving an exceptionally fine grade of Mrs. Francis King, Augusta and America gladioli. Those of the latter variety are some of the finest of the season. A. T. Pyfer is very busy keeping the firm's books during Miss Parker's absence.

A. C. Kohlbrand, with the E. C. Ameling Co., left July 20 for Torch Lake, Mich., and intermediate lakes where the trout fishing is fine. He also expects to spend a few days at Goshen, Ind., with his family who are visiting with friends and relatives.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is offering a fine grade of stock of all kinds with gladioli showing up exceptionally good. Florence Schriver is the latest addition to the office force and is now filling the stenographer's position.

W. F. Duntemann of Bensenville says that his violet plants are in much better condition now than they were last year and thinks there must be a shortage of plants in some sections, for the demand is unusually heavy.

Vaughan's usual early importations of French bulbs are due in New York this week. This firm filled their orders this week for Liliun Harrisii bulbs and moved another carload of sphagnum moss.

Tim Matchen says that both the local and shipping trade were very good at Peter Reinberg's store July 20, and that the young stock is now arriving in much larger quantities.

Wietor Bros. are having a good call for plants of all kinds and are about all sold out of chrysanthemums. Chas. Dressler, foreman of the shipping department, is away on his vacation.

Harry Hunt, of Hunt Bros., of Park Ridge and Evanston, will open a new retail store in the near future on North Clark and Roscoe streets, near the Northwestern elevated station.

Wm. Wolf has returned from a most enjoyable visit to Indianapolis and other Indiana towns and is again attending to his duties at the A. Lange store.

Clifford Pruner, E. H. Hunt's traveling man, is back from an out-of-town trip and is preparing to meet all comers at the S. A. F. convention.

S. A. Sinclair of Holyoke, Mass., was in the city this week to place his son to work at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s greenhouse at Morton Grove.

Miss Harper, formerly with E. H. Hunt, is now assisting Miss Horton with the office work at Bassett & Washburn's store.

The John C. Moninger Co. is painting its many buildings and otherwise getting the place in tip-top shape for the convention.

Frank Oechslein's place is in fine shape and will be one of the objects of interest to visitors to S. A. F. convention.

Erne & Klingel are featuring a fine grade of adiantum and smilax this week and are still well supplied with peonies.

T. W. Campbell, of the Campbell Floral Co., Alberta, Canada, was a welcome visitor here this week.

Theo. Vogel ("Teddy"), with the Alpha Floral Co., left July 22 for a visit at Torch Lake, Mich.

Allie Zech and wife left July 21 for a visit to the northern resorts of Wisconsin and Michigan.

George Crabb, of Crabb & Hunter, Grand Rapids, Mich., was in the city this week on business.

Clarence Ellworth and Bill Shaw will leave soon for a week's outing at Bloomingdale, Mich.

Henry Kruchten is in charge of the John Kruchten store during his brother's absence.

A. E. Crooks, of Benton Harbor, Mich., was a visitor to this market July 23.

Harry Blewitt and Wm. Timme spent Sunday, July 21, at Crystal Lake.

Miss Amy Schultz, J. A. Budlong's bookkeeper, is visiting friends in Colorado.

J. Pffer, Weiland & Risch's efficient bookkeeper, is enjoying a well-earned rest.

Miss Martha Gunterberg is spending her vacation with friends in Wisconsin.

Curtis Kindler, of the Raedlein Basket Co., is "vacationing" at Fox Lake.

Secretary John Young of the Society of American Florists arrived July 21 and is busy with convention preparations. His address is care of the Auditorium hotel.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is filling a large number of orders for fancy asters and the proprietor jokingly says the quality is much better than those that he received last fall.

A special meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant, West Randolph street, Thursday, July 25, at 8 p. m.

Visitors: Mrs. W. H. Ford, Marshalltown, Ia.; A. E. Crooks, Benton Harbor, Mich.; G. L. Freeman, Wellfleet, Mass.

BUSINESS NEITHER BAD NOR GOOD.

Business can't exactly be called good and is not exactly bad. Last week the receipts were practically at the minimum and consequently clearances were regular. This week, however, reports, and first shipments show that there will be quite an increase in the cut. Fair prices ruled as a whole last week, though aggregate receipts were scarcely fair. The business on Monday of this week was good, but Monday, we must remember, is a general replenishing day, and it remains to see what will happen the balance of the week. With larger cuts it will take a greater call to take up everything. Gladioli and roses are in the best supply both in respect to quantity and quality. Both have been finding a fair market. Some very choice hardy hydrangeas are among this week's offerings. Asters are coming stronger and will in a very short time be a most important factor. Choice pond lilies have been finding a fairly good market. The sale for the fine giganteums and aratum lilies is only fair. American Beauties sell well.

FLORISTS' PICNIC.

The florists of this city held their annual outing at Coney Thursday, July 18. The attendance was large and considerable enthusiasm was shown. The bowling attracted most of the people. The prizes for high score in single game were: Jos. Beran, first; Ed. Witterstaetter, second; C. E. Critchell, Chas. Witterstaetter and Chas. Murphy tied for third. In the boys' ball game the team captained by Ben George, Jr., was the winner. In the men's ball game, some difficulty was experienced in getting together two teams. The growers' team, captained by Ed. Schuman, was the victor. The first prize for the ladies' bowling contest—a fine handbag made by Mrs. A. C. Wechman, Jr.—was won by Mrs. R. Murphy. Mrs. Grandin was second and Mrs. Sunderman third.

NOTES.

Preparations are being made by local florists to attend the Chicago convention of the S. A. F. C. E. Critchell, A. C. Heckman, Jr., and E. G. Gillett are arranging for parties for the trip. Mr. Gillett has the diagram for a sleeper on the C., H. & D. to leave at 11:35 on the night of August 19. The berths will be ready at 9 p. m. Messrs. Critchell and Heckman are arranging for a daylight trip. They have two parlor cars and will leave about noon of the same day. Anyone desiring to join either of the parties should write or advise the gentleman at the head of the party he desires to join.

C. E. Critchell is again receiving those excellent gladioli from P. A. Coblenz of New Madison, O. Mr. Coblenz's gladioli in other years have always been of supreme quality and the first shipments of this year promise that the same high quality will be kept up.

Complaining of the heat seems to be the rule everywhere lately, but while we have had it 95 degrees above zero here the humidity has made it more comfortable than many places where the thermometer does not register such a high mark. Although the sun gets pretty hot for a while in the afternoon it doesn't burn things up but instead makes them grow. For instance, castor beans sown in the garden in April and allowed to grow where they were sown were 5 feet high with stems over 6 inches in circumference and showing flower buds by the middle of July. They will make trees 10 feet high before this season is finished.

The Stiles Co. is cutting a magnificent grade of gladioli. Among them are all of the new varieties and they certainly grow to perfection in this rich soil. The length of the spikes, numbers and size of the plants and the branching habits developed in many of the stems gives one the impression that conditions here are peculiarly adaptable for this popular flower.

F. Barteldes, head of Barteldes Seed Co., has been spending a few days here, leaving for his home at Lawrence, Kan., July 13. While here he was interviewed by the daily press and expressed himself as much pleased with the steady growth of his business in this city and stated that further enlargement of the company's buildings and land was contemplated.

Lon Foster, of the flower department at Barteldes', left Sunday for a month's vacation, going to Earlville, Tenn.

STATE ASSOCIATION'S PICNIC.

Most of the florists in the twin cities attended the Minnesota State Florists' Association's picnic, held last week at Spring Park, Lake Minnetonka. Lunch was partaken of from baskets after the contests, and all were anxiously awaiting the baseball game between the florists of the two cities. The game was a landslide for Minneapolis, the score being 17 to 1. The Minneapolis pitcher was invincible, and that accounts for the score. Dancing was indulged in through the evening, and the prize waltz was won by Mr. and Mrs. Lunsden, first; Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Rice, second. Those from out of the city in attendance were Phil Foley of Chicago and A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., Chicago.

The results of the other contests were as follows:

Children's race, for small children only, prizes donated by Phil Foley of Chicago—Ethel Stern, first; Genevieve Christy, second; Dick Christy, third.

Children's race (under 10 years)—Robert Sterns, first; Elsie Puvogel, second; Rudolph Rudlinger, third.

Boys' race (under 15 years)—Phil Olson, first; Robert Sterns, second; John Busch, third.

Girls' race (under 15 years)—Laura Larson, first; Beatrice Munson, second; Elsie Puvogel, third.

Ladies' race—Helen Swanson, first; Ruth Peterson, second; Katherine Hagerty, third.

Men's race—H. Puvogel, first; S. Stefferson, second; John Rovick, third.

Ladies' and gentlemen's whirl and run race—Helen Swanson and S. Stefferson, first; Miss Warden and E. P. Lempe, second; Lillian Bussjaeger and H. Puvogel, third; Ruth Peterson and Max Hoesick, fourth.

DEMAND EQUALS SUPPLY.

There has been a considerable change in the market conditions, as growers are beginning to throw out their carnations and the demand is again equal to the supply. Carnations, however, are becoming very poor. Roses have shortened up. There are plenty of Easter lilies and sweet peas. Asters are beginning to make their appearance. Greens are plentiful.

NOTES.

Fred Schmeling and sons were accompanied by F. F. Delventhal and G. J. Rusch on an automobile trip to Fox Lake, Wis. They have returned after a successful week of fishing.

Allie Zeck and Mrs. Zeck are visiting Gust Rusch in Milwaukee while enroute to northern Wisconsin for their vacation.

A. Hare, of Holton & Hunkel, spent the week in touring the state with some of his friends in the endurance contest.

Walter Holton, of the Holton & Hunkel Co., is again on duty after an operation for appendicitis.

The picnic of the Milwaukee Florists' Club was a disappointment as far as the attendance was concerned, due to the continual rain we had on Friday and Saturday. The people who attended report having had a good time. The following people were successful in the games: Nail-driving contest—H. V. Hunkel, first; Roy Currie, second. Nail-driving contest for ladies—Mrs. F. Holton, first; Miss Haasch, second. Peanut race for ladies—Miss Lenz, first; Miss Haasch, second. Potato race—Grechen Baumgarten, first; Miss Rector, second. Men's race—Harold Baumgarten, first; Roy Currie, second. The rest of the events did not take place on account of the late start.

St. Louis.

VERY LITTLE TRADE.

The weather is very warm and sultry and trade is at a standstill. To give or to attempt to give quotations on market would be a very hard task. There is plenty of everything and no demand. Sweet peas still hang on. Roses open up quickly. Carnations are small and sleepy-looking and many outside shipments arrive in a worthless condition. Your correspondent was in one house when a box of 200 Killarney roses arrived with about 1,000 carnations. The contents of the box were offered for one dollar and refused. Gladioli are now quoted from 1 to 3 and many unsold at these prices. A few choice Americas were sold at 4 to 5 in small lots.

NOTES.

Al Gunz, at Angermueller's, has returned from his vacation. Fred Alves, manager, expects his vacation after the heated term is over. He is very busy taking care of things during George Angermueller's absence.

The delegates to the S. A. F. convention will leave Monday, August 19, at 9 a. m. and will arrive at Chicago at 5 p. m., having chartered for their exclusive use a compartment club chair car.

Fred Ammann was a visitor at C. A. Kuehne's wholesale house Monday.

This firm has a nice supply of out-door as well as in-door flowers.

John B. Barnard, floral artist, was very busy last week. Funerals and weddings occupied his time.

Fred Bruening and Jules Bourdet are making large shipments of gladioli to George Angermueller.

C. De Weaver is shipping several thousand gladioli to the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co.

J. J. Beneke is grandpapa again, his son and daughter-in-law being the proud parents.

Mr. and Mrs. George Angermueller, who are touring to Denver, have left Kansas City.

Adolph Brix is now in Europe. He is expected to return in September.

St. Louis Florists' Club Picnic.

The nineteenth annual picnic was held at Priester's Park, Belleville, Ill., Wednesday, July 17. About 300 were present and a very enjoyable time was had. Robert J. Windler, J. J. Beneke, Wm. C. Smith, F. J. Fillmore and W. J. Pilcher formed the reception committee and welcomed every one as they arrived. Al Gumz, Herman Mikaus, Walter E. Ogle, Wm. H. Osseck, J. Wm. Patton and Frank A. Windler were in charge of the games, and they were run off smoothly. The results were as follows:

Time walking match, for growers only, J. J. Beneke prizes—B. H. Pierce, first; George Madsen, second.

TRADE VERY QUIET.

The expected change in the weather has come and many are thankful. Trade is about as quiet as the day after a picnic in a country town. Stock is equal to all demands and of the usual summer quality.

THE FLORISTS' PICNIC.

The florists' picnic is a thing of the past, but it was one of the most successful that the club has had for years. There were about one hundred and twenty-five there and all had a good time. There were ball games, running races and many other sports for old and young. The dinner was the best ever and the Bedwell House is to be congratulated. W. F. Kasting, S. A. Anderson, and W. J. Palmer were conspicuous by their absence, but L. H. Neubeck was there and umpired and judged. Also he made a speech at the dinner. Wm. Legg was among those present. He has never missed a picnic and talked very entertainingly to the rising generation about how the first picnic was managed by Wm. Scott, Sr., and W. J. Palmer, who in their time were the life of all the picnics. W. A. Adams had the pleasant task of all, as he spoke for the ladies. Henry J. Wise came from Erie, Pa., to be with the boys and Chas. Guenther came from Hamburg. Great credit is due President Greves. Joseph Streib and Robert Scott for their untiring efforts as a committee, and they are appointed as a permanent committee in the future.

BISON.

TRADE GOOD FOR TIME OF YEAR.

Trade does fairly well for this time of year. It is not particularly brisk, but then it has not dropped off altogether, and some days is quite good. The flower supply continues good, better than for most summer seasons, and in a little while the asters will be in abundantly and the phlox, snapdragons and other stuff of the kind will serve for side flowers. There are not only Harrissi lilies still on hand, but the rubrum, alba and speciosum are blooming abundantly also. All the growers are pushing forward the greenhouse work and have finished planting both carnations and roses for next winter's supply. Lilies of the valley seem to be still on hand, in fact, the growers here have them all the time.

NOTES.

Out at Joy's all is business and work. They have finished planting both roses and carnations. They have had a good trade, not a few weddings and funeral work all the time. They have had a good crop of outdoor asters, plenty of good phlox and snapdragons, which grow in favor, and gladioli. They are still cutting some good American Beauties and have My Maryland and Kaiserin.

Geny Bros. say their summer supply of Kaiserin and My Maryland cannot be beaten and are getting better all the time. They have bedded their carnations and roses and the young plants are thriving nicely. Trade has been a little dull and they have had an abundance of flowers for all purposes.

Thomas H. Joy paid a recent visit to Chicago of several days, during which time he visited many or most of the wholesale and retail establishments. With Mrs. Joy he has also made a short visit of recreation to Horn Springs. M. C. D.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of this society was held at Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, July 10, Vice-President Barton in the chair. A letter was read from J. G. McNicol, accepting an invitation to act as judge at the fall show. Rob. Colquhoun was elected to active membership. The judges of the evening's exhibits were Messrs. Ashworth, Gant and Emslie, and the awards were as follows: 25 sprays sweet peas, pink, white and any other color, H. Baetcher, first; new garden peas, F. Petrocia, certificate of merit. G. Barton was tendered the thanks of the society for his collection of sweet pears. J. Marmoli won honorable mention for lettuce. Mrs. H. L. Pratt offered a silver cup for table decoration at the fall show. It was decided to have the dahlia exhibit Feb. 9. The question of moving the society's headquarters from Glen Cove to Mineola caused quite a discussion. It was decided to lay the matter over for further consideration. Prizes are offered at the next meeting for 12 mixed asters, 6 ears of sweet corn and 1 muskmelon.

CLEANING UP FOR LATER ON.

It is hard to write when there is nothing to write about. The markets are about as dead as the rest of the flower markets in the country judging by reports. There is a sleepiness, and cobwebs are being spun over everything. Painting, polishing and a general cleaning up is attracting the usual florist just now, making preparations for the expected trade and getting things in ship shape for the winter. We have had two rain storms since last report. One broke all records for 40 years, over three inches for one day, Saturday. July 21 the mercury dropped to 39, from 100 the first part of the week and set us shivering.

ASTERS COMING IN.

The weather here has turned decidedly cooler the latter part of this week, which has caused a shortening up of the rose crop. Carnations are being replanted, the old ones being thrown out by many growers. This has caused a shortage. Asters are arriving in gradually increasing quantities, and by the middle of next week most growers expect to be in full crop. However, from most reports it would seem that the early varieties will not be as plentiful as in former years. The recent heavy rains have had a bad effect on sweet peas, many being damaged by wind and rain. Easter lilies are still quite plentiful and in the lack of carnations and asters have had a fairly good demand. Candidum lilies are in good demand. Water lilies seem plentiful and clean up daily. Good valley is a little scarce and the demand is good for first-class stock. A few novelties still arrive daily to help out the regular stock. Babybreath (gypsifilia) is meeting with a good demand. Gladioli, outside stock, is arriving in fairly good

NO PERCEPTIBLE CHANGE.

There is no perceptible change in the wholesale market. The supply has shortened up very much and the quality of stock that is arriving is very poor. In roses, American Beauties are of the best quality, and are most called for, but the other varieties in the last few days have become so very poor in quality and the blooms are so small that the bulk of them are unsalable. In carnations, the same conditions prevail. A few of the best are selling at a fair price, but the general shipments are poor and "sleepy." Lilies are doing somewhat better in price and are not so plentiful. Lily of the valley is not doing so well. The supply of orchids has shortened up and there is a very fair demand for the blooms of best quality. Sweet peas are very plentiful and prices realized for these are very low. Gladioli are moving nicely at better prices than a year ago. Asters, while increasing in quantity, are not of very good quality.

NOTES.

Harry A. Bunyard is receiving congratulations for the able manner in which all the preliminary details of the Sweet Pea Show in Boston were carried out. His re-election to the office of secretary was a foregone conclusion. Mr. Bunyard is now devoting much of his time to the local governing board, furthering the interests of the National Flower Show.

It is reported that the bowling team to represent the local club at the convention has been selected and the members are practicing daily on the quiet. All information as to their "form" is refused.

Siebrecht & Siebrecht have taken one of the new stores at 109 West Twenty-eighth street and will move in immediately when the building is ready.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Traendly will have all of their family with them at the convention and will be the guests of Mr and Mrs. George Asmus.

BUSINESS A NEGLIGIBLE QUANTITY.

It is hardly worth while to speak of business these days, as it is almost a negligible quantity, and yet a little Monday morning spirit is enough to turn everything upside down in the effort to get stock enough to meet the emergency. White roses are very poor—nothing much about but white Killarney, and that is so poor that it is almost a shame to call it by its name. Where is the white sport of My Maryland? Why does not some enterprising grower bring it out? Eastern American Beauty roses are good as are New York sweet peas. Gladioli are coming in in good shape. Asters are also to be had now in all colors and of fair grade. The greenhouse-men who make a specialty of plants have their tables full of stock coming in for the fall business, and while for the most part the business of last season was not quite up to the mark, yet all look forward and are preparing for the best ever. The Boston fern and its variations are to be seen everywhere, but palms, dracaenas, pandanus and other like plants appear to be in the hands of a few specialists who grow them in large quantities.

NOTES.

The one class of men who have great faith in the future are the florists' supply dealers and the way they are stocking up for the coming season is a revelation to those who are not in close touch with the business. Drayloads of huge cases are arriving daily until extra warehouses have to be obtained to store the stock until it can be handled or is sent out in case lots unopened.

Joseph Neidinger, who has just returned from Europe, says he secured a splendid line of the very latest from the best basket makers and will have a full line at the convention. He says his business is growing rapidly. Made up designs of metal, wax and other artificial flowers is a specialty with him.

The Leo Niessen Co. are featuring eastern American Beauty roses and New York state sweet peas.

Berger Bros. have as a leader lilies, the best they ever had at this season.

Messrs. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. and M. Rice & Co. are busy as bees sorting out the fresh importations and getting exhibits out for the convention where each will have large displays.

The S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. are strong on the best local and New England roses. Asters are also an important factor and will be a leader with them for the next month.

Ed. Reid says you can not beat his lily of the valley. It is the real Reid brand. Very fair carnations are seen here. K.

JUNE BUSINESS GOOD.

Business for the month of June was very good, with an abundance of cut flowers of all sorts. There seems to be no limit to the number of sweet peas and outdoor roses and the quality is equal to any thing that can be grown. Never have we seen such sweet peas on such long stems. Flowers two to three inches across on stems 12 to 20 inches are common—many of them not of the Spencer type either. One of the leading department stores has been handling a lot of them at "price 5 cents per big bunch, any color or quantity." There seems to be no limit to the outsiders who are "butting in" on the florists in this particular locality and it seems rather an up hill proposition for legitimate florists to pay such high rents and keep first class places in competition with outsiders, who somehow manage to produce something that a department store can handle and undersell with.

NOTES.

We wish all our readers could be with us on a trip throughout the city of Tacoma just to see roses as they grow here and see the rose arbors in our parks. S. L. H.

THE SLOW SEASON IS ON.

Business is about what may be expected at this season. It is true that there is not much doing, but nobody has been compelled to close up. In addition to general work there is an occasional wedding or luncheon which helps out. The best that can be said about stock is that there is plenty of it, such as it is. Roses are small and otherwise indifferent, as must be expected from the heat and humidity through which we are passing. Carnations are about gone. There are a few asters on the market, but they are of indifferent quality. Very good stock in gladioli and Easter and rubrum lilies is to be had, also good water lilies.

NOTES.

John J. Bickings of Good Hope, D. C., formerly of Ley & Bickings, has now been established in business for himself for about a year. We recently had an opportunity of looking over his place and found it very convenient and well kept. He has erected two houses, each 18x125, with concrete boiler rooms and a roomy potting shed. He has a good well and the water is lifted to the tank by motor power. He has also erected a large slat house for his large ferns in summer. His stock is practically all ferns, of which he grows the leading varieties. As he is a young man we expect to see him have good success, particularly if he pursues the excellent methods on which he has started.

The most notable social event of this week was the wedding at St. John's Episcopal church, July 24, of Miss Sally Garlington, daughter of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Ernest A. Garlington, and Lieut. Harry Dwight Chamberlin, Seventh Cavalry, U. S. A. The elaborate church decoration was arranged by Geo. H. Cooke. Mr. Cooke and his employees had been planning to take a day off and attend the Washington Florists' Club outing at Chesapeake Beach, but the wedding order made this impossible.

Alex. B. Garden has been very busy for the past two weeks receiving the benches in three of his carnation houses. He has his own concrete machine and is cutting out all the old wooden benches in his carnation houses and replacing them with concrete.

M. J. McCabe of Washington and Good Hope is thinking of building a large rose house in the near future. A noteworthy feature of his place at present is a large stock of chrysanthemums which are making fine growth.

It having been reported that F. H. Kramer was bitten by a snake, many of his friends called and offered him their sovereign remedy. We are pleased to state that Mr. Kramer is suffering no ill effects from snake bite.

John Guttman of Congress Heights is another grower who thinks of enlarging his glass area, and he is likely, by next season, to have another large carnation house.

Theodore Dietrich of Congress Heights seems to be the first local grower on the market with asters in any quantity.

John Robertson is handling very good asters which are grown by C. Ellaby, Riverdale Md.

This Budding Knife Free

The Unrivalled Henkel Knife Shown Above Ivory Handle and Fine English Steel Blade will be mailed absolutely free to anyone sending in Two New Subscriptions to The American Florist, the new subscribers being persons in the trade or trade employees. This knife cannot be bought anywhere for less than $1.25 and most dealers will probably ask more for it, as the price of ivory has been advanced recently.

Send Post Office Money Order or Express Money Order for $2.00 with the names and addresses of two New Subscribers (persons in the trade, as Florists, Seedsmen or Nurserymen, or their Employes) and we will send them the paper for one year after receipt of subscriptions.

With Canadian orders it will be necessary to send $4.00 with two new subscriptions and $5.00 with two new subscriptions from other foreign countries.

The request for the knife must be made when sending in the subscriptions, giving name and address of person to whom the knife is to be sent.

The knife will be mailed absolutely free if the sender of the New Subscriptions complies with the above instructions.

This offer is good now for present orders.

Gardening on Corrugated Iron.

It often happens in and about a garden that it would be extremely convenient to use corrugated iron as a roofing material for some of the many sheds and shelters that are always wanted, or even for a summer-house. This ugly material has two good qualities, says a writer in The Garden, published in London; it is cheap and can be laid at a very low pitch, often a matter of importance when a shed is to be built as a lean-to against a wall that has no height to spare. But the thing is so unsightly that often the use of it is considered to be out of the question. The case, however, is not so hopeless as it may appear, for by the exercise of a little ingenuity the hideous expanse of corrugated iron can be made not only not unsightly, but actually a thing of beauty. It is done by putting four inches to six inches of soil on the iron, and growing on it such plants as will thrive on a shallow bed that is likely to become more or less dry. To guard against the danger of heavy rain causing the soil to shift before it has become consolidated and more or less matted with the roots of the plants, something, either of wood or iron, is fixed horizontally across the middle of the roof, or two such bars, if the roof measures much more than 12 feet from eaves to top. Angle iron, of a depth of not less than two inches, does well, but in such a roof in the present writer's garden the bar is a piece of wood about two and a half inches square in section. Another such piece is fixed just over the eaves to stop earthy debris from falling into the gutter. These bars were well coated with the thick paint refuse that painters call "smudge" to prevent rotting. The soil used was sandy peat, because it was more likely to be free from weeds than ordinary garden soil. A thin slab of fir with the bark on its fixed just in front of the gutter, so that both the gutter and the corrugated edge are hidden. The earth, being tightly packed together and consolidated by treading, was planted with stonecrops—the three varieties, crimson, pink and white, of Sedum spurius, the pink S. Ewersii and the yellow S. reflexum. The effect is charming when the stonecrops are in flower, and when they are out of bloom the quiet color of the leaves and the small grasses that grow between, and what is seen of the earthy surface, so exactly matches that of the tiled roof of the old barn, to which it is a lean-to, that it quite escapes notice. The common stonecrop, Sedum acre, or any other of the genus can, of course, be used, but S. acre is not recommended, as it is apt to become a troublesome weed in a garden. If the soil on the iron roof is of a more loamy nature or partly calcareous, the houseleeks will do well. The common houseleek (Sempervivum tectorum) will make large patches, while the smaller alpine kinds, such as S. tomentosum and S. Lageri, will be quite at home. Wallflowers and snapdragons will also flourish, and will make a bright show in their seasons. All this supposes a roof with a southern or western aspect. If it looks to the north or east, other plants would be used, the first that comes to mind as the most desirable being the common polypody fern, which would in time entirely cover such an iron roof.

UNUSUAL SCARCITY FOR JULY.

Market conditions are extraordinary. Since roses and carnations are almost out of the market and sweet peas and asters are very scarce we have the unusual condition of a scarcity of cut flowers in July. Good gladioli of desirable colors are not very plentiful, although there is an abundance of cheap mixtures of ill-shaped flowers and indescribable colors.

NOTES.

Chris Rodenbeck is the champion high jumper of the florist fraternity. He recently won the championship by a standing high jump onto the four and a half foot mahogany counter in Smith & Young's commission house.

Irwin Bertermann had to lay off two days to re-classify his twin boys who became slightly mixed during housecleaning.

The E. C. Amling Co. is shipping extra fine pink and white Killarney roses to this city.

George Wiegand, with his sister and mother, is on an automobile trip to Cleveland.

Homer Wiegand returned from the lakes with a fine string of fish (stories).

Carl Sonnenschmidt and H. Junge and family are off on a week's vacation.

H. Junge is going fishing next week. Adolph Baur is on the sick list.

Heacock's Kentias

Of Decorative Sizes we have the following:

- 900 Kentia Forsteriana, 12-in. cedar tubs, 5 to 7 ft. high, made-up plants.
 260 Kentia Belmoreana, 12-in. cedar tubs, 5 to 6 ft. high, made-up plants.
 1,500 Kentia Belmoreana, 9-in. cedar tubs, 4 to 6 ft. high, single plants.
 850 Kentia Forsteriana, 9-in. cedar tubs, 4 to 5 ft. high, made-up plants.
 880 Kentia Forsteriana, 7-in. cedar tubs, 3 to 3½ ft. high, made-up plants.
 1,180 Kentia Belmoreana, 7-in. cedar tubs, 3 to 3½ ft. high, single plants.

All the Smaller Sizes in Great Quantities.

Pronounced by competent judges to be the finest lot of Home-Grown Kentias ever offered to the American Trade. They are Well Established, Strong and Healthy.

700 Cibotium Schiedii, in 7-in. pots and 9-in. tubs. Grand plants.

Price List for the Asking.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, Philadelphia. Fifty trains each way every week-day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you can see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Sizes, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. With increased glass devoted to Palms, our stock is much larger and in better condition than ever before.

Next annual convention, June, 1913.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade, July 24, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $6 to $8 per 100 pounds.

ONION seed harvest is beginning this week, being about one week later than last year. Set growers are asking for dry weather from this on.

TIMOTHY is lower, August $7.25 bid, $7.50 asked; September $6.50 bid, October sold $6.50 and $6.25, closes $6 bid; December and year, $5.50 bid.—Chicago Report, July 20.

FRENCH reports of July 9 indicate a further shortage of white Roman hyacinths. The high price of 110 francs per 1,000 is reported to have been paid by growers recently.

VISITED CHICAGO: Mrs. E. Germain, proprietor of the Germain's Seed Co., Los Angeles, Calif., returning from the east. She goes to the coast via Alberta, Canada, where she will visit her daughter.

HARRISBURG, PA.—Application for a state charter has been filed by the State Grange of Pennsylvania. Among other things the new corporation purposes to distribute seeds and fertilizer to the farmers.

BISMARCK, N. D.—Oscar H. Will & Co. have purchased the large factory building erected some years ago by the Rhud Lumber Co. with Northern Pacific trackage. They will strengthen and improve the property for a seed warehouse.

REGARDING Roman hyacinths, it is reported that the French growers are selling the small sizes and this may make the larger sizes short again next year. It is also stated that the hyacinth disease now prevailing in the south of France was imported through Dutch stock of hyacinths sent there for growing for Christmas blooms. Dutch hyacinths as well as tulips of this season's crop are said to run small in size and there is not much probability of a surplus. Narcissus bulbs are being dug July 15 and look fine.

Government Seed Samples.

At the request of the Secretary of Agriculture, the Treasury Department directed July 13 that during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, 2-ounce samples of all importations of 100 pounds or more of grass, clover, and forage-plant seeds be prepared at the earliest practicable date after entry and forwarded to the seed laboratory, Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., labeled with the names and addresses of consignors and consignees, name of seed as given in the invoice, and quantity of the consignment.

NEW YORK.—Albert Koehler, cashier of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, is in the city this week.

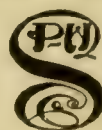

Pea and Bean Crops.

Well-informed growers, writing under date of July 19, say they cannot hope to make full deliveries of all varieties of peas and do not expect surpluses of many, if any, kinds. The crops of Alaskas in some parts of Wisconsin are good, but the Advancers, Admirals and Horsfords will be much lighter than of Alaskas. The Michigan acreage is very light this year and the yield is also light. The crops of peas growing in the new irrigated sections in the Rocky Mountain regions, (where the bulk of their seed was sown this year) are producing much less per acre than a year ago, and there is not likely to be any surplus. It looks now as though there may be a shortage of some of the varieties used by canners and probably some of other kinds used by seedsmen. Many fields have been sown to peas which were not suitable for that purpose, and a large percentage of the crops are being grown by farmers who never grew peas in quantities before and who have made mistakes in sowing the seed or in handling the crops or the irrigation water, which have seriously reduced the yield. This may be overcome to some extent hereafter, but this year's crop will certainly give a much lighter yield per acre than seed-growers have been expecting, in view of the crops grown in a few exceptionally fine irrigated fields last year. Nearly all crops were sown from two to five weeks later than usual and some of them have not been up more than ten or twenty days, and if these are caught by frost the crop will be seriously reduced.

The situation regarding beans is somewhat better than a few days ago. The crop made a very bad start, owing to the cold and dry weather prevailing in May and June, and beans are much later than they should be. However, the weather has been more favorable for the past ten days and most of the bean-growing sections have been favored with copious showers which is materially benefiting the crops. It is too early to give a definite idea of what the outcome will be, but we anticipate a fair return, providing weather conditions are normal during the balance of the season. The crop will be late—much more so than last year—and it will be necessary to have very favorable weather in the fall in order to secure the crop well-matured and in good condition. There seems to be an absence of blight this season, and while the growth is somewhat uneven, owing to the unevenness of moist conditions in the ground, the vines are healthy.

Discriminates Against Home Trade.

At a meeting of seedsmen in protest against the Bourne parcel post bill, held at the Burpee building, Philadelphia, Pa., July 16, a particularly interesting contrast between the rates proposed and those that are maintained under the international parcels post law was made by the assembled seed-growers. Publishing houses in Europe, according to the arguments advanced at this meeting, could, under the international agreement, mail to San Francisco or to any other city in the United States at a cost of four cents, the catalogue that would cost the Philadelphia publisher 12 cents to mail under the application of the Bourne bill. This fact, the growers say, would deal a death-blow to the book-publishing houses in the United States and leave an open field for the foreign printer who could publish American catalogues in Europe and ship them for the American firm at one-half the cost the citizen-publisher would undergo.

W. Altee Burpee, chairman of the Parcels Post Committee of the American Seed Trade Association, spoke of the Bourne bill as a regeneration of a system that was found ineffective in England 72 years ago and abandoned for the present excellent service now in effect there. The association, he said, is favorable to a union of the third and fourth-class mail matters, an idea which seems to be the main argument in favor of the proposed measure, but the adoption of the rates as incorporated in the law as it now reads he characterized as a destroyer of not only the American seed interests, but the printing, ink-making, advertising and publishing interests as well. The bill's adoption, he said, instead of helping the Postal Department to overcome a large deficit, would further handicap it. He based his argument on the fact proved by the English authorities that mail matter can be shipped more economically within long distances than it can within short distances. The Bourne law works exactly opposite.

The letter drafted to the big book-shipping concerns in the United States calls for prompt action through business heads and workmen alike in a common fight against what is declared to be a blow at the prosperity of long-established business. It is represented by the committee, and their action is indorsed by the Postal Progress League and by the several state societies who have interested themselves in the fight against the Bourne bill, that American firms cannot compete with the foreigner in the handicap of the proposed measure. The extra cost within each succeeding zone would mean an increased expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars each year or the complete abandoning of the catalogue and the sending by mail of the seeds, bulbs and other articles shipped that way at present. Europeans could take up the business under the international law at half the cost.

The Seed Trade Association Committee will prepare at once to make overtures to the Senate. They will represent the new law as an added handicap to the firms and also to the Postal Department, as it would establish at once a postage-rate zone around each of the 65,000 postoffices in the United States, thereby necessitating the weighing of all materials and the arrangement of the postage according to the distance from the mailing point, whereas now the weighing can be done in bulk.

The Seed Corn Scare.

(With Apologies to Walt Mason).

The seed corn scare has come and gone; we think it was a fake. The farmers are now catching on to things left in its wake. The business men, commercial clubs and bankers everywhere, they thought we were a lot of dubs and warned us to beware. They said our corn was on the bum, that it would never grow; it had been chilled and frozen dumb by fifteen feet of snow. The railway lines ran special trains upon a special day; they had trained men with special brains to give a special say. We hayseeds donned our gladdest gowns and grasped the steering wheels, and motored to the nearest towns to hearken to their spiels. The brakeman gave the brakes a twist as the train came rolling in; we saw the seed corn specialist and heard him swing his chin. The good things that I call to mind of the many things he said: "Good seed corn is as hard to find as teeth in a turkey's head. If you will plant untested seed, it is no idle boast, you'll have no corn to feed your steed or make your buttered toast. But plant the kind that's sure to grow, that tests as fine as silk, and this fair land will overflow with corn and buttermilk." He said to take a cracker box and sprinkle in some seed, and fill it up half-full of rocks, and then that we should need to wet it down each night and morn and keep it good and hot, and see that every grain of corn was "Johnnie-on-the-spot." That seed corn spiel it was a beaut; we hoped he'd never quit, but the engine gave a warning toot—we had to hit the grit. It is a fact, sure as you're born, in spite of all this scare, we have a dandy stand of corn, and maybe some to spare. If any farmer doesn't know just what good seed corn is, to choose the kind that's sure to grow, he'd better quit the biz and don a ragged flannel shirt and join a dago crew, and go to heaving frozen dirt with a rusty No. 2. The railway men may snort and pop, the bankers saw the air, but if we grow a bumper crop we know they'll get their share. The business men, commercial clubs, will sing their gladdest tunes, and sell us wormy breakfast grub and mouldy, musty prunes.

Can be produced only from the giant strains. Our CHALLENGE PANSY seed contains only the giant self-colors, the giant striped and variegated and the giant blotched, etc., all carefully mixed in proportion. You could not buy better seed if you paid $100 per ounce. Our Challenge Pansy seed during the past season gave unprecedented satisfaction, and every order booked last year was duplicated and increased this year. All the testimonials received mentioned specially the high grade of flowers—color, form and size of the individual blossoms. This year, by adding improved types, intending customers can absolutely rely on a duplication of this season's success with increased satisfaction. Our "mark" for this strain is "Challenge," and it is all the word denotes.

Pansy—Boddington's "Challenge"—All Giants

This mixture contains all the finest Giant strains—of the leading Pansy Specialists in the world—the Giant self-colors, the Giant striped and margined, and the Giant blotched, etc., all carefully mixed in proportion—the finest that money can buy—the finest your money can buy. A florist who has grown it said: "Why don't you call it Danfeanz?"

Notes On Asparagus.

Most growers of asparagus stop cutting some time between June 15 and July 1, depending upon the age of the plantation and its condition. An old rule with market gardeners is to quit cutting when peas come into market. This for several reasons—the peas somewhat take the place of asparagus and the labor used for cutting can be transferred to the new crop. Where asparagus has been cut clean and the roots are deep enough to admit the use of a disc harrow, the proper treatment is to thoroughly disc the patch after applying what fertilizer we may wish to add. This discing must be thorough enough to destroy all weeds. Where the roots are too shallow for this treatment a good plan is to use a shovel plow and thoroughly hill the rows enough to cover all weed growths. We have used this hilling process with great success to subdue bad fields, simply hilling and harrowing down alternately during the cutting season. By following the hilling plan with mortar hoes we cover any bare spots, thus smothering any growth in a few days.

If for any reasons the cutting is to be continued a good plan is to cut only the strong shoots and allow the weaker ones to grow. This will give the root some connection with light and air and relieve the weaker plants entirely. By this method we can extend the cutting season several weeks without danger to the plantation. As regards fertilizer requirements, probably in most sections of the country potash is the controlling element. Asparagus is not easily injured by salt, hence such material as Kainit and muriate of potash can be used freely. Some growers use Kainit only, applying about a ton per acre. If complete fertilizer is used, one-half of the nitrogen should be nitrate soda, the balance blood or tankage. The phosphoric acid may be used likewise, one-half bone meal, the other part acid phosphate. The potash can be either hard wood ashes, sulphate muriate, potash or Kainit. Such a mixture should analyze about 12 per cent potash, 8 per cent phosphate and four to five per cent nitrogen. Of such a mixture 1,000 pounds per acre would be a fair dressing. We must realize the next year's crop is made in the next three months and that grass feeding is the secret of thick shoots and plenty of them. Asparagus has been a good crop in our section this season and prices have ruled a little lower than last year, but growers are well satisfied.

Potato Seed Change.

The problem of potato improvement by the selection of favorable fluctuations or variations is intimately linked with that of "degeneration." That potatoes degenerate or "run out" naturally is an idea commonly held by the great mass of growers no matter where they may be situated. Many believe that this is a natural phenomenon—something to be expected and something which cannot possibly be avoided. A new variety comes into circulation, remains in the foremost ranks for a few years or until it reaches a period of old age or senility, and then gradually declines. Such is the generally accepted idea of the life of a potato sort. That certain varieties do appear to act in this peculiar manner cannot be denied. On the other hand, experience shows that other sorts which have been under cultivation a great many years do not appear to have lost in vigor or productive qualities during this long space of time. A good example is afforded in the Swedish sort known as Dala which is commonly grown in the province of Delecarlia (Dalarna). This potato is said to have been introduced about 150 years ago, yet is one of the best sorts now grown in that province.

The degeneration which is often noticed in potatoes is not regarded by our best authorities as due to any natural or inevitable "running out" of the sort, but rather to the effects of certain conditions which weaken the vigor and invite disease. Potatoes seem to reach their highest state of development under cool, moist conditions, seed tubers produced under such conditions usually giving better results than those grown in hotter and drier regions. Where potato growing is prosecuted in these latter districts, it would seem desirable to obtain seed frequently from districts which allow the maximum development of vigor. Where this practice is not followed, the vigor may gradually become weakened, resulting in a corresponding depreciation in yield and quality. Similar results in any case may follow neglect to discriminate between small, poorly developed tubers and those which are well developed and sound. Too often all the good sound tubers are sold or used for cooking while the poor, discarded, in many cases diseased tubers are kept for planting. Where this practice is followed there is bound to be a falling off in productivity. The evidence at present available goes to show that where suitable sorts are used and where suitable tubers of these sorts are utilized for seeding purposes each year, the standard of a variety may be maintained indefinitely under all favorable conditions of soil and climate. Since some varieties are not adapted to certain conditions it is quite possible that their power to resist disease may become gradually reduced. This would seem to explain why certain varieties grown in comparison with others and under similar conditions for a number of years seem to be more susceptible to blight and other diseases than do neighboring sorts. Obviously, the first consideration is maintenance of vigor and control of disease and this implies very careful selection of seed tubers, careful cultivation, spraying and rotation of crops.—Canadian Seed Growers' Report.

Foreign Trade Increasing.

American imports of nursery stock plants, vines, etc., have been steadily increasing, having been $1,850,000 in value in the fiscal year 1907 and $2,768,000 in 1911, the latter amount comprising the following, rates of duty being shown in parenthesis: Fruit plants, tropical and semi-tropical for propagation or cultivation (free), $20,435; hyacinths, astilbe, dielytra, and lily of the valley clumps ($2.50 per 1,000), $294,083; lily and calla bulbs ($5 per 1,000), $259,460; lily of valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia, and gloxinia bulbs ($1 per 1,000), $724,959; orchids, palms, azaleas, and other decorative greenhouse plants, preserved or fresh (25 per cent), $301,314; same from Philippines (free), $5,767; peony, iris, canna, dahlia, and amaryllis ($10 per 1,000), $28,450; roses (4 cents each), $118,750; fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen, shrubs and vines (25 per cent), $94,299; myrobalan plum, mahaleb or mazzard cherry, manetti, multiflora and brier rose, 3 years old or less ($1 per 1,000), $75,380; pear, apple, quince, and St. Julien plum, 3 years old or less ($2 per 1,000), $72,739; trees, shrubs, plants and vines, commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock, not specially provided for (25 per cent), $629,839; all other bulbs, bulbous roots, etc. (50 cents per 1,000) $140,637. The Government derived $597,402 revenue from the foregoing in 1911.

American exports of nursery stock alone in 1911 aggregated $337,988 in value, having advanced steadily since 1907, when they amounted to $225,339. The bulk of such shipments has gone to Canada.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

American Association of Nurserymen.

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y. Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

BOSKOOP reports of July 11 indicate that stocks in that vicinity are looking finely this season to date.

NEW HAVEN, CONN.—The New Haven Nurseries Co. has been organized with a capital stock of $20,000. The incorporators are Louis A. and Bertha G. Soldan and William F. Alcorn.

AUGUSTA, ME.—State Horticulturist Albert K. Gardner reports that his recent tour of inspection showed the Maine nurseries to be in good condition and the trees thriving well.

BIDDEFORD, ME.—A test case is being made of the suit against Nicholas Staples of Kennebunk, who was arraigned on a charge of violating the new law requiring the licensing of nurserymen. Nurserymen say the law is unconstitutional.

New Chinese Shrubs in Arnold Arboretum.

The number of new Chinese shrubs which promise to be hardy in this climate is naturally much larger than the number of trees, states the bulletin issued by the Arnold Arboretum. We can speak, however, only of a few of these now. Of lilacs Wilson found eleven species in China. Nearly all of these were discovered by him and most of them are now growing in the Arboretum where three species have been sufficiently tested to show that they will be hardy here. These are Syringa pinnatifolia, S. Komarowii and S. Wilsonii. The flowers and flower-clusters of the first are small and not conspicuous, but the deeply divided leaves are unusual among lilacs and form the chief interest in this plant. The others are large shrubs related to S. villosa with handsome foliage and flowers. More interesting, although not yet fully tested for hardiness, are S. reflexa, with long pendulous flower-clusters, thus differing from all the other known lilacs, and S. Sargentiana with long acuminate leaves and shorter nodding not pendulous flower-clusters.

The genus cotoneaster, which is valued chiefly for its black or red, often long-persistent fruits, has been poorly represented in our gardens as few of the species previously known have proved hardy here. Wilson, however, found an unexpectedly large number of new species of cotoneaster in western China and at least a dozen of these have passed through the winter without injury and promise to become valuable garden plants here. Among these may be mentioned C. Dielsiana, with weeping whiplike branches and small red fruits persistent late into the winter, C. divaricata with dark red fruits, C. foveolata with large leaves which turn in the autumn to brilliant shades of orange and crimson and black fruit, C. moupinensis also with black fruit, a plant remarkable in the brilliant colors the leaves assume here in the autumn, and C. hupehensis, a strong-growing, shrubby black-fruited species with graceful spreading branches, ornamental white flowers and crimson globose fruit. Among the new spireas introduced by Wilson are three species which are now known to be perfectly hardy and to be among the most ornamental of all the numerous species and hybrids of this genus. These are S. Henryi, S. Wilsonii and S. Veitchii.

The Chinese witch hazel, Hamamelis mollis, a common shrub of the central provinces, has now lived unhurt in the Arboretum for two years. It is one of the late winter or early spring-flowering species and its flowers are said to be more beautiful than those of the other witch hazels. Several of the Chinese hydrangeas are uninjured by the winter. Among these may be mentioned H. xanthourea and its several varieties, all handsome shrubs with large corymbs of flowers. In Exochorda Giraldui New England gardens have a new and perfectly hardy plant of first-rate importance. It grows to a height of twelve feet or more and produces larger and handsomer flowers than the well-known Pearl Bush of gardens, Exochorda grandiflora.

Of the beautiful genus abelia we have before been able to cultivate only the hybrid A. grandiflora, so it is particularly gratifying that the large-flowered, strong-growing A. Engleriana proves to be hardy here. It is of interest, too, that the new monotypic genus Kolkwitzia flourishes here. It is a shrub from four to six feet high with large terminal panicles of flowers followed by crimson hairy fruits, and is related to abelia and loniceera. Another beautiful plant of this family, Dipelta floribunda, of a genus new to cultivation, with large and showy weigelia-like flowers, can also be numbered among the hardy Chinese plants.

Of Wilson's numerous honeysuckles which are flourishing in the Arboretum we can only mention now Lonicera prostrata, which promises to be a useful plant for covering rocky slopes and banks. It is very hardy and free-growing, with prostrate stems, small oval bluish-green leaves, small white flowers turning yellow when fading, and orange-red fruits; L. Henryi, a vigorous climbing plant which has preserved its large dark green leaves through the winter, and L. tragophylla, which in habit and general appearance resembles the woodbine of Europe, although the flowers are golden yellow. An important addition to very early-flowering shrubs is Corylopsis Veitchiana, with short pendulous racemes of primrose-yellow fragrant flowers produced before the leaves unfold. A majority of the large collection of Chinese brambles are uninjured, especially those showy species with nearly white stems, like Rubus lasiostylus and R. coreanus.

Edison Says "Success is 10 Per Cent Inspiration and 90 Per Cent Perspiration."

Time was that the man who rolled up his sleeves, spit on his hands, and worked the hardest, and mopped his brow the most, was considered the winner.

But nowadays the biggest, busiest, brainiest men don't even take their coats off.

But they are the gasoline and sparkers of the business—the 10 per cent. They are the directing power behind their employees—the perspiring 90 per cent.

Some greenhouse builders are as high as 98 per cent perspiration and 2 per cent inspiration—and their houses show it.

Nail this fact down in your mind—the more thoroughly all work is thought out and planned by the expert men in the office before it is turned out, the less "the men on the job" will have to do—the quicker the job can be completed and the surer it is of being surely right.

No other greenhouse concern in the country has the organization of expert men that Lord & Burnham has.

As a result, our houses are never cheap, but they are always worth all they cost.

READ WHAT THE USERS SAY ABOUT KROESCHELL BOILERS

Summer Heat at 20° Below Zero.

Your boiler is making summer heat up here although we had 24° below zero. Am well satisfied with your boiler and threaded tube piping system—it made a good job.
JOHN AHLSTROM, Elmhurst Fruit Farm, Spicer, Minn.

Kroeschell Saves One-Third Fuel—Boiler Durable.

In 1894 we bought one of your No. 12 boilers to take the place of four smaller boilers of another make. Your boiler has done the entire work to the highest satisfaction. SAVING LABOR and about ONE-THIRD OF THE FUEL we used to burn before. Had no repairs on it whatever, except one set of flues. Last fall we installed one of your No. 14 boilers, having enlarged our plant. It takes care of 35,000 sq. ft. of glass very easy. When firing we keep the ash door open only about one inch. We think your No. 14 boiler could carry 40,000 sq. ft. of glass.

DAMM BROS., Chicago, Ill.

Kroeschell Versus Return Tubular Boiler—Kroeschell Saves One-half the Coal.

The No. 4 Kroeschell Boiler purchased of you in 1909 has given the very best satisfaction—would wish no better. Have taken out return tubular boiler this fall, which used one-half more coal than your present boiler. Your boiler is so easy to regulate that in a few minutes I can run up the temperature very quickly. The return and flow connection with Generator, all work the very best according to your plans.

FRANK A. WAGNER, Tiffin, Ohio.

Temperatures Easily Maintained in Zero Weather—Kroeschell Runs All Night Without firing.

Your boiler is taking care of 3500 sq. ft. of glass but I expect to add that much more next season. Am not afraid but that the No. 1 boiler will take care of 7000 sq. ft. of glass, although it is only rated at 6000 sq. ft. I have had no trouble in keeping 65° at night and 60° to 70° in the daytime in zero weather. After we got used to firing, we attended fire about every five or six hours. We have not fired any night after 10:30 and not often fired before 6:00 o'clock in the morning.

H. N. PASKINS CO., Basil, O.

No. 7 Kroeschell Carries Over 16,600 Sq. Ft. Glass.

We put up another house 26 x 120 and supposed that we would need another boiler. The reason we inquired of you some time ago, but we were agreeably surprised to find that your No. 7 boiler which we bought in Sept., 1905, will heat it also with ease for our purpose. We are now heating 14,500 sq. ft. of ground under glass, or 16,616 ft. of glass without gable ends. We are well satisfied with the boiler.

EDWARD SCHUMANN & SONS, Cincinnati, O.

Kroeschell Piping System Is Great.

The new piping system works better than we had expected. We are able to heat the houses in little or no time.

Heating Leanto.

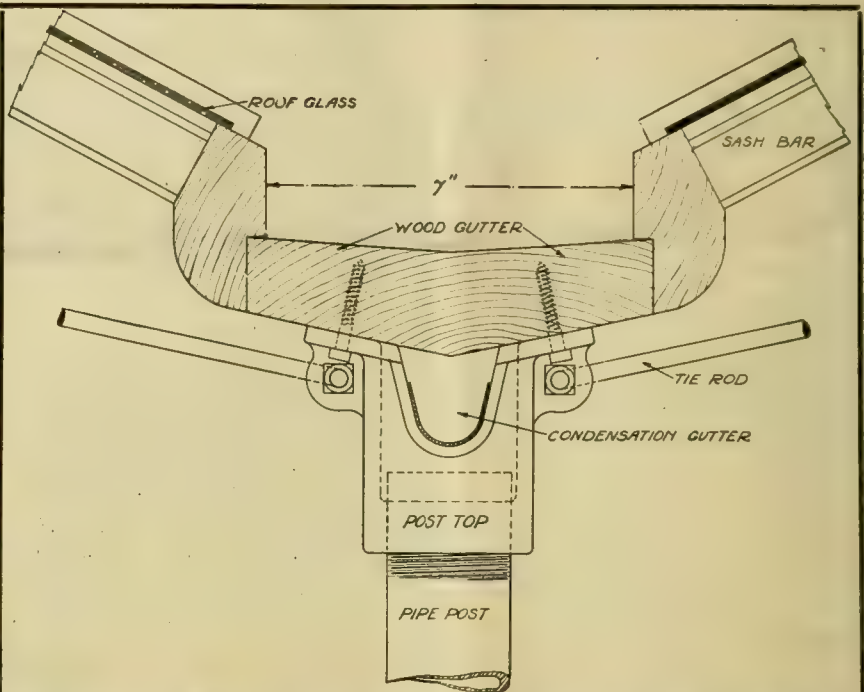

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

I am erecting a house 11x43 feet for general purposes. It is situated to the rear of my other houses and runs east and west, while the other houses run north and south. So it is well protected from the north. I would like to erect a leanto on the south side of this greenhouse, to be built of sash. The main house is to be heated with hot water, 2-inch pipe. I have some 1½-inch pipe I would like to use for the leanto. How many runs of 1½-inch pipe would be needed to have the temperature at 50 degrees in the leanto while the main house is 60 degrees, heated with 2-inch pipe, both leanto and main house heated from same boiler? The leanto will be 30 feet long, five feet wide and five feet high at the highest part, with a 1-foot pitch. I am not asking about the main house, just about the leanto.

SUBSCRIBER.

In reply to "Subscriber" we would suggest that the leanto house can be heated by means of two 1½-inch pipes run along the back side of the leanto, and then carried around the end and back along the outside wall. If possible, all of the pipes should be given a gradual fall throughout their entire length.

WOOD

"LEST YOU FORGET"

We want you to know that we make a wood gutter, and a good one, too. It combines all the good points of other wood gutters. "AND THEN SOME."

Note that the condensation and drip run down the side and sloping bottom to a drip pan placed under the gutter where it makes no shade.

We know it will do that, for we have tried it. This gutter lends itself to an outside wall, as an eave, most admirably.

The Truth About Boilers

Being Number Two of Three Frank Talks

The arrows in this sketch show how boilers constructed with flue openings at back of boiler draw the flames away from the front sections, impairing their efficiency.

With the Burnham there is a flue between each section on both sides of the fire chamber. The flames come equally in contact with each section, making every section equally efficient.

boiler economy—you can well see that if the flue opening for the passage of the gases and smoke be at the rear of the fire box, that the draft will draw them diagonally from the front to the back of the boiler, as shown in cut No. 1. It is obvious that the rear sections must then be kept hotter than the middle or front ones. In short, each section is not equally efficient, which seriously effects a boiler's economy.

The Burnham, however, has flue openings between each section on each side, which allows an equal amount of hot gases to reach each section equally. As a result, each section in the Burnham is EQUALLY EFFICIENT.

It's plain to be seen the more heat a boiler harnesses up, the less coal you will have to buy—and, as we understand it, you want to spend as little as possible for coal. This being so, and

This House at Summit, N. J. is one of our Iron Framers

It is 40x300 feet—Iron Frame with compression trussing. We have always talked a lot about this construction being decay proof, and now Mr. Hamman's experience last January is rather conclusive evidence that they are almost fire proof as well. A fire completely destroyed one of his sash bar houses and communicated to this Iron Frame one through a connecting passage. It burned the bars only, a short distance each side of entrance, but left the framework itself entirely unharmed. New roof bars were easily and quickly put in, reglazed, and the house is as good as new.

U-Bar Greenhouses
the Famous Greenhouses They Are.

You can talk about the things cold frames will do for you "until the cows come home," but if you want real flowers, real bedding plants that you can count on being top notch year in and year out—then a greenhouse is the only thing. The only thing because it is the sure thing. With a greenhouse your frames become doubly valuable, as then one helps the other greatly to the advantage of both. With a greenhouse you control temperatures and conditions and can have what you want when you want it. But don't allow anyone to persuade you that any other curved eave house is just as good as the U-Bar. It is not so. We want to show you exactly why. Send for the catalog as a starter.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Pansies.

For winter blooming the seed of pansies should be sown early. Procure a strain of seed that will produce large flowers, and unless they are to be grown in considerable quantities mixed colors are to be preferred. To obtain plants enough for winter blooming it will be better to plant the seed in flats and place them in a cool shady location in the house, where they are much more easily cared for than out in the open. If such a location is not to be had they can be sown in a cold frame and a sash that is quite heavily shaded placed over them until the plants begin to grow. As soon as large enough they should be planted in a cold frame until the bench is made ready, about the middle of September, in the house. The soil for winter growing should be good, and of the richest, in order to obtain large flowers, and the house in which they are planted should be maintained at a cool temperature, about 45 degrees at night after settled fall and winter weather commences. Pansies are not, as a rule, troubled much with insect pests, but sometimes in the fall in the houses they are attacked by green fly and they are quickly checked in their growth if the aphids gets a good hold upon them. A careful watch should be maintained and if they are found to be infested with aphids constant spraying with nicotine solutions will keep the insects down.

Office Housecleaning.

Nearly all growing establishments at the present day have what is termed the office, and during the busy season, in many places, but little attention is given to keep it in a tidy condition.
Now is the time, after the carnations are housed and before the fall work commences, to have a thorough cleaning up of the office and workroom and get them in readiness for the coming season. Get all the papers filed away in proper shape and fix up all accounts as far as possible, and thereby get rid of much of the worry and trouble.
Clean up the workroom and give it a clean coat of paint, and straighten out the supplies. If the stock of baskets has grown dirty get a little gold paint and give them a coat of this, which will certainly make them more attractive than the dingy supplies too often seen hanging on the walls or standing around. The florist too seldom appreciates how the customer likes to trade in a clean, up-to-date place, and often endeavors to excuse the dirty appearance by remarking, "It is impossible where so much dirt is handled to keep the place clean." Such a one is only fooling himself. The present-day customers, of whom many are ladies, know better; they see other places that are kept neat and clean, and they cannot be imposed upon with such tales. Now is the time to get everything shipshape for the fall and winter trade.

Roman Hyacinths.

The first bulbs to arrive will be the Roman hyacinths, and everything should be in readiness to properly care for them as soon as received. When the cases arrive the bulbs should be placed in a cool, dry place; if packed in bags they should be spread out either in flats or shallow boxes and placed where they will neither be too moist or yet in too dry and warm a location. While it is too early to plant for the winter blooming, still a succession of plantings may be made every week until cool weather, when the balance can be planted up. Almost any soil will grow bulbs successfully, but fine results are obtained with soil that has been thrown out from the carnation or rose benches and has laid out over winter to allow it to sweeten a little. Where a fall pot plant is wanted a few of the hyacinth bulbs can be planted in bulb pans, but in growing for cut flowers flats are to be preferred, for they are much more economically handled and do not require as much care. In planting the bulbs cover the bottom of the flats with about an inch of soil, placing the bulbs on this quite closely together, yet not touching, as can be done with other bulbs. The flat should then be filled with soil, which should be packed between the bulbs with the ends of the fingers. They should then be given a good watering, enough to wet the soil all the way through and settle it around the bulb. The flats should be placed outside and covered to the depth of about three inches with sand or coal ashes or something that will lie close enough to prevent drying out. A label should be placed at the end with the date of planting, so that the several plantings will be kept separate and can be readily moved into the houses. In four to six weeks they should be well enough rooted to bring them into the house, where they can be placed under a bench until they begin to throw up their flowering spikes.

Delphiniums.

This perennial has become quite a popular cut flower for summer use and is very decorative and showy. Those that have a stock can increase the plants of the better varieties by propagation at this time. When the plants bloom those that produce the best spikes and are of the best colors should be marked. After the blooms are cut the small growths that break from the stem are very easily rooted. Prepare a bed in a shaded frame and insert the cuttings, watering heavily when first put in. They will need frequent syringing during the hot weather and will root in three to four weeks, when they can be either potted or planted in a frame where they can be given attention. As soon as well established they can be planted in their permanent location, but should be given a little protection during the first winter by throwing a little old straw or some such material over them.

Asparagus Baskets.

There is always a good call for hanging baskets of Asparagus Sprengeri and there is nothing more decorative in a store or greenhouse than these beautiful baskets when well put up and when they are growing nicely. The young 3-inch stock will make nice basket work. The wire basket frame should be of good size, eight inches in diameter at least. Line the outside with green sheet moss, which makes a much better appearance than sphagnum, and then fill with good rich soil and plant the young plants in this. The basket, after planting, should be placed in a warm, moist house to encourage rapid growth; a house with a temperature such as palms are grown in is about right. They should be frequently syringed, and as soon as the long fronds have made a good growth they can be removed to lighter and cooler quarters.

Anemone Japonica.

One of the most useful perennials for the fall is the Anemone Japonica. It blooms at a time when flowers are very scarce, and if planted where it can be protected from the early frosts will produce quantities of bloom that can be made of use in all classes of floral work. The successful blooming of this plant depends much upon its summer culture. If the season is dry it will require constant watering, in fact, a good soaking. It is a good plan to place the hose in a bed of this and let the water run until the ground is thoroughly wet, and do this as often as may be required. It will amply repay in the long, strong shoots that will be produced in the fall full of blooms. The florist not possessing a good stock of this beautiful perennial should procure some of it and plant a bed for fall cutting.

THE RETAIL TRADE

Conducted by Robt. Kift, Philadelphia, Pa.

The Sultana Centerpiece.

The sultana will make a very effective centerpiece when combined with gypsophila or a similar small white dainty flower. Or, use the pink garden rose buds just breaking. Make the arrangement in a round flat center basket, using the sultanas in the center, banking whatever combination is used to fill in the balance of the basket. The foliage of the sultana can be excellently used in between in an effective loose arrangement. If the gypsophila is not used the white field daisy is well suited to the combination. Place around the edge of the basket about six large pond lily leaves and on each one arrange a large pink pond lily. Four tall brass candlesticks of the spindle variety can be advantageously placed around the centerpiece, and instead of a candle, place a large pink pond lily. Put under each candlestick a large pond lily leaf. For favors use tiny porcelain watering pots filled with a few sultanas and their foliage. This lily on the candlestick should be placed flat on the top of the stick and should be a fine, large spreading blossom. A. E. K.

The Square Deal.

I have been much interested in the article written by W. H. Culp, published in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of July 27. It has sometimes been said that a man who tries to be fair and impartial is not likely to greatly please either side engaged in a controversy. Taking that risk, I shall try to point out a few facts that are worthy of the consideration of both wholesalers and retailers. And here permit me to quote from the letter of your Philadelphia correspondent, also in your issue of July 27:

"The one class of men who have great faith in the future are the florists' supply dealers and the way they are stocking up for the coming season is a revelation to those who are not in close touch with the business. Drayloads of huge cases are arriving daily until extra warehouses have to be obtained to store the stock until it can be handled or is sent out in case lots unopened."

He says it is a "revelation" and I doubt not that it would be a greater revelation to many growers, and wholesale dealers in cut flowers if they knew just how much artificial and prepared stock is going into these "extra warehouses." It is however, the business of the supply men to carry in stock and sell what brings them profit and much as I deplore the introduction of so much artificial stock into the business I cannot blame the supply men. In the regular course of business I have recently had occasion to visit a number of retail stores, in cities of from ten to one hundred thousand population, and I have been astonished at the quantity of artificial funeral work that is carried by many of them. While all this is going on, we are reading of "gluts" in the cut flower market, that is, during the season when there is supposed to be and should be good business.

I am not going into the question of who deserves the most blame for I think that there is blame to be laid at the doors of some growers, some wholesalers and some retailers. I will concede that there are men in all three branches who do their best along the lines of a square deal, but there are others who do not. The wholesaler is to some extent between two fires. To do business he must have growers and it is equally necessary for him to have customers in the retail trade. It is a well known fact to all who have had much experience in the wholesale business that the proper packing of flowers is an unknown art in some greenhouses, and that is doubtless just as true of some wholesale houses.

Again taking up the question of artificial flowers, if they must be sold it is better that a retailer should sell them than some one outside the trade for the reason that the retailer may and should diplomatically try to persuade the customer to use natural flowers; if he does not do that he should come out openly and state to what branch of business he belongs, for certainly he should not be classed as a florist. Within their proper sphere, the florists' supply dealers are a very commendable and useful branch of the trade, but I would be glad to see the time come when they could not sell one artificial design. I would not have that condition brought about by any concern or, in police parlance, "strong-arm" methods, but by the devotion of every true florist to his own guild and craft. BILL, THE BOS'N.

The Green and White Table.

Take a handsome silver epergne, fill the center with white roses of sturdy growth, and round the lower part fill in with lily of the valley. Round the epergne arrange large white rosettes of white tulle, from which extend a green ribbon of pale tint to match the lightest green of the lily of the valley foliage. This ribbon should reach to the plate line. The brides' initials in plaster of paris or raised gold or silver should be on each ribbon streamer of green and placed about the center midway between the white rosette round the epergne and guest's plate. Light the table with green candles, using light green silk shades covered with lily of the valley. Use pyramid bunches of lily of the valley for favors.

A. E. KLUNDER.

Smilax.

The beds of smilax for the next season's cutting should be planted not later than July 15. The beds should be prepared at once and this soil should be composed of one-fourth rotted manure. Take all means possible to have soil that is free from cut worms. Watch carefully when the soil is turned and carried into the house. There is no crop which these worms more quickly ruin than smilax, and they are very difficult to find on the thick strings. They eat off the tender tip and that is the end of that string. The plants should be set four to five inches apart in the row and the rows a foot apart. Wires should then be stretched over each row and another set of wires five feet or more above those over the bench. Strings should be fastened from one wire to another directly over the plant. This should be done as soon as the bed is planted that the vines may have something upon which to run. In tying the strings one man will often tie twice as many as another simply because he has found a more efficient way. But the strings should all be taut and not some looser than others. The best and quickest way we have ever found is to cut the strings the proper length first, pass one end over the top wire and tie a slip-noose and pull it tight to the wire, then pass the other end around the lower wire, holding it taut by placing the little finger against it on the wire, pass the end of the string around the taut string and make a half-hitch around the wire, pulling tight against the string where it is held by the little finger. The old smilax bed, if it is to be grown another year, will need to have the soil renewed. A good rich soil should be used and placed between the rows and level around the plants. This should be given a good watering and then watered sparingly until the plants begin to grow. The young stock also should not be watered too heavily until growth starts.

Stevla.

The stevia plants will grow very rapidly at this season and will have to be kept well cut back all the time, the plants gone over every few days and the ends of the shoots cut off. A method adopted by a good grower the past season is worthy of trial by all. When the plants are topped back in July the cuttings are placed in the propagating bench, where if kept well watered they will root easily. As soon as rooted they are potted in flats about four inches apart in moderately rich soil. These as soon as established are placed outside and given the necessary attention and the same care which the older plants receive. When about eight inches high the tops are pinched off. These young plants will grow finely with straight sprays, and are in all respects much superior to the sprays cut from the large plants. This is a very economical and easy method of growing this very useful crop for cut flowers and is one which can be well adopted.

Hardy Herbaceous and Alpine Plants at the London International.*

If the rock gardens are taken into account there were more exhibitors in this group than in any other in the whole exhibition. And yet owing to the way the schedule had been drafted the herbaceous plants proper were inferior as a class to what one sees almost every fortnight at the ordinary shows of the Royal Horticultural Society. Nearly 120 classes were allotted to hardy plants in the schedule, but trees and shrubs, alpine, annuals and biennials, bamboos, bulbous plants, conifers, topiary work, etc., were jumbled up in such a way that what should have been the very finest feature of the exhibition, especially at the time of year, was really comparatively poor and in no way represented what fine things the hardy plantsmen can do when they are untrammelled by classes that do not fit their business. One accustomed to the magnificent displays every year at the Temple could not but regret the absence of the masses of May-flowering tulips, the brilliant Oriental poppies, the eremurus, the herbaceous pæonies, hybrid delphiniums, phloxes, pentstemons, columbines, early flowering gladioli, gaillardias, liliums, irises, pyrethrums, lupins and many other old favorites that always give an air of grandeur to any exhibition of note. Of course these plants were represented in bits large and small all over the place, but there were few magnificently striking banks such as one would expect to see at a place where there was an abundance of space available. Some of the most important groups of hardy herbaceous perennials and rock gardens also were set up by Barr & Son, Covent Garden; Wallace & Co., Colchester; Bees, Liverpool; Cutbush & Son; Kelway & Son, Langport, Somerset; Jackman & Son, Enfield, Middlesex; Maurice Prichard, Christchurch, Hants; Artindale & Sons, Sheffield; Whitelegge & Page, Chislehurst; Backhouse & Son, York; James Carter & Co.; H. Hemsley, Crawley; Misses Hopkins, Shepperton; Cunningham & Fraser, Edinburgh; Clarence Elliott, Stevenage; A. & G. Clark, Dover; Thomson & Charman, Bushey, Herts; Craven Nursery, Clapham; Pulham & Son, Elsenham; G. Reuthe, Keston, Kent; T. S. Ware, Feltham, Middlesex; G. Bunyard & Co., Maidstone; Cheal & Sons, Crawley, and many others, including some amateurs. M. Correvon, from Geneva, had a small but very interesting collection of alpine plants from the Swiss mountains, little gems that attracted the connoisseurs. Without specifying the exhibitor it may be of interest to note the plants that struck one as being the most interesting in this section. Aster alpinus was shown by many and its clear magenta blue marguerite-like flower heads always attracted. Aubrietias in variety in the rock gardens shed their purple glow everywhere, although it was a little late for them. Mrs. Lloyd Edwards is one of the newer and best forms. Cypripedium Calceolus and C. Spectabile are two hardy orchids that are nearly always to be met with. meconopsis, ramondias, and a host of other plants were in evidence. Perhaps one of the most brilliant plants in the open air was Habranthus pratensis, in Wallace & Co.'s collection. The tubular flowers are of a vivid scarlet and attract one's eye from many yards distance.

Aquilegas.

These flowers have become immensely popular, since the introduction of the improved forms of the long-spurred varieties. During recent years a great development has taken place amongst them, and a high standard of excellence attained. It was not very long ago that aquilegas were looked upon as commonplace, but now they are considered as well deserving a foremost position among herbaceous plants, says a writer in the Gardeners' Magazine of London. Their hardihood goes without saying, although some are apparently not of such strong constitution as others. They are exceedingly accommodating, and will thrive where many subjects fail. Beautiful effects are to be obtained by freely planting them in the wild garden and in shady walks, in bold groups of two or three dozen plants.

Although not commonly used for decorative purposes in pots, they are excellent for furnishing the conservatory, and a group in flower is very pleasing. Two-year-old plants are most suitable for potting in October, and wintering in cold frames. In the early part of the year they should be placed in a cold house when the flower spikes soon appear. On no account must there be any attempt at undue forcing, or few flower spikes will be the result of the treatment. When the spikes are a few inches high, a little stimulant should be given to the plants, which will greatly assist in the production of good flowers.

The results in the second flowering season are no doubt the best; the blossoms are finer and more numerous than they are at any time. After the plants have flowered the third year, it is advisable to dig them up, throw them away, and plant young stock. To carry out this scheme of cultivation, it is necessary to raise a batch of seedlings annually, which will enable one to maintain a succession of strong flowering plants, from which satisfactory results will be obtained. Raising the seedlings is a simple matter, but is absolutely necessary that a good strain be obtained or disappointment will surely follow, and time and labor be wasted.

Hundreds of plants are easily raised from seeds in a cold frame or hand-light, no artificial heat whatever being required for the purpose. May is the most suitable month for seed sowing, and the plants thus raised are able to make a good season's growth before the first winter. We use pots or boxes for sowing the seeds in, and these are filled with a mixture of leaf-soil and loam in equal parts, adding sufficient sand to keep it open. When the seeds are sown, the pots or boxes are placed in a cold frame or hand-light until germination takes place, covering the former with glass and paper to prevent undue evaporation. It frequently happens that the seeds germinate very irregularly. The young seedlings are transplanted into other boxes and afforded cold frame treatment until they are well established, when they are gradually hardened off and transferred to well-prepared nursery beds, being planted out in rows, twelve inches apart, and about nine inches from plant to plant. Here they will become well established before the winter arrives, and be quite capable of looking after themselves.

Given good treatment during the first season, that is, from the sowing of the seeds until the plants are put out into nursery beds, many plants will flower the following season. It is an easy matter to determine which crowns are likely to produce flower spikes when growth commences by their plumpness, and all such may be planted in their flowering quarters, and the smaller crowns be replanted in the nursery beds for another season.

Slugs are extremely fond of the young tender growths, and they quickly ruin a batch of seedlings if measures are not taken to prevent them doing so. A slight dressing of artificial manure, lightly forked in between the plants before growth commences, acts as a protection from slugs, and as a stimulant to the plants.

As aquilegas are early summer-flowering plants, the question of what shall be done with the gap caused by the cessation of their flowers arises. This may be filled by planting gladioli between them, as these former produce a display when the aquilegas are over. Again, the aquilegas may be safely lifted when their flowering season is over, and the gap made good with early-flowering chrysanthemums. Of course, the latter must be grown in nursery beds for this purpose, but the extra trouble is amply repaid. The operation of lifting both the aquilegas and chrysanthemums must be carefully carried out, and if dull, showery weather can be selected for it, success will surely follow.

THE CARNATION.

After the Planting.

The three or four weeks following the planting in from the field is a critical period for the plant and calls for the grower's closest application to every detail necessary to encourage the plants to make a good start in the fresh soil. It will be necessary during the first six or eight days to give the plants light sprayings two or three times a day to keep them from wilting, but avoid heavy syringings that the soil may not get too wet. Six or eight days after planting the roots will have taken hold of the soil and the mud shading can be gradually removed from the glass. For the first removing wash enough of the shade off so as to lighten the house up without letting in a bright glare from the sun. It is best whenever possible to do the first washing off in the afternoon, which gives the plants a chance to stiffen up and withstand the light and heat of the next day. The soil of the beds should be kept open by frequently scratching the surface and all weeds should be removed as they appear.

A close atmosphere must be avoided and the plants given all the air possible both night and day as long as the weather conditions will permit. However, guard against heavy rains coming through the open ventilators to soak the soil. After the roots get hold of the soil the plants will grow rapidly, making a careful tapping back of the shoots essential. This work is one of the very important items at this time, because the success of the winter's cut depends to a great extent upon the number of shoots that we can encourage the plants to make. Every variety will not stand the same degree

Benenequen Plant Export Restrictions

The sale of young plants for shipment from the Yucatan Peninsula is looked upon with disfavor by growers and the Government alike. The State of Yucatan has imposed an export duty of $2.49 (United States currency) per kilo (2.2046 pounds) upon these plants if shipments of same meet all legal requirements, or $7.47 otherwise. These restrictions practically prohibit the exportation of young benenequen plants from Yucatan.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

of pinching the shoots back. There must be a let-up on the pinching of the varieties with heavy foliage and short-jointed habits or the plants will be very late in coming into bloom. Take as an example those of the Mrs. T. W. Lawson and Victory habit, which require a longer season than Beacon or the Enchantress family, they being more wiry and quicker in growth.

As soon as the plants have become established in the soil the beds should be gone over and the surface of the soil leveled up so that they will take water evenly. If the soil appears to be spongy and not firm enough to allow for the water to pass through it, go over it and firm down to the right degree. It is very important that the fight to keep down the aphid and red spider be kept up regularly by continued sprayings of the plants with the different nicotine preparations about once a week or every tenth day.

Burning and Damping.

Plants grown naturally in bush form and not disbudded never show such defects. From this we must conclude neither the heat generated by the sun nor excessive humidity of the atmosphere are the direct causes. It is a combination of conditions which bring it about. The concentration of the elements required to produce large blooms through the process of disbudding gives the tissues of the petals such a quality that unfavorable weather either from excessive heat or moisture destroys them. From heat we call it burning, from moisture damping.

The more the blooms are exhilarated by such processes the more they suffer. out of doors or rain continues for several days there is little help for the blooms that have been generously treated.

ELMER D. SMITH.

Selection of Buds.

As the planting season is practically at an end the most important work for the present is weeding, tying and looking after aphid and other insects which infest the chrysanthemums. Those who planted the early kinds during May or early June can begin selecting buds from such varieties as Golden Glow, Monrovia, Smith's Advance, Unaka, October Frost and its yellow sport. Doubtless many buds of Golden Glow, Monrovia and Smith's Advance have already been retained. They will give satisfactory results provided the plants are vigorous and the desire is early blooms.

August 5 to 10 for Unaka should give the crop the first week of October. We find August 20 the best date for Chrysolora, although they may be taken as early as the fifth and make good blooms, but from a commercial standpoint we do not think them as good as the later ones, which are smoother and more perfect in form as well as brighter in color. This variety should be ready to market from October 15 to 25. Most of the other so-called early kinds such as Clementine Touse, Comoleta, Donatello, Early Snow, Glory of Pacific, Ivory, J. K. Shaw, Pacific Supreme, Pink Ivory, Polly Rose, Robert Halliday, Roserie, Virginia Poehlmann, Yellow Ivory and Yellow Touse are more satisfactory from buds selected August 15 to August 20, bringing them to maturity about two months later. Those interested in the exhibition sorts will be watching for the best buds on the kinds they are growing.

It is quite probable some of the eastern growers have at this time saved a few, but those in the middle west need not be apprehensive, as we find the early August buds seldom give the best blooms. If we were certain of cool weather from now on we would favor their selection, but as there are still two months which are apt to be very warm we would prefer buds selected August 15 or later for this purpose.

bloom in November—provided the other necessary requirements of the plants are taken care of, such as shifting along in early spring so that they do not become hard, planting out in the field in good season and caring for them while there, then transferring them to the benches inside not later than August 15 and attending to their wants afterwards.

The establishment of E. Houston & Co., Sistersville, W. Va., is a nice range of modern houses consisting of a new carnation house, which we illustrate, a rose house, a sweet pea and plant house 200 feet long, and a propagating house 100 feet long. The walls are all seven feet six inches high, four feet of glass and remainder of concrete. The boiler house is constructed of concrete blocks. Cisterns have been provided with capacity enough to supply the whole place. Situated in the gas belt, they have a gas well that furnishes 3,500,000 feet of gas per month, enough to furnish the boilers with ready fuel.

fer. The ideal weather for developing blooms is bright sun with cool air so that the temperature does not exceed 85° under glass. Shading the glass helps to reduce the temperature and care in applying water lessens the humidity, so are thus both helpful, but when the heat reaches 80° in the shade

Chemical Foods for Chrysanthemums.

Percy A. Cragg, in the Transactions of the National Chrysanthemum Society of England.

In placing before you this evening the conclusions arrived at as results of our experiments and observations in soil preparation as applied to chrysanthemums grown in pots, I am not claiming that my firm has originated entirely fresh ideas on the subject, but rather that an attempt has been made to replace the rule of thumb method by one more up-to-date and scientific, and on a larger scale than has perhaps hitherto been attempted.

During one wet season we found that our chrysanthemums had been considerably overfed with compound manures; an error very easily committed through carelessness or bad judgment, when 30,000 to 40,000 pots are grown. That meant a loss on the quality of the bloom, loss of the manure given, and the cost of the labor for applying it. To prevent a recurrence of this loss, which might easily be serious, we decided to try other methods of feeding. An obvious alternative was to enrich the soil. We therefore consulted a horticultural chemist, and, acting on his advice, decided to mix with the soil the greater portion of our chemical manures, and to put them into the soil in such forms as would give us a regular succession of foods suitable for the plants during the period of their growth.

Our first difficulty after this decision was arrived at was to know exactly how rich the compost should be. Ultimately we decided on the following analysis, or, rather, partial analysis, for our working basis. It is the analysis of a good rich soil, which shows the following percentage of the four chief necessities for plant life: Phosphoric acid .5, potash .25, nitrogen .45, lime 2.0. We did not think it necessary to worry about any other ingredients, as most of them are present in the majority of soils in sufficient quantities. Magnesia may have to be taken into account with some soils, but our soil contains plenty; and further, our water is magnesia hard.

Having settled on what seemed most adapted for our purpose, we proceeded to carry theory into practice. The portion of a field selected for the next season's crop was stripped, and to it was added one part of mushroom manure to six of soil. The whole was thoroughly mixed and samples were then drawn from different parts of the heap; these were again mixed, and then a portion was sent to the analyst. His report showed the soil to be considerably poorer than we desired it to be. Sufficient potash was present, but the quantity of phosphoric acid, nitrogen and lime was undoubtedly insufficient. The manures we decided to use eventually were as follows: basic slag, containing lime and phosphates; bone-meal, containing nitrogen and phosphates; ground hoof, for nitrogen only; and ordinary gray burnt lime. The basic slag was the 38 per cent brand, passing through a sieve 10,000 meshes to the inch; the bone-meal showed 4.5 nitrogen and 45 phosphates, and was of one-eighth inch grist; the hoof was also of one-eighth inch grist, and showed 15 of nitrogen, while the lime was ordinary builder's gray lime, and showed 77 per cent purity. We obtained by these manures nitrogen and phosphates of various degrees of solubility. As the nitrogen of the soil and mushroom manure was exhausted, that from the bone-meal would be available, and finally the hoof would give up its portion. For phosphates the order of solubility would be, first the soil and mushroom manure, then the bone-meal, and lastly the basic slag.

Our soil is alluvial, and is like most soils of that nature, deficient in lime. The majority of our analyses showed less than 1.0 of lime. We have been content to raise this to about 2.0, using one and one-third tons of lime 77 per cent purity to 100 tons of soil. To use more at a time would probably cause heating, and a portion of the nitrogen contained in the chemicals would be lost. Lime is very easily added during the growing season if required, by merely dusting the surface of the pots with it.

I have mentioned that we did not take potash into account, as we thought that the analysis showed it to be present in sufficient quantity. Further experience has caused us to reconsider this decision. Having constantly to battle against fungoid diseases, we came to the conclusion that something was lacking in our treatment. We found that where we used extra potash for tomatoes we had less mildew, the deduction being that although potash was present in fair quantity, it could not be readily available. For our next year's crop, therefore, we shall add potash manures, and shall try to raise the percentage to .35. Kainit, and all the ashes from wood and refuse fires, will be applied to the field as a surface dressing during the winter, and sulphate of potash will be mixed with the soil at the final turning.

Dr. A. D. Hall, of Rothamstead, says there is abundant proof to show that potash makes plants more resistant to fungoid diseases. That is a hint worth following by those growers who suffer from rust. Potash also appears to delay maturity—another useful hint for a dry season. Last season we added soot to our compost, ten bags being mixed with 100 yards of soil. The result has proved beneficial both in color and foliage. For the coming season we shall increase the soot to fifteen bags per hundred yards of soil.

The following are the particulars of the ingredients mixed with the soil for the 1911 crop: To each 100 cubic yards of soil (we take 1 yard to be equivalent to 1 ton as the soil is stacked), we added one and one-third tons of lime (77 per cent purity), one-half ton of basic slag (38 per cent), three-fourths ton bone-meal (4.5 N., 45.0 P.), 12 cwt. ground hoof (15.0 N.), and 10 bags of soot. This added to our original analysis gave the following percentages: Lime 2.0, nitrogen .447, phosphate .615, potash .32. The approximate cost per 100 yards was £15 for the manures and soot, excluding mushroom manure.

Such is, roughly outlined, the system we work upon, and since adopting it we have found an all-round improvement in the size, lasting qualities, and the color of our blooms. All soils will not respond to the same treatment, but the root idea will be found to be the same, viz., to raise the percentages of the different elements necessary to plant life until a well-balanced compost is obtained; and, further, to have them present in such forms that a constant succession of complete food is available.

Soils that have already present a fair proportion of lime would probably take super-phosphate better than basic slag. For those that are rich in nitrogen steamed bone flour would be more economical than bone meal. I would advise that hoof be used if possible because of its lasting qualities. The size of the grist of the bone meal and hoof is a factor of great importance when the rate of solubility is considered. Now that hoof is so dear and is difficult to obtain, a larger grist of bone meal might be made to take its place, using, perhaps, one-eighth inch and three-eighths inch grist together. Ground chalk would probably be more beneficial on light, dry soils, or with those that already have a fair percentage of lime. On our heavy soil the amount of chalk that would be necessary would have a bad mechanical effect. These are, of course, questions that would have to be discussed with a competent horticultural chemist by those who have not the necessary knowledge of horticultural chemistry.

Before leaving this part of my paper, I would emphasize the necessity for great care in the mixing, if manures in quantity are used. Lime in all cases ought to be put on the ground in the autumn and allowed to lie for a month or two in order to become well slaked by the atmosphere. The soil should be stacked for three months, mixing in the chemicals just before the compost is required. Two or three turns are required to ensure equal distribution. It is preferable to have the soil in small heaps, rather than in one large one, to allow the air to circulate through the heaps and to minimize the risk of heating.

In ordinary seasons we have found weak feeds of stable liquid and of soot water, with an occasional feed of compound manure mixed with a large bulk of soil, quite sufficient to carry the blooms to perfection. A season like 1911, however, upsets calculations considerably, owing to the enormous quantities of water required by the plants, and consequent loss by drainage from the soil.

The method I have outlined in reality denotes only one stage, the commencement, for those who wish to work on scientific and economical lines. As the soil is the starting-point of all our work, the pasture should be taken in hand some years before it is required. Nitrogen is the dearest food we have to buy, but it can be obtained at a trifling cost from the atmosphere by the aid of leguminous plants. Our mode of procedure is as follows: We have a field of about four acres of turf, which we hope to make last for the next twenty-five years. It is stripped in sections to a depth of about 6 inches. The stripped portion is then dug about 2 feet deep, plenty of mushroom manure worked in, rolled down firmly, and sown with a mixture of seeds containing a fair proportion of deep-rooting grasses and of clover. Lime, basic slag, and, perhaps, potash are to be applied in yearly dressings.

We hope to have formed a turf richer in all essentials than the original in from five to six years. Then the process will be repeated as turf is wanted. Having a light brick earth to work on, we estimate to lower in time the original level by 2 feet, and still leave a decent turf.

The work of seeding is expensive, but the increased crops of hay or green feed will often repay the cost. We obtained in 1910 five cuts of grass from a piece sown that year, and three even in a dry season like the past.

Light sowings of clover, together with dressings of a complete manure, will improve a poor pasture out of recognition. Dr. A. D. Hall makes a point of the increase of clovers and other leguminous plants as the result of dressings of manures containing potash. He gives an instance where leguminous plants increased from 20 per cent. to 50 per cent. as the result of complete feeding. Before I close, there are one or two manures we use, in addition to those already mentioned, that I should like to speak about.

I have said that lime may be sprinkled on the tops of the pots during the growing season. Its effect is often magical. Its action is to render the insoluble forms of food available. On one occasion we used plain soil and a sprinkling of lime as a top-dressing, and the plants shot up at such a rate that they had to be checked by a stiff dose of super-phosphate. Super-phosphate we use largely in quantities of one-quarter ounce to one-half ounce per 10-inch pot, mixed with three times its bulk of soil. Its action is to stiffen the stems, check the growth of the foliage, and improve the color of the blooms. Nitrate of potash and phosphate of potash are expensive manures to buy, but prove fairly cheap to use. Mixed together in equal quantities, and used at the rate of one-half ounce to one ounce per gallon of water, they form a complete food. By altering the mixture, either nitrogen or phosphate may be increased or decreased.

The last item I have to talk about is sulphate of iron. We find chrysanthemums, especially some varieties, in cold, wet seasons, are apt to turn a bit yellow. The uncongenial conditions upset them; they, in fact, suffer from what may be termed anaemia.

and require iron. A dose of sulphate of iron, one-half ounce to the gallon, will quickly restore a healthy color to the foliage. It should be mixed in wooden vessels, and be applied from well-painted cans.

I think I have laid before you the main principles we apply in our nurseries, and I hope I have been successful in presenting them clearly. My aim has been to put before you concisely what little knowledge we have acquired of a difficult subject. I would advise those who wish to adopt the same methods to go into the matter thoroughly and carefully under competent advice. The methods outlined are, of course, as useful for other crops as they are for chrysanthemums. I have necessarily only been able to touch my subject very slightly in the time at my disposal; it really requires hours to do it justice. If I have not made myself clear, I offer you my apologies, and can only say that I shall be only too pleased to answer any questions as far as I am able.

New Hardy Perennials of Recent Years.

In the general uplift, speaking horticulturally, great strides have been made of late in the introduction of new herbaceous plants, China and even Tibet have contributed liberally to our riches and varieties of garden origin are still being produced. In a general way, it is of much more importance to get a new species from its native habitat than a garden form, for the first may lead to many of the last named, either directly by seed and selection and also by crossing or even hybridizing. As an illustration mention may be made of the new hardy primulas from China or Tibet, recently seen thriving vigorously in shady nooks with moisture, in the Highland Park, Rochester, N. Y. They are not listed yet to any extent in catalogues, but are something to look forward to in the near future as seeds germinate freely, and the flower spikes are three feet high.

Another new introduction is the original type of the Japan anemone recently found growing wild by Mr. Wilson, and said to be absolutely hardy, whereas all other known forms of it are uncertain. It is doubtful if we ever had this plant in cultivation before, the other being a cultivated form introduced from Japan and supposed to be the type. This has been the case with scores of other things, called Japonica, introduced by the shrewd Japs, cultivated, improved out of knowledge, worshipped for centuries, but belonging in China—an instance of this is the discovery for the first time of the wild parent of our herbaceous paeony, possibly the rarest of hardy plants in cultivation. The writer saw them recently in a garden of note among a lot of other rarities, including the new hardy cypripediums. The roots of these had been collected seven months before, and when put in the ground again blossomed freely. This hardy orchid is said to be the commonest plant where found, and it will not be long before some of the present day enterprise makes it common in gardens. We hope it will be amenable to garden culture. Some of the American ones are not, as C. acaule, C. arietinum, C. montanum and C. Californicum.

While none of the plants mentioned are to be obtained readily, some not at all, it will be interesting to see what comes out of them by way of the cultivator. A new species today may mean untold progress. He is now equipped with a set of tools called the efforts of others, and results obtained, that enable him to do great work. Think of the Rosa Wichuraiana brought, it is said, from Japan—it is more likely to belong to China—and from this species we have been given the whole race of so-called Rambler roses. How would the gardens of today appear without ramblers, yet in the summer of 1890 the writer was shown a scrap about four inches high growing in a nursery, one of the first to get into commerce. This was R. Wichuraiana, but it had another name then.

We also have two new absolutely hardy lilies in L. myriophyllum and L. leucanthemum. Both are easily propagated and obtainable now. There is a great future for them when better known. Even under glass we are told they are likely to be valuable. Both have white flowers and come from China. It would be remarkable in itself if these were the only introductions of 1911 among hardy things.

Senecio clivorum is most likely to become grown in every garden, as it is vigorous as a rhubarb plant, almost as big and flowers freely and late in the season. Seeds are produced in abundance. It is obtainable now and will soon be in great demand; also from China. It looks like a valuable plant for naturalizing in semi-wild situations where it will have to take care of itself, and will do so if the soil is rich.

Of the aconites there are two new ones, A. Wilsoni and A. Fischeri, both valuable acquisitions where these monkshoods do well or are treated well, it is a question which. In Bar Harbor gardens we have seen them grown and exhibited more than the height of a man. Nothing could be more valuable in late summer gardening, but these aconites need liberal treatment as to nourishment and moisture, with fall planting in preference as the roots become active so early in spring. A. Wilsoni is the latest species to bloom and A. Fischeri is said to be the darkest flowered of all.

When the French medical missionary, Abbe Delavay, sent or brought from China the Incarvillea Delavayi it was a great gift to gardens, with the handsome acanthus-like foliage and long flower stems with individual blooms equal to a gloxinia or bignonia. Unlike many early flowering border plants, too, the foliage was good until fall. Now we have an improved form called grandiflora, rightly named, for it is a glorified form presumably coming true from seed or it would not have become available so soon in the trade. It takes some time for a new plant to become appreciated, so long at times that the raiser or introducer fails to profit to the proper extent. This is well known, but still worthy of remark. It goes to prove, too, that disseminators themselves do not realize how good a thing they have until the other fellow begins to propagate it in quantity. This incarvillea is good and seeds freely, the plants flowering the second year if the seed is sown when ripe, carried over winter dry in flats, planted out the next year, and they will flower the following year. Perfectly hardy. It is a remarkable coincidence that the genus incarvillea was made to commemorate the work along botanical lines of a French Jesuit missionary in 1743, and 150 years later exactly, another of the same order, Abbe Delavay, in 1893, introduced to cultivation the best species of this same genus.

Our lupins have always been blue, white, or yellow, Moerheim, presumably, has put some pink in with the white and did it very cleverly, too, for in Lupinus Moerheimii we have a perennial lupin of various shades of white and rose-pink, quite an acquisition if it proves a good perennial. It is certainly very pretty, but we have had no experience as to its duration.

Gypsophila paniculata fl. pl. has been a puzzle to us in this part of the country, so also has the type plant. Neither will grow well. It is probably due to the lime in the soil. It would be most valuable for the florist if it were possible to grow it, especially for making up in the summer months. Lupins, too, sometimes fail to grow where lime is present, or we should see them growing wild all over the continent owing to the way the ripe seeds are propelled.

The hardy border carnation, Countess Knuth, will be useful and is the only hardy yellow carnation. It will be offered next season and is well worth a trial, as its hardiness is assured, and propagation easy by means of cuttings. A new hardy single sweet violet, too, we are promised next year, Viola Pfitzeri, the best single violet yet, we are told, and if Pfizer, the raiser of so many good things, gives it his name there is still something to live for.

The Mountain Feather Fleece discovered to the trade recently is a plant of wonderful beauty, as seen exhibited in Lenox at the summer shows, resembling gigantic spikes of spirea five feet high when cut. This must be of value for decorative purposes and we are trying it in quantity. It loves a moist, rich soil, is a native of the southeastern states and quite hardy. The proper name is Stenanthium robustum, and it is of the lily family, therefore there is no mystery about the plant except the one that it was not introduced into cultivation 100 years ago instead of ten.

We do not know if the Mallow Marvells are generally appreciated at their true worth. Meehan certainly did a good thing, and we hope he made a good thing of it, when he began to disturb our native Hibiscus militaris, H. Moscheutos, H. coccineus, and probably the one known as Crimson Eye. All are natives of the swamps in the eastern states, from Massachusetts to Florida, where we find H. coccineus, this last not quite hardy in the north, but good to mix in for its color. These mallows we have grown for nearly 25 years; have seen pure white ones among the colored ones growing in the New Jersey meadows. Other cultivators have seen them undoubtedly, but it waited for one man to mix them. It was not hybridizing in any sense, but just plain meddling, and the greatest good that came out of it was that a very beautiful native genus of plants were made known far and wide, and the end is not yet, for last summer we saw them growing on the borders of one of the northern lakes at a popular summer resort. They certainly could be grown in Alaska, and any one who wants to beautify a low, wet location may plant Mallow Marvells with impunity. They will thrive as Moses did, even among the bullrushes.

One cannot help mentioning the hardy chrysanthemums, the offspring of C. maximum. There are a number of named kinds and all seem to be good as we noted them growing. Especially are they valuable for cutting in time of scarcity and they now possess a refinement equal to the indoor grown singles, but must be propagated from divisions of the roots or cuttings. If we attempt to raise them from seed we will get back to the epidemic of "Shasta Daisy." If Burbank ever possessed plants that produced blooms the size as advertised, he should never have sold seeds of any Shasta Daisy. These fine forms slide down grade so easy when we sow their seeds, as has been proven with seed bought from the best possible source. A plant known as Leucanthemum Nipponicum was noted as being a fine hardy chrysanthemum-like plant flowering freely from a dense mat of growth the last week in October; it had flowered all summer besides and it has a great promise for the future.

There is the usual crop of new phlox, pæonies and iris, but it is for some other one to note these for the benefit of readers. Today it is necessary to have a collection of all the best kinds to compare with new ones intelligently. If we go to see them growing it is not a fair comparison, for in the rush to increase it takes years for even a good thing to recuperate and be as nice as it can be. We must trust to the descriptions and draw on the imagination for a year or two before getting emphatic. E. O. O.

PATCHOGUE, N. Y.—Wm. Stone is erecting three new greenhouses.

WOBURN, MASS.—Samuel Petrilla has completed the framework of a new greenhouse 150 feet in length, in which he will grow violets.

COLUMBUS, O.—Paul M. Halbrooks, superintendent of the Columbus Floral Co., has bought the business of A. J. Baldwin, of Newark. He will take possession Aug. 1.

OBITUARY.

Francis A. Baller.

Francis A. Baller, well known wholesale florist of Bloomington, Ill., died suddenly as a result of heart failure at his home July 10. Mr. Baller was born in England and received his botanical education at Birmingham, in the government gardens. After coming to America he was located at different times at Rochester, N. Y., Niagara Falls and finally Bloomington. He started in business for himself in 1871. He was a proficient botanist and was known throughout the country as an authority on American horticulture. Mr. Baller was also a musician of note. He was twice married, his first wife being Miss Anne Standon, of England. Three children of this union—Robert Baller, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Lucy Malloy, Recatur, Ill., and Mrs. Alice Spinner, Clarinda, Ia.—survive. His second wife was Miss Jane Cunard and she and their two children—Mrs. Blanche Elmer and Mrs. J. H. Mueller, both of whom live in Bloomington—also survive the aged florist.

Albert M. Bommersbach.

Albert M. Bommersbach of Decatur, Ill., died at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Bommersbach, July 28, as a result of Bright's disease. He had been ill for several weeks, but was feeling better the morning of his death and visited the greenhouses of which he was the manager for the first time in several days. While there he became ill and shortly after his return home lost consciousness and remained in a comatose condition until his death. He was 33 years old and unmarried. Mr. Bommersbach was associated with his brother John in the floral business, their father having turned the N. Bommersbach floral shop and greenhouses over to them four years ago.

Casper Abrams.

Casper Abrams, a prominent retired florist of New York, died July 24, aged 80 years. Mr. Abrams was born in Germany and came to America in 1862. He located in Brooklyn and conducted a flower shop there until ten years ago, when he retired, turning his business over to his sons and removing to New York City. He is survived by two sons and three daughters: Chas. and Isaac Abrams, Mrs. A. A. Meyer, Mrs. G. Goldberg and Mrs. A. J. Freeman.

William H. Spangler.

William H. Spangler, for nearly twenty years a florist of Dover, N. J., died Thursday, July 9. He was about 55 years of age and had been an invalid following an operation four or five years ago. Heart trouble was the immediate cause of his death. He is survived by two sons, Fred Spangler, of Dover, and Cecil Spangler, of New Hampshire.

William Bester.

Wm. Bester, for many years one of the leading florists of Hagerstown, Md., died very suddenly last week. He was found by employes in his greenhouse in a spasm. Five minutes before he seemed in good health. He was removed to his home, where he died very shortly. Heart disease is given as the cause of his death.

NEW YORK.—John W. Richmond, florist and expert landscape gardener, died here July 22. He came here from England twenty years ago. He was 54 years old and is survived by his wife.

Amendments to Constitution and By-Laws to be acted upon:

To amend Article III, Section 2 (a).

"Sec. 2. Elections and Appointments:—

"(a) The president, first vice-president, secretary and treasurer shall be elected by ballot at the annual meeting of the Society, and their term of office shall begin with the first day of January next succeeding the election and shall continue for one year, or until their successors are duly elected and qualified."

by striking out the word "secretary"; and by adding: "The secretary shall be elected by the directors at the annual mid-Lent meeting and shall serve for one year. Seven (7) affirmative votes shall be necessary to elect, and nine (9) votes to remove him from office before the expiration of his term."

To amend Article III.

"GOVERNMENT, EXECUTIVE BOARD.

"Between the sessions of the Society its government shall be vested in an executive board, consisting of the president, junior ex-president, first vice-president, secretary, treasurer and six directors. A regular meeting of the board shall be held each year about mid-Lent, at the call of the secretary, upon such date as the president may direct, etc."

by striking out the word "secretary" in the third line, after "vice-president" and before "treasurer."

To amend Article V, Section 5.

"Sec. 5. Exhibitions. There shall be held, whenever practicable, in connection with each annual convention, an exhibition of materials and manufactures used in and products of horticulture. It shall be in charge of a superintendent, who shall be appointed by the executive board at its preliminary annual meeting, and shall be governed by such rules and regulations as the executive board shall adopt. Judges shall be appointed by the president and secretary at least one month before the exhibition."

by striking out the words "and secretary."

Resolution:—Be it Resolved, That the records of the proceedings of this Society for the year 1909, in convention at Cincinnati, Ohio, be corrected by adding the following, as adopted at the time:

"All members after paying dues continuously for twenty-five (25) years shall be known as 'Pioneer Members.' They shall be entitled to all the benefits and privileges of other members; shall be exempt from the payment of dues for the balance of their lives, and their names shall appear in a special list under an appropriate heading in the annual volume of the proceedings of the Society."

Amendment—To amend Article IV, Section 2, covering fees and assessments, by adding the following:

"Annual members after paying dues continuously for twenty-five years shall be known as 'Pioneer Members,' and shall be exempt from all future assessments."

THE premium list for the American Gladiolus Society's annual convention exhibition, to be held this year at the Coliseum, Chicago, August 20-23, is now ready and copies may be had on application to Secretary Merton L. Gage, Groton, Mass.

SECRETARY BENJAMIN HAMMOND of the American Rose Society has issued the second number of that organization's Rose Journal, with quite a varied and interesting list of contents. Mr. Hammond is making a brave attempt to disseminate information on the rose of value to amateurs and should have the co-operation of all commercial rose growers.

ACCORDING to Bulletin No. 3 of the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association, the annual exhibition of that organization will be held in Milwaukee, Wis., September 11-14 on the Wisconsin state fair grounds.

Personal.

Fritz Bahr, Chicago, who recently visited British Columbia with his boys, says Europe can not compare with America for fine scenery, and Fritz knows them both.

James S. Wilson, of Des Moines, Ia., writing from Portland, Ore., says: "I think this is about as near ideal as a man who loves things beautiful could wish for a town."

Harry Bayersdorfer, of Philadelphia, Pa., was in southern France July 15.

Convention Sports.

The prize list for the approaching sporting events to be held in connection with the convention of the Society of American Florists at Chicago, August 20-23, is now in preparation. Anyone who desires to donate a prize will greatly oblige by sending full particulars as early as possible. It is the desire of those in charge of this department of convention work to make it the biggest and best bowling, shooting and outing occasion ever held in connection with the annual meeting of the national organization. All communications bearing on the convention sports and prizes, therefore, should be addressed to C. J. Graham, 12349 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, O.

The donors should send particulars of their prizes early so as to afford those in charge an opportunity of giving them full publicity.

American Gladiolus Society.

PLANT REGISTRATION.

Public notice is hereby given that the following named varieties of gladioli have been registered by the nomenclature committee of the American Gladiolus Society:

ORIGINATOR'S DESCRIPTIONS.

By Dr. C. Hoeg, Decorah, Iowa—
Decoration: orange pink, throat somewhat lighter, suffused with pale yellow. Flowers large, four and one-half inches across; well placed; of good form and substance. Plant strong and healthy with dark green foliage and straight stem. Height 3½ to 4 feet. A good multiplier. Blossomed first in 1908. Hiawatha (No. 10): light salmon pink with yellow blotches in the throat. Medium sized flowers, four inches across. Medium strong grower with healthy dark green foliage and straight stem. Height probably three feet. A medium multiplier. Blossomed first in 1908.

A. C. BEAL,
Chairman Nomenclature Committee.

United States Wants Botanical Assistant.

An examination to fill vacancies in the position of assistant in botanical work, Bureau of Plant Industry, Department of Agriculture, at salaries from $1,200 to $1,600 per annum, is announced by the civil service commission for August 21. The examination is open to males only between the ages of 18 and 45. The announcement says that "an educational training equivalent to two years' college work in botany, which must include not less than one year's training in botanical laboratory technique, is a prerequisite for consideration for this position." There are three subjects, as follows: Practical questions in botany and botanical laboratory technique, 35 "weights"; thesis, 25 "weights"; education, training, experience and fitness, 40 "weights."

Canadian Association's Convention.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, to be held in Montreal, August 6-9, bids fair to be a notable one and great interest is manifested by the members and others. Among the numbers on the programme will be the following papers: "Cost of Production of Florists' Stock," by W. W. Gammage, London, Ont.; "Economic Management of a Retail Store," by George M. Geraghty, Toronto, Ont.; "Commercial Orchids," by Thomas Manton, Eglinton, Ont. There will also be practical demonstrations in the arrangement of cut flowers by H. Dilleuth, also of Toronto. The association banquet will be held Thursday evening, August 8. The officers are: A. C. Wilshire, president; Walter Muston, first vice-president; H. B. Cowan, second vice-president; Julius Luck, secretary; C. H. Janzen, treasurer.

Sawdust Manure.—It is very generally believed by both gardeners and farmers in this country that farmyard or stable manure made with sawdust as litter is not so valuable as that made with straw. The same opinion is held by both classes of cultivators in the United States, and in order to ascertain if there is any real foundation for the belief so general some experiments were begun at the Maryland Experimental Station in 1908, and continued on a large scale for three years with flowering plants grown under glass-houses. Comparisons were made between (1) cow manure made with sawdust as litter; (2) cow manure made with straw or chopped maize stalks as litter; (3) cow manure free from litter of any kind, the cows being kept on a cement floor without bedding. The manure was collected and left in a heap until some fermentation had taken place. This broke down the strawy litter considerably, but the sawdust had quite a fresh appearance when it was applied. The same amounts of the different manures were used, and they were all thoroughly worked into the soil. The plants tested were roses, carnations, chrysanthemums, and sweet peas. In no case could any harmful effect of the sawdust be detected, and, in fact, taking the average of the three years, the manure containing it gave slightly the largest number of blooms. For other reasons, however, it was concluded that for the particular circumstances manure without litter of any kind was the best.

Lobelia Tenuior.—There is a form of this lobelia with pinkish flowers, but I much prefer the original species, with blossoms of a deep, rich blue and a conspicuous white eye. This lobelia, which is a native of the Swan River district of Western Australia, has long been known in this country, but it is only within the last decade or two that its merits have become generally recognized. Belonging to the same section as lobelia erinus, or speciosa, lobelia tenuior is altogether a larger grower, while the flowers also show a corresponding increase in size. It is a very desirable subject for greenhouse decoration, under which conditions a succession of its pretty flowers is kept up for some time, while grown in suspended baskets it forms a delightful feature. An item of note is, that while most of the leaves are entire, some of those towards the base are pinnate.

SUPPLY INCREASING.

The supply of stock is increasing considerably, and gladioli, asters, roses, sweet peas and lilies can be seen in large quantities at nearly all the wholesale stores this week. Good roses are good property and are selling well, but there is a great oversupply of short-stemmed stock. White roses are very scarce, and so are orchids. American Beauty roses are moving freely, but gladioli are not selling as good as they were last week. Asters and sweet peas are of good quality, and the supply of other outdoor stock is as large as ever. Some cut hydrangeas are now arriving, and a few peonies are still obtainable. A large supply of Mrs. Aaron Ward roses are arriving, and the quality is very good. Radiance and Prince De Bulgarie are having a good cull, and Killarney, My Maryland and Kaiserin Augusta Victoria are finding ready buyers. Killarney roses are in fine shape and show exceptionally good color. Gladioli are fine this season, and some exceptionally grand America and Mrs. Francis King, as well as several new varieties, are to be had. Lily of the valley is plentiful and the quality is now a good deal better than it has been. The supply of Melody roses is much shorter and greens of all kinds are very plentiful. Both the local and shipping trade were very good the latter part of last week, but the shipping trade fell off considerably the opening of the week, and even the local trade was not up to the average. Lilies sold very good on Tuesday morning and the large supply that was on hand was pretty well cleaned up about noon. The supply of asters and gladioli on Tuesday was very large and reminded one of the peonies during the peony glut.

NOTES.

Matt. Mann, junior member of the firm of Zech & Mann, has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his nine year old son Lambert, who died Tuesday evening, July 30, from the effects of drinking nicotine. It seems that Mr. Mann had taken the bottle from the shelf and was preparing to make a solution when he was called into the house for supper and naturally being in a hurry forgot all about the nicotine and left it on the bench. Lambert left the table before the rest and strolled into the greenhouse and mistaking the nicotine for root beer he took a good drink before he realized his mistake and then ran to tell his mother that he believed he drank some paris green. He died in a very few seconds after, before medical aid could be summoned and before his parents had fully realized what had happened. The funeral was held from the St. Gregory's catholic church and the remains were laid to rest in the family lot in St. Henry's cemetery on Wednesday, July 31.

J. F. Kidwell says that there are now 56 stockholders in the Chicago Flower Growers' Association and 76 consignors on their list. He says that trade has been very good all season, and that the outlook is very bright for the ensuing year. A fine grade of Killarney roses and cut hydrangeas are leaders at their store this week.

Kroeschell Bros. Co. sold three boilers this week through their advertisement in THE AMERICAN FLORIST—one to R. W. Allen of Hudson, N. Y., and two to the Oakland Floral Co. of Kirkwood, Mo.

Ed. Wojthiewicz has returned from a most enjoyable visit with relatives at Omaha, Neb.

29 on a fishing trip to the northern lakes of Wisconsin.

Frank Fischer, the well-known carnation grower, left July 26 to accept a position with the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. of Pittsburg, Pa.

Louis Wittbold has returned from a most enjoyable visit with relatives at Wheeling and is again attending to his duties at the store.

Harry Manheim, Hoerber Bros.' storeman, left July 30 to join his family for a few weeks' visit with relatives at Shelby, Ind.

Chas. W. McKellar and wife made a trip to Starved Rock in their auto on July 27, returning home the following Monday.

Albert Lies is all through planting and is starting to cut from a new house of Killarney and My Maryland roses.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant Thursday, August 1, at 8 p. m.

Henry Dun, with Weiland & Risch, and wife left July 30 for a lake trip and a few days' visit at Sturgeon Bay, Wis.

Frank Potocka, formerly with the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, is now with the J. B. Deamud Co.

Mr. Lueck, of the Lueck Pottery Co., Milwaukee, Wis., visited Geo. Keller & Sons' pottery here last week.

Walter and Paul Amling will leave next week for a visit with friends and relatives at Fort Dodge, Ia.

Frank Hagen left this week for a visit with friends in Kenosha and other Wisconsin towns.

Chas. Drissler, foreman of Wietor Bros.' shipping department, is back from his vacation.

A. T. Pyfer says that the Chicago Carnation Co. will finish planting this week.

C. L. Washburn says that Bassett & Washburn received their first carload of freight over their new switch this week when their new Kewaunee boiler was delivered. The track is over a half mile long and 30 carloads of greenhouse material are now on it and ready to be unloaded. Mr. Washburn says that the well drillers have gone down 350 feet already and that they expect to strike water very soon for shale rock has already been encountered. Four large cisterns with a capacity of 20,000 gallons each are being built and two lines of posts for the new range are already up.

Otto W. Frese and wife have returned from a delightful outing at Mono Lake, Lake Harbor and other resorts in and around Muskegon, Mich., and Mr. Frese says that his vacation was certainly one round of pleasure. He and his wife were the guests of the superintendent of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. and the time was mostly spent touring the country in an automobile. Mr. Frese visited the L. Wasserman establishment at Muskegon and says that he was surprised to find such a nice store and adds that Mr. Wasserman's field grown carnation plants are looking very fine.

N. J. Wietor and family are having a delightful time automobiling this summer and the popular wholesaler's car can be seen speeding through the streets of Milwaukee and other Wisconsin cities. Henry Wietor has been automobiling in the hay field for the past two weeks, but now that haying is over he will again devote his time to the greenhouse work.

John Degnan is back from his vacation and is again attending to his duties at Winterson's Seed Store. Edgar Winterson is away this week and Louis H. Winterson expects to leave on his vacation next week.

J. A. Budlong is cutting a fine grade of lily of the valley and Phil. Schupp takes great pride in showing it to his firm's many customers. Roswell Schupp has been promoted at their establishment to the honorary position of chief shipping clerk.

H. E. Philpott was in the city for a few days this week and left on July 28 for a visit in the east, and also to Montreal, where he will attend a meeting of the Canadian Horticultural Society. He will return in time to attend the S. A. F. convention here this month.

The E. C. Amling Co. is showing some fine Mrs. Aaron Ward roses and gladioli and John Michelsen, the efficient manager, says that the Americas that A. R. Bonballet & Co. are sending in are exceptionally fine and the best that M. C. Claussen ever grew.

Robert Northam and family returned on July 29 from a most enjoyable outing in Michigan. Mr. Northam paid a visit to Fruitvale, but was not very favorably impressed with the country, although 65,000 lots have been laid out and 30,000 have already been disposed of.

August Poehlmann came in specially July 29 for the executive meeting of the convention committees from the Wisconsin resort at which he and his family are spending a brief vacation, returning the following day.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is receiving a fine grade of all kinds of seasonable stock with asters and gladioli the leading features. Ernest R. Farley is back from his visit in Indiana and is again on the job.

Max Ringler, with A. L. Vaughan & Co., is enjoying his vacation, and Miss Pearson, the efficient stenographer, leaves this week for a visit with friends in Michigan.

A. R. Belmont, formerly located on West Twenty-sixth street, is now conducting a store at 161 West Twenty-second street.

Jean Franke and family will leave soon for their summer home at Thunder Lake, Mich.

R. C. Weiler, with the Superior Machine & Boiler Works, is enjoying his vacation at his father's home at Lauderdale Lakes.

Harry S. Garland has returned from a most delightful trip in the west and is now busy getting his firm's exhibit ready for the S. A. F. convention.

Geo. Propps, George Perdikas' right hand man, is back from a pleasant visit with friends at Milwaukee, St. Paul and Waterloo, Ia.

John Kruchten and Geo. Gobel write that they are having a dandy time at Hackley, Wis., and that they expect to return home next week.

The Des Plaines Floral Co. will soon start building operations on its movable greenhouse.

Emil Jehlik and family are making preparations to spend a few weeks at their farm at Muscoda, Wis.

Ed. Misiewicz has moved his store from 3211 to 3112 South Halsted street, one block further north.

Fred Price caught an 8 pound black bass last Sunday, July 28 at Camp Lake, Wis.

Arthur Newell and wife of Kansas City, Mo., called July 30, enroute to Europe.

E. E. Piser, the Peony King, will leave August 6 for a visit to his peony farm at Villa Ridge.

H. C. Blewitt is erecting a Garland truss iron frame house, 34x150 feet.

Fritz Bahr and boys have returned from Vancouver.

The painters are nearly through with their work at Percy Jones' establishment, and the store now presents a very inviting appearance in its new coat of white enamel and green paint. Mr. Van Gelder has one of the finest stores in the city and is now making preparations to place it at the disposal of all the visitors to the S. A. F. convention. Extra fancy American gladioli are arriving at this store in very large quantities and the proprietor says that they are the best he has ever handled.

Tim Matchen says that Peter Reinberg is having good call for young American Beauty roses and that business has been pretty good all summer. The Florists' Club baseball manager sincerely hopes that Mr. Matchen will soon be out for practice, for the boys realize that he will be a great addition to the team.

L. E. Partridge and family have returned from a most enjoyable vacation at Lake Geneva. Mr. Partridge says that the glass market remains about the same and that the factories are not likely to resume operations before the middle of October.

Allie Zech and wife have returned from a lake trip and an enjoyable visit with Arthur Peterson at Escanaba, Mich. Mr. Zech says that the Petersons gave him a royal reception and an automobile ride to Gladstone and other popular resorts of the upper peninsula.

W. M. R. Sawyer, the Sefton Manufacturing Co.'s efficient advertising man, says that his firm will have a large exhibit at the S. A. F. convention and cordially invites the trade to inspect its line of florists' boxes.

A. Miller, of A. Henderson & Co., writes from Mankato, Minn., that he is doing a little practicing every day and that he expects to be in fine form when he pitches for the locals at the S. A. F. convention.

Erne & Klingel are well pleased with their summer's business and are constantly adding new customers to their list. This firm is filling a large number of local orders for fancy asters and gladioli.

Frederick Greager, formerly of 7111 Indiana avenue, is now located at 6952-58 Cottage Grove avenue and is building a store and two houses. He grows pot plants exclusively.

Mrs. James G. Hancock, then of Michigan, made the S. A. F. convention in this city 25 years ago a part of her honeymoon trip, and looks as charming as a bride today.

Vaughan's bulb departments turned out a carload of early French bulbs this week. Seed of the new Asparagus Hatcheri, handled by this firm is in demand from wise buyers.

L. P. Lord, with the Lord Plant Box Co., Minneapolis, Minn., called on the trade here this week.

General Dickinson and his army of boy scouts from Park Ridge are still in Michigan.

S. Freund, with A. A. Arnold, made a business trip to Kansas City, Mo., this week.

D. D. P. Roy, of Vaughan's Seed Store, is taking his vacation in Canada.

Visitors: Geo. H. Mellen, Springfield, O.; S. M. Hartman, South Haven, Mich.; Edw. Amerpohl, Janesville, Wis. S. K. Butchart, Winnipeg, Can.; Wm. La Hayn, Chesterton, Ind.; G. D. Daas, Elgin; N. Kalisch, St. Louis, Mo.

ESCANABA, MICH.—Geo. Peterson, with C. Peterson & Sons, is camping for a couple of weeks at Fayette. He received a visit last week from his brother Arthur and Mr. and Mrs. Allie Zeck of Chicago.

Chicago Florists' Club.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held at the Union Restaurant July 25, President Foley in the chair. Alexander Kapina, 1300 Ashland avenue, was elected a member and the following applications for membership were read: P. N. Miller and N. P. Brunke, 84 East Jackson boulevard. Guy French, of the committee on by-laws revision, reported that a printed proof would soon be mailed to all members for correction. Geo. Asmus, chairman of the souvenir album committee, reported that the album work was well under way and that advertisements for insertion would be received until August 6. It was suggested that all the wholesale and retail florists in the city be requested to close their stores early August 23, so that everyone may participate in the outing of the Society of American Florists. John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists, was introduced and given a royal reception. Mr. Young gave an interesting report of convention matters, and was heartily applauded at the close of his remarks. Fred Lautenschlager, vice-president of the Society of American Florists for Northern Illinois, also spoke of the coming convention, and E. F. Winterson, chairman of the sports committee, reported that he had already received a great many prizes, but that many more were needed before his list would be complete. A representative of the Grant Collapsible Planting Pot Co., O. W. Harris, manufacturer, Redlands, Calif., exhibited the Grant collapsible pot and told of its many uses. The next regular meeting will be held at the Union Restaurant, August 1, at 8 p. m.

BUSINESS VERY QUIET.

Business in general is very quiet in this city and it is not to be expected that the florists are reaping a rich harvest. While it is dull around the retail stores, the growers here, as elsewhere, must keep pegging away if they expect success during the coming season.

NOTES.

The Berryhill Nursery Co., of which W. E. Hamilton is the energetic manager, is now well located in its new quarters at Penbrook, opposite the Colonial Club. At this new site they have over forty acres of land and have erected several good greenhouses. All their business is now done from the new site, the old quarters on South Thirteenth street having been vacated. One of the noteworthy orders which they recently filled—it would be noteworthy for even New York or Chicago—was the filling and arranging of over fifty window boxes on the front of the Harrisburg Telegraph Building on Federal Square. The building is of seven stories, the ground floor being occupied by the telegraph counting room. Over the entrance are boxes filled with dracaenas, geraniums, nasturtiums and English ivy. In filling of the remainder of the boxes, the same stock is used, excepting the dracaenas. It is unusual to see every window of a six-floor front filled with luxuriant plants and flowers. The entire front is practically covered and it is the cynosure for the eyes of all visitors to Harrisburg. We believe that the happy thought originated in the fertile brain of Frank R. Oyster, business manager of the telegraph company.

Albert Abendroth, one of the young and enterprising growers who has only been in business about two years, will soon erect another house for general stock.

Chas. L. Schmidt has now a very neat store at 313 Market street, and though it is rather dull just now, he has had a good season.

St. Louis.

VERY LITTLE DOING.

Extremely warm weather prevails and summer dullness with it. At the wholesale houses the buyers are scarce, floral designs being the only outlet. The retailers do not stock up. They are busy painting and overhauling their stores. Vacations are indulged in, employes taking their turns. This week outdoor flowers in general have shortened, thus giving a chance to unload and clean up the gladioli stock. Carnations and the new crop in roses are coming in very small, the very warm weather telling on them. Quite a number of good lilies are in. Killarney roses arrive soft and open. Maryland's seem to hold better.

NOTES.

F. H. Weber is putting new benches in his greenhouse adjoining his store. He is busy writing his annual report as vice-president of the Society of American Florists for Missouri. Fred is hustling and obtaining new members and will make a very good showing.

C. A. Kuehn is receiving some very nice rubrens lilies, also some good fancy asters. He has received consignments of gladioli from the Paris Floral Co.

Jim Arado at C. Young & Sons, has returned from his vacation. He probably will attend the convention if the firm can spare him.

Arthur A. Kring, with H. G. Berning, is out on his vacation. Henry is receiving some extra good white carnations.

Ed. Kelley, of the Kelley Floral Co., is at the wholesale house daily and gets his share of summer business.

Frank Windler, with the Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co., is now taking his well earned vacation.

Dave Geddis will have charge of F. H. Weber's store while the latter is away in Chicago.

Thomas Smith, keeper at Carr Park, complains of bugs playing havoc with the trees.

Latest reports state a good contingent will leave St. Louis for the convention.

Mrs. M. M. Ayres will leave shortly on her vacation. W. F.

MARKET OVERLOADED WITH POOR STOCK.

Business continues normal, stock of all kinds moving slowly with a market overloaded with inferior stuff. American Beauties, low grade at best, bring $1.50 a dozen, while with one exception all other rose stock sold for 25 cents a dozen, the top price. Field-grown Ulrich Bruner, the best rose on the market, brought less than 50 cents. Cecil Bruner, in abundance, sold eight bunches for $1.00. Carnations brought only 20 cents a dozen for the best;

NOTES.

The local papers recently printed articles in which it was stated that the "City Beautiful" managers had petitioned the board of supervisors to appoint a city gardener at a salary of $3,000 a year. The facts are that the petition asks the appointment to the "City Beautiful" movement of a typist at $75 a month, a secretary at $200 a month and a gardener at $100. Thus the pen is mightier than the spade.

The MacRorie-McLaren Co. reports progress on its two steel framed orchid houses in course of construction. One large house stocked entirely with Cattleya Dowiana, just coming in, will give a heavy cut this season. One plant from this stock carrying forty-three blooms was sold during the week to a local enthusiast.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. report business satisfactory for the month to date, both funeral and counter sales exceeding that of the corresponding period last year.

CLINTON, CONN.—Nelson Anderson, the local florist, and Miss Emily Ohlson, of Ivoryton, were married at Waterbury, July 20.

SOUTHAMPTON, L. I.—The Southampton Horticultural Society held its sixth annual exhibition July 24 and 25.

Louisville.

SPECIAL SALES DISCONTINUED.

The hot weather has made sweet peas a thing of the past and the carnations are getting very poor. Lilies are plentiful and many go to waste. A department store here has been making special Saturday sales of carnations at 25 cents per dozen. The florists also made the special sales at the same prices, but these sales have been discontinued for the present.

NOTES.

July 23 was a red-letter day with the florists here. There was a large attendance at the picnic and all enjoyed themselves. One of the Indiana contingent won the ice cream eating contest. Ten plates is said to be his record. John Skrobanek won the peanut rolling contest, Jacob Schulz, the dean of the Louisville florists, coming in second.

F. Walker & Co. have purchased a tract of land called Deer Park, formerly owned by the late E. D. Standiford, formerly president of the L. & N. R. R., and used by him as a park for 75 deer. The land is of the finest level blue grass soil. A range of houses will be built and the place will be called the Deer Park Conservatories and Nurseries. H. G. Walker will have charge.

Caleb Powers, well-known member of Congress, has written in reply to F. Walker & Co.'s letter condemning the Bourne parcels post bill, that he would give the matter careful consideration and mailed them his speech on the subject.

Nanz & Neuner are rebuilding a range of 10 greenhouses.

The last winter was the severest ever known in Kentucky. The Donaldson Co. reports its loss on boxwoods and other evergreens as more than $15,000.

Mrs. C. B. Thompson, one of the leading florists of Louisville, met with a painful accident a few days ago. Mrs. Thompson fell down her cellar steps. She was rather badly shaken up, but is able to be at the store again.

Ben Lord has leased the greenhouses built by S. C. Thompson and sent in the finest sweet peas that ever came to the Louisville market. They were of the Spencer varieties.

The Kentucky Nurseries have bought more land and are making extensive additions to their stock, importing considerable from Europe.

Mrs. M. D. Remers has found it too much trouble to run two places and has discontinued her stand at the Seelbach Hotel.

Mr. Leeming has planted the large new greenhouse he has just completed in chrysanthemums. H. G. W.

TRADE VERY SLACK.

Business is not one whit better than can be expected for the season of the year. In fact, some of the dealers say that it is not up to the volume of last year at this time. There is the usual dearth of good roses, only the imported eastern stock and the highest grades of My Maryland being considered for particular buyers. There is considerable funeral work, without which the situation would be very bad indeed. Gladioli and asters are now to be had in quantity, and add much desired variety to the stock, which, without carnations and sweet peas, is very meager indeed. Lily of the valley and Easter lilies are staples that are almost always to be relied upon. Cattleyas are almost out of sight, with but few coming in and the price moving to 75 cents each. There is an abundance of greens at buyers' prices.

NOTES.

The Robert Craig Co. is progressing with the addition to its already large plant at Norwood. This will consist altogether of 50,000 feet of glass. One gets a better idea of what this means when it is known that this is the size of W. K. Harris' place at Fifty-fifth street and Springfield avenue. All of Norwood combined with the old ranges at 49 Market gives a glass area of close on to 300,000 feet, which is something of a place. Almost the entire establishment is given to growing of foliage and flowering plants, the only cut flowers being a few chrysanthemums in the fall.

Mr. Eschner, of the Rice Co., says that it is well to look out for the cheap grades of magnolia leaves, particularly the greened ones, as they contain dyes that are dangerous if they are handled by persons with bruised or cut fingers.

Robert Shock, of M. Rice & Co.'s force, is passing his vacation at High Point, on Barnegat Bay, where he is having a great time fishing and getting browned up for the convention.

Mrs. Taft, Eastern Beauties, Kaiserin and My Maryland from local growers are specialties with the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co. Gladioli and asters are also leaders.

A variety of tumbler baskets are among the latest importations of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. They are very attractive and bound to be big sellers.

Lilium Roseum and New York sweet peas are among the best sellers with the Leo. Niessen Co. Some very good asters are seen here.

Ed. Reid has the best local American Beauties and a good line of imported stock in the same variety. Lily of the valley is a leader as well.

Berger Brothers, the Thirteenth street merchants, are featuring galax leaves, of which they have a specially selected stock on storage.

Alfred Campbell is strong on asparagus. The first locally grown Hatcheri is being offered by him and he says it is going to be a winner.

Robert Craig, George Craig and Robert Kift spent the week end with John Westcott at his Waretown bungalow.

John Westcott had the misfortune to lose his foreman, Oscar A. Kramer, in a tragic manner last week. He had been a great sufferer from neuralgia. A severe attack unsettled his mind and he committed suicide by taking poison. He leaves a wife and four children. He was 34 years old.

Cincinnati.

MARKET CONDITIONS ORDINARY.

The general market conditions are ordinary. The good choice stock in most lines cleans up quickly, while the shorter stock lingers and some of it must be sold in lots to tempt the buyers. The bulk of the offerings comprises outdoor stock and includes gladioli and asters. The large receipts of the former have been cleaning up tolerably well, but it can hardly be said that they realize the price they should bring. The light colors predominate. Most all of the offerings are choice. The aster supply is large, but it includes only a limited amount of long choice stock. This, however, practically sells at sight. The shorter offerings are good as far as general quality is concerned, but they are in too large supply. The colors include white, light pink, deep pink, lavender and purple. Included in the offerings from outdoors are hardy hydrangeas, sweet peas and water lilies. The call for the first named is only ordinary. The sweet peas are holding on longer than was expected and considering all are of fair quality. The water lilies, especially the choice very double ones, find a good market. The lily offerings are excellent, but the same can hardly be said of the demand. They include aratum, giganteum and speciosum rebrum. Some of the best giganteums offered are grown locally out of doors in frames that have long since been uncovered. In spite of the increased new cuts of roses the aggregate supply on hand each day is the same as at last writing if not smaller. The offerings are, however, as a whole adequate. More choice stock could easily be used. The American Beauties are selling on sight, but include few really long ones. The green goods market is ample.

NOTES.

There is considerable preparatory activity among those going to the convention. The enthusiasm of those arranging for parties has stirred some of the others to activity and now it seems as though nearly everyone who can arrange to get away will join one or the other party. Many from out of town will also be with them when they leave. One of the florists' specials will leave at noon over the Big Four, while the other leaves at 11:25 over the C. H. & D. Those intending to take the former should notify either C. E. Critchell, 34 East Third avenue, or A. C. Heckman, Jr., of the Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange, 24 East Third avenue. Those making the night trip should get in touch with E. G. Gillett, 151 East Third avenue.

C. E. Critchell has been receiving some very fine Easter lilies from Henry Gockel. The hydrangeas that Mr. Critchell has been receiving are also A1.

Ed Fries is very busy. He is building a new house, setting a new boiler and erecting a new stack, and still finds time to send some fine lilies to the market.

Miss Margaret Anstead is back at her desk at E. G. Gillett's, after her vacation.

C. E. Critchell is also doing some tall hustling in trying to increase the S. A. F. representation locally.

Eddie Schwartz is back from Philadelphia and Atlantic City, where he spent the past three weeks.

P. J. Olinger is in Chicago with his family. He will be back at the end of the week.

E. G. Gillett has been finding a very good market for pond lilies from Chas. Plummer, Amelia, O.

Mrs. Wm. Gear and sons have been at Longenecker, Ind., for a fortnight.

Visitor: Ed. F. Kennon, the Climax boxman, from Castorland, N. Y. H.

COOL WEATHER FAILS TO HELP.

Cool weather has returned but business has not improved and the usual summer dullness prevails. Early asters and gladioli are making their appearance. Growers say the aster supply will be small this year. Carnations are very low, both in quality and quantity. There are some excellent Taft roses on the market at present Kaiserins and Killarneys are also good. The few sweet peas that are left are very poor, this having been an unsuccessful season for them. Several large funeral orders keep the florists busy at times.

William Bester, a brother to the senior member of the firm of Henry A. Bester & Sons, is also an extensive grower of general stock, and has a nice retail store in the Hotel Hamilton. The Bester family has been in the florist trade for almost fifty years, their father, a native of Germany, having founded the business.

Henry Bester & Sons have two ranges comprising over 50,000 square feet of glass. Though they have considerable local trade, much of their stock goes wholesale to Baltimore, Washington and other cities. In addition to fine roses and carnations, they grow a great variety of other stock.

Henry Holzapfel, Jr., is another Hagerstown grower, with over 50,000 square feet of glass. His range is noted for carnations, many of which are handled by the Florists' Exchange of Washington, D. C. He also grows a good variety of other stocks.

CHARLISLE, PA.—W. S. George, who has held good positions as a gardener and florist on private estates, has bought a residence and several acres of land on West street and has erected one greenhouse.

DEMAND VERY SLIGHT.

There is not much of a selection at the local wholesale houses at this time of the year, neither is there much of a demand for high-priced stock. About the only thing now that keeps trade moving is an occasional funeral. The Eagles' convention is the cause of a good demand for artificial decorative stock. Beach sprays, all colors, and artificial flowers are used quite extensively for interior work, while bunting and flags decorate the outside of scores of blocks and business houses. Carnations are becoming poorer every day, very few good ones to be had. Roses clean up daily. Sweet peas have been poor. Gladioli are good stock with fair demand. Asters (with the exception of a few indoor stock) are small and short of stem. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

Fred C. Wittkuhn, Sr., his sons Fred, Jr., and Frank, and a friend visited Buffalo and Niagara Falls this week, leaving Monday and returning Friday evening. They report a good trip, outside of a few punctured tires and a blowout. Their machine stood the test fairly well. This was a kind of a preliminary to the big trip to Chicago, when the Cleveland florists' auto squad will go about a dozen strong.

Geo. B. Wiegand and his wife, mother and daughter, of Indianapolis, motored to this city and are the guests of H. A. Jones, of the Jones-Russell Co.

T. B. Stroup and family, of New Philadelphia, Ohio, passed through Cleveland on their return from Niagara Falls, Friday. C. B.

SCARCITY HELPS PRICES.

No increase of business is to be expected the last of July, but there has been for the past week an improvement in conditions, due altogether to a decided curtailment of roses and carnations. Previous prices were so meager that it resulted in a general cessation of shipments of roses, and carnation growers are replanting, so that with small receipts of these staples and no great abundance of asters, the market took on a healthier tone with a marked improvement in prices. The warm weather of early July hastened in a big crop of lilies prematurely, which it was not possible to market at even a decent price and now with a diminished cut there has been an advance in price from four to six dollars per hundred over the figures of two weeks ago. The improvement covers valley and cattleyas, the supply of the latter being light. All green stock sells poorly. Receipts of asters are increasing daily but the quality is inferior to those of last year.

NOTES.

Chairman F. H. Traendly of the transportation committee of the New York Florists' Club reports that bookings on the Club's special train to Chicago, for the convention of the S. A. F., are daily being made. The special train is contingent upon the securing of 100 passengers, but as the club invites anyone, no matter whether a member or not, either of the club or the society, from any section having New York as its most convenient point of departure for the West, there should be no difficulty in booking the required number. The train is scheduled to leave the Grand Central Terminal, Forty-third street and Lexington avenue, at 10:30 a. m. on Monday, August 19, and is due in Chicago about 8:45 a. m. the following day. The fare on the special will be $18.15 in each direction, with Pullman berths $5 for lower and $4 for upper. The arrangements provide for the highest class of cars, with dining car, buffet, library, smoking car, and observation car. Meals in the diner will be served on a table d'hôte basis of $1 per meal. Should less than 100 persons book, regular train service only will be provided and ten person party rates will apply, which means an additional charge of $5 each way.

REMARKABLE SUMMER TRADE.

The remarkable way in which business keeps up has made this season a notable one, and the continued scarcity of stock with the many orders coming in make conditions anything but pleasant. Roses from the new stock are beginning to arrive and are in good condition, but not plentiful enough. Carnations are about over, with very few good ones. The first gladioli, sweet peas and asters are now on the market, but are all scarce.

crowd will go, although, owing to the scarcity of help, some of the retail men will be detained at home.

Mr. Hay, of the Canadian Floral Co., Montreal, was also looking for stock here. He says even ferns and palms are scarce in his town.

J. Connon, manager of the Connon Floral Co., Hamilton, was here looking for stock, as there is none to be had in his section.

The Bedford Park Floral Co. has added American Beauties to its list and is cutting fairly good flowers at this early date.

GOOD CALL FOR ROSES.

There is a little ripple in the market this week. Roses are having a good call. The young stock has not begun to flower and the old stock is being cut back. This leaves a vacant spot, and those who have the flowers are having no trouble to dispose of them. There are very few good roses on the market and the same may be said about the carnation, which is showing decidedly the effects of over-work. Asters are in, but not enough to cause any glut. Some are good and some are not what they ought to be, but they bring at present a few shekels. We noticed some very nice ones at Welch Bros. Co., white, with good stems carrying a fine flower.

FLORISTS' CLUB PICNIC.

The Gardeners and Florists' Club's picnic was held July 24 at Cunningham park, East Milton, and was attended by more of the trade than in former years. We believe it was the hard and painstaking work put in by President Pegler that made the attendance larger than usual. Tom worked hard and his genial soul was gladdened by the results of his labors. The committee also ought to get some honors for the way everything was handled. It was an ideal place, the best grounds except one that they have had yet, and the day was an ideal one for the sports. Everyone went happy and came home happy. As usual the private gardeners put it all over the commercial men in the tug of war, although there was beef on both sides.

The results of the contests were as follows:

Baseball for boys—White Sox, Capt. Palmer, 11; Red Sox, Capt. Phil Roland, 5. Quoit match—Private Gardeners, under Capt. Kenneth Finlayson, 5; Commercial, under Capt. D. Iliffe, 1. Lawn tennis for ladies—Miss Westwood, Miss Palmer. Race for boys under 8—Andrew Rogers, Jas R. Doyle. 100-yard race for single ladies—Edith Iliffe, Wilhelmina Prae. NOTES.

Thursday last, July 25, a dinner was tendered J. K. M. L. Farquhar at Yong's hotel. It was attended by all the prominent men in the trade. The plaudits and the trend of the speeches left no doubt in the mind of the guest that Boston is proud of him and the trade in general looks to him as a king pin in the horticultural ranks. His training and his extensive travels place him on a pinnacle few of us ever hope to reach. We feel it is nice to laud a man when he is alive and not save all the eulogies till after his departure.

MAC.

Baltimore.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, president of the Society of American Florists, and Mrs. Vincent, with Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Boone, Mr. and Mrs. H. Klein and a number of others, will leave in a few days for Chicago. They wish to take in the sights before settling down to the work of the convention. Mr. Vincent has just returned from Europe, where he made addresses on the cultivation of flowers, notably at the international exhibition in London and also in Belgium and France.

The florists' outing to Chesapeake City was very enjoyable, although the day was stormy. In the bowling match for ladies, Mrs. J. J. Perry received first prize, a cut glass dish. Mrs. Quick won second prize, a vase. Mr. Eberly was first among the gentlemen bowlers, receiving a handsome silk umbrella. Owing to the stormy day many of the events did not come off. At a later date another outing will be held, when the prizes left over will be distributed.

I. H. Moss is enjoying his new car to judge by the way he is touring the country in it. Almost any fine day he and a number of friends are out for a spin to some spot of interest in the country or to call on his florist friends.

A very severe storm passed over this vicinity last Sunday. Trees were uprooted, wires torn down and telephones put out of commission. Crops were damaged also.

The flower market is doing a quiet business. Many out-door flowers, including asters, are making their appearance.

Wm. Johnston and wife will go to their summer home in New York state and from there to the convention.

Hans Anderson has finished planting his rose houses. B.

LITTLE GOOD STOCK.

Business is very quiet. What first-class stock comes in sells readily, but there is very little of it. Short and poor quality roses are plentiful, but hard to dispose of and many eventually go to the dump. Outdoor-grown sweet peas are wholesaling at from 15 to 20 cents a hundred. Asters and dahlias will be in this week, and together with other outdoor stock, will probably crowd the greenhouse products out of the running for a few weeks.

NOTES.

The Denver Wholesale Florists' Co. has been fortunate in securing N. A. Benson as a member of the firm. This addition makes the concern the largest west of the Missouri river, with two hundred thousand feet of glass devoted exclusively to cut flowers. This company does a very large shipping business and in the past has had great difficulty in filling orders, but with their increased capacity expect to take good care of all old friends and customers and secure new business besides. At a meeting of the directors the following officers were elected: Fred Hall, president; N. A. Benson, secretary; C. F. Maler treasurer.

The Denver Floral Co. has closed its store for a few months, but will probably open in a new location this fall. In the meantime the Gustafsen sisters, who ran the store, have gone on an extended trip through the East. Mr. Brinkert says he is taking a "vacation" out at the greenhouses.

A heavy rain Sunday, July 14, caused a flood in the lower part of town which did a great deal of damage. The Barteldes Seed Co. reports a loss of ten thousand dollars.

Chas. Blank, formerly with the Mauff Floral Co., has gone to work for R. M. Greig, Anaconda, Mont.

Loken & McDonald have rented the greenhouses formerly owned by F. X. Goerchl.

TRADE VERY SLUGGISH.

The cut flower business is at a standstill at present. All stock is looking exceptionally well for this time of the year. We have had a very favorable season, not too hot and plenty of moisture. The retail people are cleaning and overhauling their stores and getting ready for the fall business. The growers are busy repairing and getting in shape to furnish the needed stock. There is considerable new glass going up in this vicinity. The Miller Floral Co. will soon have a new addition completed and ready to plant. Olaf Lingreen has two new large houses well under way. Fred Pinchen has one new house nearly completed. The sweet pea is the leading cut flower at present. Asters and gladioli will begin to come in in a few days.

NOTES.

John Reading of Centerville, Utah, is the leading sweet pea grower of this part of the country. Mr. Reading was the first man to enter the floral business in Salt Lake City. About forty years ago he owned property on which his greenhouses were built, which is now near the best business district of the city and is covered with tall buildings. His field of sweet peas at Centerville is a beautiful sight.

There is some talk of organizing a state florist club soon. Greater enthusiasm is noticed among the florists of Utah than has ever been here before. There are some real live ones here now, and the indications are that some of the old timers will have to change their systems or they will be numbered among the has beens.

Asters and gladioli will commence coming in in a few days. They are looking well and there will be plenty of them shortly.

FLOWERS NEED RAIN.

The flower business has almost settled down to the usual summer conditions, little doing of any description. Outdoor flowers are still fairly plentiful, gladioli being the most in evidence. Vegetation in general is beginning to show the need of water. We have had no rain here since June 28, and at times the wind has been hot and rather destructive to tender garden plants that did not get good care.

The Truck Growers' Association has taken over a large building which is being fitted up for market purposes, so that a daily market is now an assured fact here all the year round.

The annual outing of the Washington Florists' Club was held at Chesapeake Beach July 24. The day was spoiled by rain and it was impossible to hold the contests, but those that braved the weather say they enjoyed themselves, as there was plenty of amusement furnished by the committee.

Gus Walt, late with the Washington Florists Co., has formed a partnership with Mr. Reesick and the firm hopes to have three houses finished and planted with carnations and sweet peas by September 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Linz leave August 1 for a month's vacation in Boston, Mass., and Portland, Me. They intend to make the trip by boat from Philadelphia.

Mrs. Theo. Diedrich and son Henry sailed from Baltimore July 24 for a visit at Mrs. Diedrich's old home in Germany, which she has not seen in over twenty-five years.

Geo. Smithson, formerly with Geo. H. Cooke, has accepted a position with the Washington Country Club as assistant gardener.

A. and W. Gude have been enjoying a few days of rest down in Old Virginia. G. C. D.

CROMWELL, CONN. — Antone Olson, foreman of one of the rose sections at the A. N. Pierson Co.'s greenhouses, was brutally assaulted by a discharged Italian laborer named Salvatore Barone, July 23. The victim of the attack suffered a fractured skull as a result of a blow from an iron pipe.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9 inch and 12-inch tubs (made up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

Next annual convention, June, 1913.

FRENCH seed crop reports of July 15 continue unfavorable.

AMERICAN WONDER peas, growing in Holland, promise a fine crop.

RALPH M. WARD, New York, passed through Chicago July 30, returning from Japan.

LEONARD H. VAUGHAN, of Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, and family returned from the west July 30.

FRENCH freesia bulbs came in nearly a month late this season and in short supply with but few mammoths.

SWEET PEA seed crop reports from England indicate shortages and none for export. American buyers are asking for prices.

HOLLISTER, CALIF.—The Pieters-Wheeler Seed Co. made their first shipment of 1912 crop seeds July 20, consisting of Bloomsdale spinach consigned to Norfolk, Va.—Visitors: Watson S. Woodruff, wife, daughter and niece, Orange, Conn.; J. E. V. Tracy, Washington, D. C.; H. P. Webster, of the Mel L. Webster Co., Independence, Ia.

NORFOLK, VA.—The seed firm of George Tait & Sons, one of the oldest and best known in the state, has undergone a change in management, James T. Moreland and David B. Blackwood succeeding William M. Tait and Robert Tait, who have retired from active membership. Wm. Tait has moved to England, where he will make his home. Robert Tait will continue to reside at Virginia Beach. The firm was established nearly 43 years ago by the late George Tait, and has been continued ever since, his sons succeeding to the management on the founder's death.

National Council of Horticulture.

President Leonard H. Vaughan in his address before the American Seed Trade Association June 25 made the following reference to the work of this organization:

"The publicity which our trade secures at a minimum cost through the press service of the National Council of Horticulture has been of great general benefit. In my judgment the $200 annual expense gives us excellent returns on the investment. The articles which should in the main be instructive and helpful to seed planters may also include two or three to counteract some of the articles of misinformation disseminated through the United States Department of Agriculture from time to time, as well as some similar articles from various amateur sources—not well informed."

Your Business in Danger.

ACT QUICK AND FIGHT HARD.

Senator Bourne's Parcel Post Bill (S. 6850) is certainly masquerading under a wrong name! It might better be called "A Business Destruction Bill," for it will practically mean the destruction of most businesses that rely upon sending out catalogues, circulars, and booklets. This iniquitous bill takes advantage of the popular demand for a parcel post by doubling and trebling the rates of postage on all pamphlets, books, seeds, plants and bulbs.

At present, as for many years past, catalogues, books, circulars, form letters and other printed matter, packages of seeds, plants and bulbs are mailed as third-class matter at one cent for each two ounces or fraction thereof. Under the proposed Bourne parcel post bill they would pay one cent per ounce, or fraction thereof, up to four ounces, just double the rate now charged.

A. Bachelot.

On packages weighing more than four ounces the rates vary according to distance carried. A catalogue weighing five or six ounces now requires three cents postage, but the lowest rate at which this catalogue could be mailed under the proposed law would be five cents for local, city or rural delivery only. It would cost six cents per copy within the fifty-mile zone, seven cents within the two hundred-mile zone, eight cents within the five hundred-mile zone, eleven cents within the thousand-mile zone and twelve cents within the two thousand-mile zone, or just four times the present cost.

The average distance of sending catalogues is between five hundred and one thousand miles. An edition of one hundred thousand catalogues weighing five or six ounces each which now requires $3,000 for postage, would, under the proposed law, cost $11,000 to mail, an increase of $8,000. Can any business stand this?

According to present rates catalogues and pamphlets in lots of two thousand or more may be sent without affixing stamps by paying the amount of postage in money. The new bill will do away with this convenience except when the individual pamphlets weigh less than four ounces each.

NOW FOR ACTION.

Every man interested in any branch of the seed or book business, printing, or ink making, advertising, or publishing, should personally and vigorously oppose this bill now. Write or telegraph at once to your senators and representatives in congress protesting against its passage and demanding their active opposition to this most vicious bill. Have every one of your workmen write. Have every customer of yours write. These letters will be effective—if you get them off now. But get your protest off today. And your workmen's protests. And your customers' protests. And get your newspapers interested.

Sincerely yours,

Committee on postal laws of the American Seed Trade Association:

W. ATLEE BURPEE, Philadelphia, Chairman.

J. C. VAUGHAN, Chicago, Vice-Chairman.

E. C. DUNGAN, Philadelphia, Pa.

W. F. THERKILDSON, Painesville, O.

C. C. MASSIE, Minneapolis, Minn.

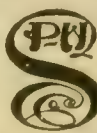

Davy's Representative Here.

A. Bachelot, representative of the well known house of Davy, Arpajon, Seine-et-Oise, France, who specializes in Paris market gardeners' vegetables and choice flower seeds, arrived in New York from France on the Oceanic. He states that when he left home the crops were looking pretty well. Carrots were in good condition, he says, but beets will be scarce, as the plantings have suffered from the dry weather in the spring. Cabbage will be very short. Mr. Davy has been very lucky with his crop of radishes, which matured under very good conditions. All the other vegetables, Mr. Bachelot says, look good. Mr. Bachelot's mailing address is in care of the American Express Co., 65 Broadway, New York.

"The Kenilworth Strain" of Giant PANSY Seed

Must Not be Compared with the flimsy Trimardeau

It is much larger and of good substance; the immense flowers of 3½ to 4 inches are of perfect form; every tint and shade is produced in striking combinations and endless variations of beautiful colors and markings. The stock plants are most critically selected. It is rich with shades of brown, bronze, red, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention.

Tomato Blight.

This year there are numerous complaints in regard to tomato blight, which is earlier in season than usual and more destructive. We believe the June frost is to blame, as over a wide area we had a frost on the eighth of the month. While in many localities little actual damage was done, this sudden drop in temperature to close to freezing has permanently stunted many fields and subjected them to blight. We have produced blight in hotbeds in April by exposing a thrifty frame of seedlings to sudden cold by accident or neglect. We also find that while the regular blight as it travels in August is readily prevented or controlled by spraying with Bordeaux, this post-blight is more pernicious and destructive. We have seen this blight creep up on the main stem and gradually kill the plant regardless of spraying. Blight being contagious, we may not be able to cure the sick plants, but we may save the healthy ones by timely and thorough spraying. In our fields the damage from cold was very uneven, always the depressions or low places faring worst. We have a patch of egg plants which were set out the evening preceding the frost. The land is rolling and no damage could then be seen. But today the higher parts are easily in the lead, the plants being four times as large, while otherwise the lower places with better ground would be in the lead. This damage to plants often is slow to appear and may assume various aspects, such as blight, stunted plants, or deformed fruit.

MARKETMAN.

A Giant Tomato.

The Agricultural Gazette for June 17, 1912, states that a New Zealand grower has raised a seedling tomato which grows to great size and produces fruit of perfect flavor which weighs one and one-half pounds, and that plants of this variety are to be placed on the market this year. We are accustomed to read of marvelously fine varieties of various kinds which have been raised by transatlantic hybridists, and it is refreshing to know that the Antipodes is producing competitors, but we are afraid this latest novelty will not be a commercial success. A few years ago there was a limited demand at the leading fruiterers' for large tomatoes, but lately the demand has been for tomatoes of a size which will scale four or five to the pound.—London Gardeners' Chronicle.

Railway Gardening Association.

The sixth annual meeting of the Railway Gardening Association, to be held in Roanoke, Va., August 13-16, promises to draw well from the entire country. The program is interesting and complete and well worth the time and expense of a trip to the Virginia city. The headquarters of the association will be in the Hotel Roanoke, but arrangements have been made with the other hosteleries, all of which are within a radius of three blocks, to provide for such as cannot find accommodation at this place. The officers of the association are: Patrick Foy, president; F. W. Vail, vice-president; J. S. Butterfield, secretary-treasurer; Geo. B. Moulder, R. W. Hutchison and R. J. Rice, executive committee.

Papers will be read on the following subjects at the Roanoke meeting: "Good Fellowship and How Best It Can Be Maintained," by Geo. B. Moulder; "Insect Pests on Trees and Shrubs and Remedy for Same," by E. F. A. Reinsch; "Are Live Snow Breaks More Economical Than Lumber and Which Should They Be Composed Of?" by J. E. Smith; "Which Gives the Best Results, the Theoretical or Practical Railway Gardener?" by J. E. Byrne; "Should Railways Establish a Landscape Department?" by N. S. Dunlop; "The Propagation by Seed and Cuttings of Nursery Stock," by John Gipner; "How Do Railway Gardeners Compare Mentally, Physically and Morally With Men of Other Professions?" by E. A. Richardson; "What Relationship Should Exist Between the Agricultural and Industrial Departments of Railways and the Railroad Landscape Gardener?" by Dr. E. A. Schubert; "Duties of a Railway Gardener," by C. H. Tritschler; "To What Extent Can Aquatic or Water Gardening Be Carried on by the Railway Gardener?" by V. Wickles; "The Construction and Maintenance of Driveways Approaching Railway Stations," by C. J. Andrews; "The Best Trees for Railway Parks," by J. K. Wingert. Auto trips through the principal streets and to the nearby points of interest will be made Wednesday, August 14. The next day there will be a sight-seeing trip over the Shenandoah Valley division of the Norfolk & Western railway, with stops at Natural Bridge and Luray Caverns. The last day, Friday, August 16, the visitors, according to the programme, are "free to do as they please."

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y. Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

THE International Apple Shippers' Association will hold a convention at the Hotel Sherman, Chicago, August 7.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Andrew P. Irwin has sold the Logan Nurseries at a price said to exceed $90,000. The purchaser's name has not been made public.

D. S. LAKE and son Ralph, of Shendam, Ia., sailed from New York July 27 on the SS. Olympic and will remain in France till about September 1. Geo. E. Dickinson, of New York, will accompany them.

Nursery Stock in the Mails.

The United States Post Office Department makes the following announcement in the consular and trade reports of July 20: "Paragraph 8, section 496, Postal Laws and Regulations, is hereby amended to read as follows: Nursery stock, including florists' stock, trees, shrubs, plants, vines, cuttings, grafts, scions, buds, bulbs, and roots (which may carry injurious insects), may be admitted to the mails only when accompanied by a certificate from a State or Government inspector to the effect that the nursery from which said stock is shipped has, within a year, been inspected and found free from injurious insects."

Apple Orchards Sold.

We are just in receipt of the announcement of the sale of the Blair Orchards in Southern Illinois. Some ten years ago when Professor J. C. Blair, of Urbana, Ill., was striving hard to upbuild the commercial orchard interests of southern Illinois he conceived the idea of himself engaging in the commercial orchard work, so as to be able to put into concrete form his methods and ideas with regard to the improvement of the orchard business as then carried on in the southern third of the state. In order to do this he had the hearty co-operation and financial backing of the Ennis estate. Orchards were bought at Kinmundy and Salem in Marion County and at Calhoun in Richland County. About five hundred acres of farmland, including two hundred and eighty acres of bearing orchard, have been operated as the "Blair Orchards" under the personal supervision of Mr. Blair. The yields of these, even under adverse climatic conditions, have steadily increased, until this year there will be harvested about 22,000 barrels of excellent fruit. Feeling that he has fully demonstrated what he set out to show, namely, that commercial orcharding in southern Illinois can be made extremely profitable, and wishing to give his entire thought and attention to the work of his office as state horticulturist, he has concluded to withdraw from active participation in the commercial enterprise. Mr. Blair has disposed of his interest in the "Blair Orchards" to his former business associate, Wm. S. Ennis, of Chicago.

If You Do Not Find What You Need in Our Ready Reference Department, Write Us About It

You would say any grower was a blankety blank fool to buy the various parts of an automobile from a dozen different manufacturers and put them together himself, just because he thought he could save ten per cent

He'd have to be just as good an automobile maker as the makers themselves—and if he were, he ought to be in the auto business instead of a grower.

Some growers, however, do buy their greenhouse materials of a dozen different concerns, and as a result have a dozen different kinds of trouble. Our Handy Hand Book is a guide to keep you out of trouble. It is a complete book of greenhouse supplies, covering everything that goes into a greenhouse, (but the glass.) If you haven't one—send for it.

A Prominent Rose Grower Praises the Kroeschell

I think your boiler is the boss of all boilers.
JEFF DOREMUS, Green Village, N. J.

Heats Canadian Range Easily and Saves Fuel.

I had a flue boiler before I got the Kroeschell, which could hardly heat the glass, although it used more fuel than yours. I also have your Generator, which is giving good satisfaction. I think a Generator would pay for itself in a few weeks.

J. L. HILLBORN, Leamington, Ont.

There is No Better Boiler.

The Kroeschell Boiler works better in every way than the boiler I had before and has given me all the satisfaction I want.

ROBT. HARDIES, Mannheim, Ill.

Kroeschell Boiler, Generator and Heating System Insure Perfect Results

Having promised you a letter as soon as we have passed through a good fair test, I consider it now most timely. We had the thermometer 13 degrees below and we've just gone through a blizzard bad enough for most any season, and am very well pleased to inform you that our heating system was equal to the occasion. So far as we have gone, am certainly well satisfied with the Kroeschell Boiler, Generator and Heating System.

J. E. MATTHEWSON, Sheboygan, Wis.

Kroeschell Heats Large Office Building.

Enclosed please find another order for No. 9 Kroeschell Boiler. This boiler is for a new office building. In reference to the two No. 3 boilers which you furnished for three buildings last year, will say that we are getting excellent results. The No. 13 is doing duty in a six-story building with 208 radiators and the owner is so well pleased with it that he has ordered a No. 10 Kroeschell for another building which he is erecting, also ordered another No. 11 Kroeschell.

LEEK & CO., Vancouver, B. C.

Heats Up Entire System in 30 Minutes—Kroeschell Boilers are Fine

It only takes 30 minutes from firing to drive the water entirely through my system, a distance of 200 feet. When heavy firing is necessary, I make 180 degrees in the main returns at the boiler. Your boilers are fine.

W. C. SCOVELL, Malta, O.

Get a Kroeschell—You'll Be Pleased.

Will say that the boiler has given me perfect satisfaction and have had no trouble whatever in heating my house during the very cold winter and it is with very great pleasure that I recommend your boiler whenever opportunity occurs.

The Truth About Boilers

Being Number Three of Three Frank Talks

TO PUT it briefly, Talks Numbers One and Two were pointed statements of the points necessary for a boiler to be truly economical. Not the marvelous kind of economy that every boiler man from Florida to Alaska claims for his boiler—but the kind you can see it is logical a boiler should have, and that the Burnham does have. That kind of economy. And now for the conveniences of a boiler—those little things that mean such big things to the one who “rends” it.

Take the smoke box damper, for instance. Who wants to be fumbling around on the back of a boiler to open or shut it? Still that’s the way most boilers are made. The Burnham damper, however, is operated from the front of the boiler, as is every other part.

The clean-out doors should every one be on the front where they will be handy to clean. They will get cleaned then! And the cleaner the flues the more you get out of your coal. Burnham’s clean-out doors are all on the front. A coal door that is a skimpy little affair scarce big enough to “take a scoop” is a profanity provoker. The Burnham has a good, big, generous sized affair that helps to take the cuss out of boiler caring.

The grates, if easy to shake, are liable to be shaken when needed, instead of allowing a bed of dead ashes to clog up the fire pot and destroy the draft. The Burnham grates are easy shakers. If the grates dump all ashes to the front, it’s less work to take them out. The Burnham is less work.

These are the conveniences you will agree that every convenient boiler should have.

If you are looking for a convenient boiler that is economical AS WELL AS convenient—then look at the Burnham.

It is made for steam or hot water, either square or round sectional. Send for catalog and further facts.

The distance from the water line to top of the section is the steam dome space, which is larger on the Burnham than any other boiler we know of.

This is the Number 18, the smallest sized Burnham Steam Boiler. Made also for hot water.

This rear section view shows you the interchangeable smoke box, which can be swung around to any position for attaching smoke pipe at top, or either side.

SUGGESTIONS FOR PLANT GROWERS.

Begonia Gloire De Lorraine.

The early rooted Begonia Gloire de Lorraine will now need shifting into 3½-inch pots, and should be given a little stronger soil than the young stock was potted in, but the manure used should be well rotted, and, where obtainable, a generous addition of leaf-mold. As the plants grow, space them out so that they will not become drawn and so that there is a good circulation of air around each plant. They will need a little shade on the glass for a few weeks yet, but it should not be too heavy. As the nights become cool it is well to close the frames down if they are outside, or if in the greenhouse close the ventilators, leaving a small crack of air on, or the house will sweat, which is not at all beneficial to begonias, as it is very apt to cause spot on the leaf. If this occurs remove the leaf at once. Care should be taken in the watering not to wet the foliage any more than possible. The later rooted stock will not need plotting up until later, but all the growth possible should be obtained by giving them the best of attention. If the grower has not stock enough on hand, now is the time to purchase before the plants are shifted into large pots, when the price will be higher and the transportation charges increased.

Pyrethrums.

An early summer flower that is very showy and beautiful, ranging in colors from white to the deepest scarlet with all the intermediate shades, is the Pyrethrum roseum, and it is being much more grown every year for cut-flower purposes. The best flowers are to be obtained by buying named varieties, but good selected seed will give fair satisfaction and many handsome flowers. The greatest trouble in growing these plants in the north is the danger of winter killing and crown rot during extremely wet spells in hot weather. Seed sown during July and August and wintered in houses or cold frames will produce plants that will flower next summer. Obtain the best seed possible and sow in flats and as soon as large enough pot in 2½-inch pots. These can be grown on in a frame until cold weather comes on, when they can be securely covered or carried into a cool house and wintered under a bench, started in March and planted out as soon as secure from frost, and will flower in June and July.

Paper White Narcissi.

The Paper White narcissi are now being received, and as soon as delivered should be unpacked and spread out in flats or on shelves in a cool, dry place. If they remain in the original cases, they are apt to become moist or heated when packed closely. They should be handled carefully and not thrown around so that they become bruised or the outer covering torn off. This covering is a great protection for the bulb, preventing it from drying. Plan how the bulbs are to be flowered, that is, how many are to be brought forward each week, and start at once to box up the first lot and then continue the plantings at the desired intervals. The flats or boxes should be prepared at once, not only for these, but for the other bulbs. It is the general custom to use any old box that can be obtained, and they are, therefore, of different sizes and different depths. They do not pack closely when placed outside, neither do they seem to fit on the bench in an economical manner. Our experience has been rather than to buy a mixed lot of boxes of different sizes, it is better and cheaper to purchase stock at the lumber mill and saw it into the proper length. Get one-half-inch stock, three inches wide for the sides and bottom and one-inch stock the same width for the ends. Saw the ends 12 inches long and the sides 24 inches. This will make a flat 24x13 inches by using four pieces for the bottom and will allow proper drainage. A flat of these dimensions will hold about 50 Paper White narcissi or 60 to 70 tulips, and will cost but little more in the price of the box and can be made with much less labor, and when the boxes are all of one size they can be placed upon the benches with much saving of room.

As soon as the bulbs are planted in the flats they should be placed in a dark, cool place and covered with soil or ashes until rooted, when they can be brought into the houses. The early planted bulbs will require good heat to bloom them successfully, much warmer temperature than the later planted bulbs.

Hydrangeas.

The young stock that was propagated this spring can be grown either for Easter blooming with a single stem or for summer blooming with three or four heads. The plants should be now potted in 4-inch pots and plunged in a frame, where they will receive attention. They should have a good rich soil and a strong, sturdy growth encouraged. For those that are to be bloomed early, as soon as the pot becomes full of roots a little liquid manure will help the formation of a good strong bud. Those that are wanted for summer blooming, the tip can be rubbed out and branches will form. Leave the plants outside until the first light frost, which will harden off the wood, and they can then be stored in a cool house or pit where they will not freeze. Those wanted for Easter will have to be placed in heat by the first of the year.

Sweet Scented Geraniums.

The grower who has a stock of rose or other sweet scented geraniums can turn them into good account by planting them in a bench in the greenhouse and can obtain some fine sprays for winter cutting. The green is very much appreciated by the best trade and there is always a demand in the stores catering to that class for more of this than can be obtained. The sprays are cut 12 to 14 inches long and are used in the boxes of cut flowers. There is also a demand for the leaves, to be placed in the finger-bowls at luncheons. It is easily grown in a cool house and very rapidly makes long sprays fit to cut. The plants can be set about eight inches apart, which will give them plenty of room, provided the sprays are cut as soon as they are long enough for use.

Potash as Fertilizer.

In 1900 United States patent No. 641406 was granted to G. J. Rhodin for obtaining soluble potassium salts from feldspar. In carrying out the process according to this invention, 1 part of feldspar is mixed with 1 part of lime and 0.2 part of sodium chloride, all in a finely powdered condition, according to a recent circular issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The mixture is then heated in a closed vessel of iron or other material, or else in an open-hearth or blast furnace, to a bright yellow heat and maintained at that temperature for a considerable time, care being taken not to melt or fuse the mixture. The cooled mass which still remains in a powder may be applied directly as a manure, since the potash present is claimed to be rendered available by the treatment, or it may be separated from the mass by treatment with acids.

Miniature Bouquet.

This old fashioned diminutive bouquet is intended for the cotillion, but it can also be used as a dinner favor for the men. A handsome gardenia may be used by itself in this holder, the usage for the holder in this case being twofold. The paper tends to keep the gardenia petals in place and at the same time shows a novel boutonniere.

The Square Deal.

I read with much pleasure Mr. Culp's article on "The Square Deal" in THE AMERICAN FLORIST of July 27, and I want to say that I thoroughly agree with him in every particular. Each year we are cutting down our orders for flowers with the houses that have been shipping us pickled stock during the holidays. We begin in October and place our orders with growers who make it a rule to neither force nor refrigerate to any great extent for the special occasions. And our contracts usually continue throughout the entire season; or as long as their stock is good. We are sometimes compelled to pay more money for this stock but we have confidence in it before it arrives, and can recommend it to our best customers at an advanced price, on account of the keeping qualities.

For these reasons the growers of the pickling type are not only gradually losing their holiday trade with long distance customers, but will soon lose the greater part of their business at other times. There are many small florists putting in greenhouses for cut flower growing, for all the season, who would be only too glad to depend entirely upon the wholesalers if they could feel at all sure of getting even reasonably good stock at Christmas, Easter, Memorial Day and on other holidays. The pickler's time is about over.

Some one will ask: "What are we to do? The demand at special seasons is so much greater than the regular supply, that we are compelled either to force exceedingly or to refrigerate old stock, or both, in order to supply the demand." This may be true, but why ship anything? From the retailer's standpoint it would be much more satisfactory to get nothing than to be compelled to pay good money for trash, pay the express company for hauling it, and then have to hand the garbage man some more to haul it away. It appears to me that more special season stock would relieve the situation considerably.

Let the retailers understand that there are only just so many carnations, roses, etc., to be had; and when the supply is gone they must take longiflorums, hyacinths, narcissus, valley and other flowers that can be grown in crops at the will of the grower; stock that neither has to be forced until it will not hold up its head, nor yet does it have to be kept in cold storage like dressed turkeys waiting a month for Thanksgiving. I have seen many times when we would have a shipment of $50, $75 or $100 worth of flowers opened, and every flower fall to pieces while being removed from the box. Or we receive a shipment of 500 carnations billed at 7 or 8 cents, and find them every one asleep, while our files are filled with orders. I heartily join our friend in saying, "Down with the pickling," and "Give us a Square Deal."

Colonial Bouquet.

Although the idea is old-fashioned the colonial bouquet must be artistic. Whatever the color scheme an inexpensive flower such as the carnation or the aster should be used in the foundation work. Festoon in circles, using some odd flower as a center. The border of adiantum may be left off if the maker prefers. For the bouquet in the accompanying illustration an inexpensive holder is used. Fancy lace holders give a rich appearance, though the price is high. There are many uses for this style of bouquet, which finds favor with the debutante and is also a pleasing dinner table favor. In this case they should be made rather small. Made of the favorite flower of the recipient they are especially desirable as a gift to one who is ill. H. E. K.

THE CARNATION.

When to Bloom.

The indoor-grown plants that have been in the benches for two months or longer should now be thoroughly well established in the soil and large enough to be allowed to begin to give a few flowers. That is, this applies to such plants that have been well taken care of as regards keeping the shoots uniformly pinched back on time and have not become drawn and spindling from neglect in this respect. Also the grower must be guided according to the character of the growth of the varieties that he has to deal with. The color of the variety should also be taken into consideration. There will not be any great demand for red carnations during the next two months, and though the variety Beacon will bloom freely and produces fine flowers as soon as the plants are large enough to stand it, yet it should be taken into consideration that the best season of the red carnation is around the Christmas holidays and every effort should be put forth to have the reds in the best condition at that time.

They can be topped back to a later period while the plants remain of a fair size, but do not carry it to the extreme by pinching closely after the plant has attained a large size, because the wood is liable to become hard and the growths take longer to get away. Also remember that as the season draws towards fall and winter the growth of the plants begins to be slower and a longer time should be allowed for the growth to take place. Mrs. C. W. Ward and all of the Enchantress varieties are among the best to be allowed to come into bloom early. The stems of Mrs. C. W. Ward will be a little short at the start, but the flowers are good and of good color, and the plant continues to grow away better than many varieties when allowed to bloom this early. There will be a little trouble with the keeping qualities of the varieties of Enchantress at first, but it cannot be expected otherwise during hot weather, though it can be helped considerably by cutting the flowers a little before fully expanded.

Varieties with the habit of growth of Gloriosa and White Perfection should not be allowed to bloom for some time yet, but should be given every encouragement to make growth. They are naturally a thin plant and every shoot that can be put onto them at this time is a gain for the winter. Before allowing any of the plants to start into bloom see that they are properly supported and everything in order for business. Also see that you have the one great problem of this time of the year, the control of the thrips and red spider, well in hand, because carnation blooms spotted up with thrips are not very good subjects to compete with asters or early chrysanthemums which are now in good supply and quality and will continue so for some time. There is only one way to get the upper hand of the thrips and red spider, and that is by continually keeping at the spraying with the nicotine preparation (our solution of spray for this work is a tablespoonful of nicotine to 2½ gallons of water, spraying once a week. The spraying is done late in the afternoon and if the weather is very hot the plants are syringed well early next morning). There is no better way to keep the red spider in check than by syringing the plants well and allowing them plenty of ventilation. Close, hot, dry conditions are what increases the red spider.

Carnation Breeding.

Paper read by Prof. William Stuart of the Plant Bureau, United States Department of Agriculture, before the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., March 5, 1912.

When I was invited by the chairman of your programme committee to give you an address on some phase of carnation breeding, my first impulse was to plead a lack of ability as well as of time to accept such an undertaking. The persistence and winning persuasive powers of your chairman, however, were of such a nature that I could not well do otherwise than accept his invitation, but with this understanding—that I would not be expected to occupy very much of your valuable time.

It may not be inappropriate at the outset to say that my first interest in the carnation dates back nearly a quarter of a century, when as a young man I began a three year greenhouse apprenticeship. This was prior to the day of the long-stemmed carnation, when such varieties as Boule de Neige and Alegatiere were in their zenith. Carnation breeding was little practiced in those days. The writer first became directly interested in plant breeding some nine years ago, when as horticulturist at the Vermont Station, carnation breeding was indulged in partly as a diversion and partly to study some problems connected with the work of breeding. The results of some of these studies were presented in the 20th annual report of the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station in 1908, under the caption of "Seasonal Influence in Carnation Crossing Relative to Seed Production." The conclusions arrived at from this investigation were that the early crosses, that is those made in October and November, seemed to give a considerably higher percentage of successes, a much larger number of seeds per capsule; a higher percentage of germination and apparently heavier seed. The probable reason for better results from the early crosses was assumed to be due to the greater vigor of the plants rather than to seasonal influence.

In the winter of 1907-08 investigations were undertaken looking towards the corroboration or disproof of Norton's theory, expressed in December, 1904* with respect to the possibility of our commercial carnation being an unfixed hybrid between a single and a true double. Carnation seedlings were classed into three groups—singles, semi-doubles, and doubles. The semi-double representing the commercial florist type, and the double, what is known as the "bullhead." These investigations were pursued at the Vermont Station during the winters of 1907-08 and 1909-09 and in the United States Department of Agriculture greenhouses at Arlington Farm in 1910-11. The results of this inquiry are now embodied in a report soon to be issued in bulletin form by the Vermont Experiment Station.

The crosses which were made may be classed under five groups. 1—Single X single. 2—Single X double. 3—Commercial X single. 4—Commercial X commercial. 5—Double X double.

In the first group twenty-two crosses netted 354 flowering plants of which all were single.

In group 2—single X double—44 crosses gave 1,004 flowering plants of which 4 were single, 988 commercial and 12 double. Percentages respectively of .4, 98.4 and 1.2.

Six crosses in group 3, commercial X single, resulted in 41 flowering plants, of which 21 were single and 20 commercial. Percentages respectively of 51.2 and 48.8.

Twenty-four crosses in group 4, commercial X commercial, netted 260 flowering plants, of which 62 were single and 198 semi-double and double. Percentages respectively of 23.8 and 76.2.

In group 5 all efforts to cross double with double were unsuccessful. This is in direct corroboration of similar efforts by Norton. It does not necessarily prove, however, that such crosses cannot be effected.

In order that we may fully understand the significance of the above results it seems desirable to enter into a brief discussion of the principles of heredity as exemplified in Mendel's law of inheritance.

MEDEL'S LAW OF INHERITANCE.

While you are all more or less familiar with the Mendelian theory of inheritance, it may not be amiss to present at this time a brief interpretation of it, in order that we may better understand the discussion which is to follow. In 1900 Hugo de Vries rediscovered an old paper by Gregor Mendel which had been presented before a scientific society in Brunn, Austria, in February and March, 1865. This paper contained a detailed account of carefully conducted investigations with the garden pea in which the inheritance of certain definite characters were noted. Only such varieties of the garden pea were selected for the work as had been proven by several seasons' culture to reproduce themselves absolutely true from seed. Another desiderata in their choice was that they possess opposing pairs of unit characters. Mendel studied seven pairs of these opposing characters, one of which will be sufficient to illustrate the method he pursued. This pair of characters were round and wrinkled uniform and definite ratio. On an average this ratio approximated 75 per cent round and 25 per cent wrinkled. The wrinkled pea was then said to be recessive to the round. In the subsequent generation, wrinkled seeds produced all wrinkled, while 25 per cent of the round gave all rounds and the remaining fifty gave wrinkled and round in the same proportion as the F_1 generation. From this data Mendel formulated the following numerical ratio for the F_2 generation of hybrids: 1:2:1 or 25 per cent dominants, 50 per cent dominant recessives and 25 per cent recessives. To facilitate further discussion along this line the algebraic expressions $R + 2RW + R$ will be used to denote the numerical value of the hybrids, R denoting round, and W wrinkled and RW the hybrid between R and W . In the hybrid RW the recessive W is written in the lower case, thus Rw . Such an expression always denotes an unexpressed or recessive character. For the purpose of further discussion it seems desirable to introduce other terms which are inimical to brevity and to clear expression of thought. The first term to be considered is that of the gamete. This term is employed by the biologist to denote the sexual cells of a plant. It is supposed to contain all of the heritable characters of a plant or animal. The fusion of a male and female gamete results in the formation of what is technically known as a zygote. If the fusing gametes are of a similar constitution, that is possessing identical unit characters as in the case of pure strains of plants, the resulting zygote is called homozygote, because it possesses a homogenous constitution.

seed. These being well defined characters were easy to study and to interpret in the resulting progeny. It was found that the hybrids of this cross or the F_1 generation gave all round seeds and this character was therefore called the dominant one. In the F_2 generation from self-fertilized plants he found that there was a splitting up of these characters in a fairly

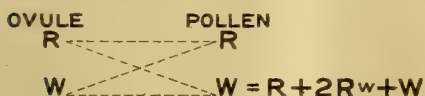

On the other hand if gametes of unlike constitution fuse with each other the resulting union is called a heterozygote because it contains unlike opposing characters. Therefore each ovule and pollen grain developed in plants produced from the Rw seed would theoretically contain either the R and W characters, and according to the law of chance would combine in about equal proportions. This may be best illustrated in the following manner:

It is important, however, to remember that Mendelian inheritance only gives such an expression as the above when the plants employed are gametically pure, that is in which two opposing or contrasting characters do not exist in the same gamete. With this conception of Mendelian inheritance and the factors which govern its expression we may now re-direct our attention to the data previously submitted with reference to the results from crosses in groups I to IV.

In group I singles were crossed with singles, and it will be remembered that the resulting progeny were all single flowered. In this case it is evident that the ovules and pollen grains of the single flowering carnation only contain the S. unit character, and for that reason it is only possible for the parent plants to transmit the S. unit to their progeny.

In group II we have an entirely different proposition. Here the female or seed parent possesses the S. unit and the pollen or male parent the D. or double character. By combining these we get the hybrid D s. as follows:

Ovule Pollen
 S.....D = D s., S being recessive, it is unexpressed. Theoretically, then, the first generation hybrids all produce flowers of the commercial type. The data presented shows that while this was very closely approximated it was not absolutely attained. Of the 1,004 seedlings which were flowered 4 produced single flowers, 988 commercial and 12 were classed as doubles. In the light of our present knowledge there is some reason to doubt the accuracy of the observation upon the twelve doubles noted. It is quite possible that they may have been rather full petalled bursters of the commercial type. However, be this as it may, the evidence seems to overwhelmingly support the idea that the single and double unit characters of the carnation are separate and distinct entities. The presence of a single plant in each of four crosses may be accounted for by assuming that through some accident in making the cross or in emasculating the flower a pollen grain from a single may have been transferred to the stigma from the forceps used in performing the operation. The percentages of singles, commercials and doubles from group II were respectively .4, 98.4, and 1.2. Theoretically there should not have been any singles or doubles. As already explained in the case of the doubles it is not at all certain that they were true doubles.

In group III a different set of factors are involved. Here we have the D s hybrid ovules crossed with pollen from the gametically pure single. This cross is expressed in the following manner:

While the data obtained from this cross is too meager to permit of much generalization it nevertheless very closely approaches the Mendelian ratio. Theoretically fifty per cent of the seedling plants should have produced single flowers and the remaining fifty per cent those of the commercial type. The figures actually obtained were 51.2 per cent singles and 48.8 per cent commercial.

Slightly different factors were involved in group IV. In this cross we are dealing with the unfixed hybrid in both parents and in consequence have the opposing unit characters in both parents as shown in the following diagram:

in which according to the law of chance the probable combination would be D + 2 D s + S or 1:2:1. The diagram shows how these characters may combine. The data obtained from such crosses shows that of the 260 plants flowered, 62 produced single flowers and 198 commercial and double, or percentages respectively of 23.8 and 76.2. The theoretical percentage should have been 25 per cent singles and 75 per cent commercial and double. No attempt was made to distinguish between the double and the commercial.

NATURE OF DOUBLING IN THE CARNATION.

While it has not as yet been possible to make a very careful study of the nature of doubling in the carnation, sufficient information has been derived from an examination of several hundred flowers to enable us to say that many factors contribute toward doubling. The simpler and more common ones are those of the multiplication of petals, by proliferation, the conversion of stamens into petals and the development of supernumerary buds inside the flower but outside of the ovary. The presence of supernumerary or adventitious buds seem to imply a tendency, of the flowers in which they occur, to advert to the "bullhead" type of flower. It is certain that their presence in the flower is accountable for many a bursted calyx, and in such instances it may be necessary for us to revise our current notions that a bursted calyx is due to an inherent tendency in the plant to produce weak calyces or that it is the result of unfavorable temperatures or conditions of growth. True it may be, that the presence of supernumerary buds may indicate an inherent weakness in the plant, but have we a right to say that this weakness is solely one of an imperfect calyx?

In the light of our present knowledge it would appear that we must look for some other explanation. It is evident that whatever determines the presence of these extra buds, must be due to some inherent factor in the organic hereditary constitution of the plant. In all probability these changes occur in the very earliest stages of the development of the bud. Until careful cytological studies have been made of this phenomenon our conception regarding the determining causes of the presence of adventitious buds must be a purely speculative one.

COMMERCIAL AND DOUBLE.

Recent observations on the behavior of supposedly commercial and double flowering plants would seem to indicate that the number of petals per flower vary greatly throughout the season. Seedlings which apparently produce good typical commercial flowers during the early part of the season or until the middle of January, began to develop many blooms which to all appearances were of the "bullhead" type. Our attention has also been called to an apparent opposite case, in which a seedling plant producing "bullheads" in the early part of the season began to develop flowers bordering on the commercial type.

Our present knowledge would lead us to believe that there is a considerable degree of seasonal fluctuating variability in some of the seedling plants. This variability has also been noticed in the Enchantress and Mrs. Ward and no doubt is more or less common in other full-petaled varieties.

ADVANTAGES OF SINGLE-DOUBLE CROSS.

Thus far in our discussion we have simply aimed to present a report of the results which have actually been secured from the various crosses mentioned, our present effort will be to show that the single-double cross may offer some advantages to the plant breeder which are not found in the commercial-commercial crosses. In the first place it has been shown that the resulting seedlings of the commercial crossed with the commercial yields approximately 25 per cent singles, 50 per cent commercials, and 25 per cent doubles. In other words, the possibility of securing a really desirable seedling is limited to 50 per cent of the progeny. In the single-double cross the breeder has 100 per cent from which to make his selection. The advantage therefore of the two crosses is as 50 to 100 in favor of the single-double combination. In addition to this we might mention that it frequently happens that very desirable colors occur in the singles, particularly in scarlets and crimsons. The singles are also as a rule very free blooming, and many of them produce long stiff-stemmed flowers. They are also as a rule more vigorous than the commercial types. Similar desirable characters are oftentimes found embodied in the "bullheads" and with intelligent selection of the parent plants it should be possible to secure a reasonably large percentage of promising seedlings.

There is yet another factor which we have not as yet mentioned but which seems to be clearly emphasized by our investigations, and that is with respect to the average number of seedling plants produced per cross. Our data shows that the single-single combination produced 16.1 per cent plants per cross; the single-double 22.8, the commercial-single 6.8 and the commercial-commercial 11.3. While it is recognized that a repetition of similar crosses might not corroborate these figures in whole, it is believed that the general results are indicative of greater vigor in the progeny of the single-double combination. Certainly when this data is considered in connection with the fact that the single-double cross gives, theoretically, at least, 100 instead of fifty plants from which to select, one is impressed with the greater desirability of employing such a cross when attempting to produce or create new varieties. We are well aware that such suggestions are directly at variance with present recognized practice, but nevertheless it is believed that the plant breeder can well afford to give it some consideration.

Japanese Azaleas.

Readers who are conversant with the glowing effects of azaleas when grouped upon the hillsides or in the gardens of Japan, must surely at times wish that these same exquisite effects might be reproduced in our English landscapes, writes a correspondent in the Gardeners' Magazine. The colorings of some of these azaleas are so attractive, so superb for distance effects, that I may be pardoned if I dilate a little upon such a subject. The use of Azalea mollis has become general, and both for garden decoration and for forcing its varieties have attained great popularity. For planting banks and slopes, this class of azaleas is very attractive, and both at the time of blossoming and in the autumn, when the leaves take on their glowing hues of scarlet and gold, they decidedly enhance the beauty and the interest of the garden.

Azaleas of the A. ledifolium and kindred types are being brought into use for wild garden effects in south coun-note on account of its earliness and hardness, as it often blooms like Rhododendron praecox, on a snow-covered landscape.

Away from all the foregoing are the azaleas from the warm mountain slopes of Japan, which are almost, if not quite, unequalled among dwarf shrubs. The usual varieties of Azalea indica do not hold the warmth of coloring and brilliancy of these new subjects, though the small glossy evergreen foliage bespeaks their near relationship to the indica type. One of the best known of this section is the glowing red A. Hinode-giri, which is capable of very fine effects, and with the following, is notable for the multitudes of blossoms which crowd the plants. Good as H. Hinode-giri is, A. Kirishima, to me, is far better. Imagine a set of dwarf shrubs clouded over with sheets of starry rosy-red flowers, a veritable blaze of rich color, and you will have some conception of A. Kirishima. Provided that A. Kirishima proves hardy enough for the sheltered southern counties, we shall get even yet a touch of Japanese color in our garden scenes.

Equally good is A. Yaye-giri, one of the most exquisite shades of orange-red ever noted among floral subjects. Unlike A. Kirishima, A. Yaye-giri produces duplex blossoms, but it is not the duplex flowers that one cares about, but the glowing, appealing orange-red shade which lights up the whole of its surroundings that commands attention. If one were compelled to always cultivate this azalea under glass, its beauty would more than compensate for the time and trouble expended upon it, but in the sheltered south I have hopes that it may find a permanent home on the sunny slopes of a warm rock or wild garden.

try gardens, and the results have been very pleasing, the pure white variety leucanthemum being capable of fine effects.

A. amena, or Hatsu-giri, is of distinct service for rock gardens, and when it does well, is quite attractive with its purplish blossoms. The Korean A. acuminata comes near to it in color, though a trifle paler, but the habit of the latter is much taller and more robust. A. acuminata deserves Grown as pot plants under glass the foregoing azaleas flower in March, but plants grown cool will be at their best in May. It is with the hope that these Japanese azaleas may be more widely admired and utilized that I pen these notes. They are deserving of the closest attention, and should have a good future; and apart from their usefulness for private gardens, they should be valuable to the market grower.

Canadian Horticultural Association.

The fifteenth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association opened Wednesday, August 7, at Montreal, Quebec, and about 75 delegates, many of them from the United States, were present. A goodly number of ladies also attended. President A. C. Wilshire was in the chair. Alderman Monahan welcomed the visitors on behalf of the mayor, who was out of town, and J. Connor replied. The president's address was read and received and J. Connor, G. A. Robinson and W. Gammage were appointed to report and open the discussion on it. The secretary's and treasurer's reports were received and adopted.

A lively discussion took place on the report of the committee on lower parcels post rates. The convention put itself on record for letter rates and to extend the limit to 100 pounds. The report of the nomenclature committee was ordered printed. It was moved by Mr. Philpot and seconded by W. Gammage to change the time of the election from the fourth to the third session. The trade exhibit judges are W. C. Hall, Geo. Hopton and E. A. Mepstead.

The exhibitors are: H. Bayersdorfer Co., Dale estate, Wm. Ewing Co., Dupuy & Ferguson, J. A. Simmers, Morehead Steam Trap Co., Dominion Paper Box Co., E. J. Hayward, Craig & Hutchins, Montreal Floral Exchange.

Among the numbers on the programme are the following papers: "Cost of Production of Florists' Stock," by W. W. Gammage, London, Ont.; "Economical Management of a Retail Store," by George M. Geraghty, Toronto, Ont.; "Commercial Orchids," by Thomas Manton, Eglinton, Ont. There will also be practical demonstrations in the arrangement of cut flowers by H. Dilleuth, also of Toronto. The association banquet will be held Thursday evening, August 8. The officers are: A. C. Wilshire, president; Walter Muston, first vice-president; H. B. Cowan, second vice-president; Julius Luck, secretary; C. H. Janzen, treasurer.

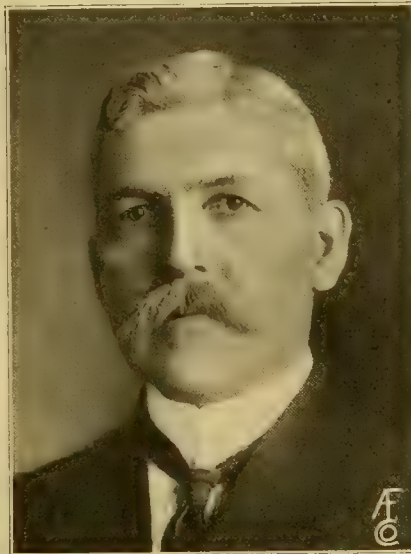

SECRETARY'S REPORT, 1912.

I have the pleasure of presenting to you my first secretary's report for the fifteenth annual convention. It has been a pleasure to me to follow the work of the association through the year and I find that there is much ground to be broken yet. The progress of the association appears to be slow, considering the rapid progress of the country. I think that we might do more advertising and make ourselves known otherwise, for I have proof that a large number of our fellow craftsmen do not know of the existence of the Canadian Horticultural Association.

The finances of the association are not sufficiently strong to admit of freely expending for necessary requirements, but with careful and business-like handling a good deal ought to be accomplished. I am sorry to note that the members after joining do not continue and that we always have to look to new members joining again, also the system of collecting dues might be improved upon. Application for reduced rates was made with the Eastern Passenger Association and we were granted the reduction by the certificate plan.

The trade exhibit last year was of much interest and I hope of much benefit to every one. As we do not charge for space this still remains a non-paying venture. The Society of American Florists derive a handsome revenue out of this. The executive committee at their meeting March 17 instructed your secretary to ask the minister of customs to appoint a competent appraiser in Toronto and Montreal, which was done and received a favorable reply. The thanks of the association are due to the Canadian Florist for the generous space given and reporting the proceedings of the convention. In closing I wish to thank the members for their kind attention and the help given to the secretary during the past year.

Cost of Production of Florists' Stock.

Paper read by W. W. Gammage at the fifteenth annual convention of the Canadian Horticultural Association, Montreal, August 6-9.

It is not my purpose to present a "cost finding system," but more to direct your thought along lines that will enable you to establish one for yourselves. How many are there in the florist business that know the cost of production? I venture the assertion that ninety-nine per cent do not; nor do they consider it an essential, being satisfied to drift along with more or less success, some struggling for an existence, some making a comfortable living and a few a fair competence.

Too many work without plans—they never see the vision. Their business structures are poor and shapeless and never enduring. If the plans are crude and small, so will the results be. The great secret, then, is to plan; broad, high and secure. Keep the plans ever before your eyes, work close to the specifications and keep building your business system steadily and securely, bit by bit, until your enterprise rises to its full height and glory. You must know your business, know it thoroughly, know its strong points, and above all, know its weak ones; know where to take advantage of opportunities, know where the leaks are and how to stop them.

To me it appears that the preparation of this paper should have been assigned to an accountant, for it is to that important "adjunct" that we must look for final information. In these days of competition, the moment a new man enters the field, he is challenged by a host of competitors. He must fight to live. He must conquer to succeed. Business is a game which men play, revel in, live for without rest or monotony for decades. It is a game that builds up industries and nations as a by-product of the playing. It is the spirit of rivalry that sharpens a man's intellect and spurs on his energy, and unless a man is possessed of this energy, this desire to surpass, he can never hope to carry the day. He will never succeed in the fight.

It is absolutely necessary to guard the "cost" expense account with all the expert accountant's ability. You may have the mechanical ability to superintend or construct your building, you may have the ability to grow and produce the finest stock, both necessary essentials, but if you do not have a thorough knowledge of values, if you do not know how, when, and where to buy your supplies or be able to operate or supervise an aggressive selling policy and handle your accounts in a systematic and business-like way, your competitor with business ability will soon crowd you to the wall.

You may say that supply and demand govern prices; but they are not an infallible governing influence, as in a case of keen competition or a squeeze out supply and demand are a secondary consequence. Therefore, it is all the more necessary to know where the danger line lies, where the profits leave off and the loss begins, when to "dump" and re-occupy the space with a profit-bearing crop. Then in order that a business may be conducted upon a sound basis, it would be necessary to establish a cost finding system. The nature of the business and size of the establishment will largely direct the system to adopt. If it is necessary for a manufacturer to keep an accurate record of the cost of his productions, that he may establish a selling price that will yield a profit, is it not just as necessary for a florist to know what it is costing to produce his carnations, roses, or pot plants?

To the specialist or concern that grows only one or two or three lines, it is a simple method of accounting; but where a number of lines are handled and the same space occupied several times during the year by different varieties at varying periods, it is a more difficult problem. Each variety must bear its share of the fixed expenses such as: interest on investment, depreciation, taxes, insurance, salary of owner, superintendent or foreman as the case may be, selling cost, uncollectable accounts, and any other non-productive expense in connection with the growers time, proportion of fuel, soil and fertilizer, flower pots, and any other direct expense that may apply. This will entail a considerable amount of detail work, but when once in operation, it soon becomes a habit and the results are a source of satisfaction to the careful business man.

Wheeler Park, Oklahoma City.

It is a safe assertion to make that no city which in its upbuilding donates money and brains to the establishing and maintenance of public parks and playgrounds will ever go backwards or, in fact, be long checked in any way, in its onward growth. Oklahoma City has many things to be proud of in her ornamental business buildings, paved streets and her superb interurban trolley system, but the finest feature of her 23 years' growth is Wheeler Park, a pleasant breathing spot located on the banks of the Canadian River and right in the heart of the city.

Eight years ago, when the present superintendent, C. E. Franke, came to take charge of the park, it was a swampy wilderness. Today it is a veritable beauty spot every day in the year. The park embraces 47 acres, is well wooded with a natural growth of native trees, and has proved an ideal spot for Mr. Franke to display his landscape-gardening ability and bring about many pleasing results. Broad sweeping lawns of bluegrass have been laid down, bordering which carefully planted and tended flower beds are to be seen. A children's playground with swings and all other equipment that goes to make a child happy is one of the latest additions and is surely appreciated by the coming generations as the large crowds of youngsters testify. A picnic grove and an ever-growing zoological collection are also features.

It is more along the line of floriculture that these notes will be concerned with, however, and we would first observe that while a great many species of flowering and ornamental plants thrive luxuriantly in this climate, there are some that will hardly exist with the best of care. For instance, a great many kinds of roses have been tried but so far none have been found that were quite satisfactory. The hot July sun seems too much for them. Coleus as bedding plants blister easily and alternanthera becomes infested with "white fly," one of the hardest pests to eradicate. Hence it will be seen there are difficulties encountered here in ornamental gardening that are not usually met with in most city parks. However, Mr. Franke has become familiar with conditions and the present aspect of the flower gardening throughout the park in general is most pleasing and reflects great credit on the grower.

Two large iron-frame greenhouses have been built for the raising of bedding stock. These are provided with a wire guard over the entire roofs to prevent damage from hail. For two successive seasons every pane of glass was broken by hailstones; now that the wire guards are in place there can be no more damage from that source. At present one of these houses is planted in chrysanthemums and the early sort, Golden Glow, is already (August 3) showing color. Facing the greenhouses there is a large, almost circular lawn with a bed of cannas in the center some fifty feet or more in diameter. Cannas do well here. Louisiana occupies the centre and is fully seven feet high. Other varieties in the bed are such as Egandale, Bouvier, David Harum, etc., and they are all flowering profusely.

Around the border of this circular lawn are some ten or twelve round beds about twelve feet in diameter. Most of these are massed with geraniums, separate colors to each bed. Such varieties as Jean Viaud, Trego, S. A. Nutt, Beaute Poitevine, and White Swan have proved the best here and they are a complete mass of gay blossoms. Solid beds of Plumbago are a feature. They flower profusely all summer long. The single flowering Vinca is another subject used for massing extensively and keeps in bloom constantly throughout the summer. A bed of the old-fashioned Lantana was a surprise to us. The brilliant coloring and the abundant foliage as grown here is charmingly effective.

Perhaps the chief feature of the flower garden is a fac-simile of an automobile on a raised platform, done in dwarf plants. The superstructure of the machine is made of rustic work, coleus; sedum and asparagus sprengeri fill the body. The sides of the platform are of alternantheri, yellow and red, one side bearing the number of the car, 23, the other side carrying a representation of an eagle. The track leading to the platform was of coleus and santolina, the latter used to designate the wheelmarks and which indeed gave a good representation of them. One of the pretty effects of the garden is a planting of sanseverias, bordered with cyperus alternifolius. Both of the varieties have made sufficient growth to cover completely, and the combination is a good one.

Several elaborate designs in carpet bedding have been marked out. One a pan-shaped bed, with the words, "Wheeler Park, 1912," done with alternanthera in the body of the fan, is quite conspicuous. Among the other designs, such plants as Iresine, mesembryanthemum, sedums, agares, etc., have been used in huge quantities, all of which tend to make the flower garden as a whole a very pretty picture. As mentioned above, cannas thrive superbly and large plantings of them are seen on every hand. Quite a number of seedlings are in flower in the trial grounds, several of which look European Horticulture.

FROM THE BRITISH PRESS.

The Australian Bluebell Creeper (Sollya heterophylla).—The popular name of this slender-growing ligneous climber is a very appropriate one, as the bell-shaped flowers are a delightful shade of blue. While it may be treated as a wall plant in the favored parts of these isles, the protection of a greenhouse is, in most parts, necessary to its well-doing. In that structure it may be grown in different ways, as, if the house is not a lofty one, it has an exceedingly pretty effect when trained to the roof or rafter, the drooping blossoms being then seen to the best advantage. Besides this, it may be grown in pots, and the slender shoots twined around a few sticks. In this way it will flower profusely, and that, too, over a lengthened period, while flowers of that tint are appreciated by everyone. This sollya may be readily struck from cuttings of the young growing shoots, put into sandy soil and placed in a close propagating-case kept at a warm greenhouse temperature. It prefers a certain amount of peat in the potting soil. The late Mr. J. H. Veitch, in his "Traveller's Notes," mentions that while he met with sollya freely in Western Australia, it was always as a dwarf bush and not as a climber.

A Beautiful Honeysuckle.—Lonicera alpigena belongs to the bush section of the genus, and is easily distinguished from other members of the same group by its upright habit, intensely hairy leaves and showy inflorescences. A native of the European Alps and the Himalaya, it forms a shapely bush six feet or eight feet high and as far through, clothed with ovate or obovate leaves, which are densely covered on the under surface with soft, velvety hairs. They vary from two inches to four and a half inches long and from one inch to two inches in width. The flowers are borne in pairs from the leaf-axils, each two flowers being enclosed by a pair of large red bracts. The flowers are orange colored, tubular, half an inch to three-quarters of an inch long and hairy. The bracts are persistent after the fall of the flowers, and gradually take on a deeper color, so that when the black fruits are ripe in August they are deep red. Growing freely almost anywhere, it is an excellent shrub to place in a mixed shrubbery, while there are many less ornamental subjects which occupy prominent positions as specimen plants.

Horticultural Events of the Nineteenth Century.—Of trees, the chief introductions were coniferae, from America and Japan. Sequoia gigantea, the many species of picea, as amabilis, concolor, Nordmanniana, lasiocarpa, nobilis; Pseudotsuga Douglasi; Abies Menziesii and polita; Cupressus Lawsoniana, the retinospore, sciadopitys verticillata are a very few. Then how greatly enriched in shrubs did the nineteenth century make our gardens. The *weigela*s, *spirea*s, Japanese cherries, and plums, Japanese maples, flowering currants, philadelphus, aralia chinensis, fatsia japonica, daphniphyllum, azara microphylla, berberidopsis coralina, berberis Darwini, caryopteris mastacanthus, ceanothus, cotoneaster, *escallonia*s, eucryphia, pinnatifolia olearia, the Himalayan rhododendrons, virburnums—a host in themselves, also add to the charm of our gardens.

The Namaqualand Daisy.—This beautiful little low-growing annual is doing better this year than we ever remember seeing it before. Plants that were raised from seeds sown in a cold frame at the end of March commenced to flower as soon as planted out the third week in May, and look like continuing the display right through the summer. The beautiful glossy, orange-colored flowers resemble those of the *gerbera*s in shape and gracefulness. We have them planted between the roses in a bed made up of such yellow varieties as Arthur R. Goodwin, Duchess of Wellington and J. Coey, and the effect is most pleasing. Owing to their shallow rooting they do not rob the roses of much food, and are much better for rose-beds than violas. It is a pity that the common name of this annual is almost as unwieldy as the botanical one, viz., dimorphotheca aurantiaca.

A Rose Temple.—Here is another instance (see the note upon "Architectural Ornaments") of how a well-built and finely designed architectural structure may add to the dignity and nobility of a garden, besides being of prime utility. This rose temple was designed and erected by Messrs. Cheal, Crawley, well-known garden makers, and fittingly terminates a main terrace path, allowing a far view into the grace of the natural scene beyond. It might also be used as a cool retiring house (perhaps covered a little with creepers), or as a tea pavilion. At all events, it is a delightful sanctum.

Rose Killarney Brilliant.—Under this name, Alex. Dickson & Sons, of Newtownards, Ireland, have registered in America a new sport of Killarney which originated in this country. The blooms of the variety are described as being more double than Double Pink Killarney and the color brighter than the original Pink Killarney. The form of the flower and the habit of growth are like the original Killarney.

CARNATIONS ABOUT GONE.

Carnations are not so plentiful, many of the growers having thrown them out. Outdoor ones are in and moving fairly well. Gladioli are still coming in and asters are increasing, especially in the common varieties. Some good fancy ones are seen. If this cool weather continues many will return to the city. Stores are being renovated and preparations for fall trade are seen everywhere.

NOTES.

Joseph Krug of Alton, Ill., was in town Sunday. He has opened up a store in Granite City. Mr. Krug has fine house of chrysanthemum plants thrown out his carnations and has a and his cut blooms are in fine shape for fall trade.

N. Kingsley, of the Mullanphy Flower Co., has returned from his vacation. Wm. A. Seeger, of the same firm, will attend the convention.

The Wm. C. Smith Wholesale Floral Co. is getting some good outdoor carnations, also a fine assortment of gladioli and lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. John Connon, of Webster Grove, St. Louis county, are the proud parents of a baby girl.

C. A. Kuehn is having a fine assortment of outdoor flowers, also lilies, asters, roses and carnations.

M. Le Vine, with Lion & Co., New York, is with us and reports good trade all along the line.

Geo. H. Angermueller has a fine supply of extra fancy asters which have good sale. K.

MARKET UNCHANGED.

Market conditions are just about the same as at last writing. A steady demand has been really more than offset by an increased supply of nearly everything. Naturally in this last the worst offender is asters. The choice and really good ones clean up. The poorer accumulate and hold down the prices of nearly everything. Gladioli have let up somewhat judging from the receipts at the close of last week and the beginning of this. The cool weather is probably the cause. The large receipts of giganteum lilies are taken up fairly well. *Auratum*s move none too well, although the large offering is of a very choice quality. Roses have for the past fortnight cleaned up readily. The best seller is, of course, the American Beauty. Others, including Killarney, Kaiserin, Ivory, Bride, Taft, My Maryland, Golden Gate and Sunburst are right up with the leader. Carnations still hold on as though they hated to leave us for a few months. The good ones sell pretty well.

NOTES.

All those living here and from other points who will join either C. E. Critchell's and Al Heckman's party at noon on the Big Four, or E. G. Gillett's at night on the C. H. & D., for Chicago should advise the respective gentlemen as quickly as possible. The list is growing fast.

The Cincinnati Florists' Society will meet next Monday evening at the club rooms in the Flower market.

E. G. Gillett is in receipt of a card from William and Mary Lodder who are at present at Quebec.

Chas. Garvey is again at the store after his three weeks' vacation spent at Indianapolis.

B. P. Critchell celebrated his seventieth birthday anniversary on Thursday, Aug. 8.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Pfeiffer are back after their extended trip to the Pacific coast.

Ed. Bossmeyer, of C. E. Critchell's, is on his vacation.

P. J. Olinger is back from Chicago.

Visitors: E. P. Hall, Shelbyville, Ind.; S. F. Pulant, Winchester, Ky.; E. Y. Teas, Centerville, Ind.; Fred Rupp, Lawrenceburg, Ind.; Jos. Goldman, Middletown, O.; Julius Dillhof, of Schloss Bros., New York. H.

Convention Exhibitors.

Every foot of available space will be sold before the opening of the convention at the Chicago Coliseum, August 20-23, and those desiring to exhibit must make immediate application or it will be too late. It must be remembered that the exhibitor rents the space only, and should make arrangements as far ahead as possible for the erection of tables, hiring of desks, securing signs, or whatever is required for his exhibit. The superintendent of the trade exhibition will assist as far as his time will allow. By a recommendation of the advisory board, that part of rule 3 which reads "Exhibition space shall be limited to six feet, six inches above the floor" is changed to read "shall be limited to ten feet above the floor." Following is a complete list of exhibitors to August 3, 1912:

ST. LOUIS, it is stated, will be a candidate for the next convention.

THE Washington Florists' Club pledged $200 toward the Smith memorial July 6.

L. E. PARTRIDGE, of Sharp, Partridge & Co., Chicago, says that the glass market remains exceedingly firm and believes that there is less greenhouse glass in stock in the United States today than there has been at any time during the past 10 years. The factories are still closed and are not likely to resume operations until the latter part of October.

Personal.

Geo. Mount and S. W. Mount, of George Mount & Sons, Ltd., Canterbury, England, expect to make a tour of the United States in September.

Geo. M. Geraghty, Toronto, Ont., has been spending a brief vacation with friends at Berwyn, Ill., and returns this week.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, Ill., is a bull mooser and a delegate to the national progressive convention at Chicago.

Society of American Florists.

TWENTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL CONVENTION.

Even at this date all arrangements are about completed for the entertainment of the visitors to the convention. Every detail for their comfort and enjoyment has been taken care of by some committee. Every one connected with the business in any way is anxious to do something and has done something to help make this the banner convention in the history of the society.

Those that have not been fortunate enough to hear L. W. C. Tuthill talk on advertising have a pleasant surprise awaiting them on Wednesday morning, when he entertains us with his paper, "Advertising: Some Wrongs to Make Right." It has been the privilege of the writer to hear part of the lecture that will be given by Fred C. W. Brown and see many of the subjects he will present with his illustrated lecture on "Floral Designing"; this will be the attractive and interesting feature of Wednesday evening's session.

Bensinger's Bowling Alleys, 29 West Randolph street, where the annual bowling tournament takes place Thursday, are new alleys and arrangements have been made for the comfortable seating of spectators and "rooters." Ravinia Park, the most noted and exclusive resort near Chicago, where the day's entertainment will take place on Friday, is a beautiful place, and at no previous convention has there been such favorable grounds and lawns to carry out the program of outdoor sports and the baseball game. The band concert and grand opera is of the highest quality and the conductor has an international reputation. Luncheon will be served upon the arrival of the party at the park and dinner in the evening. Visitors to the convention should not let anything prevent their being present on this trip, when such elaborate preparations have been made for their pleasure. All of the business sessions of the society will be taken up with important business matters and discussions. Taken all together, it is going to be a busy convention.

Nothing has been left undone for the entertainment of the ladies. Automobile rides, entertainment at the exclusive South Shore Country Club, and many other attractive and interesting trips have been provided for; and the ladies of Chicago are holding frequent meetings to provide even additional entertainment. At this date many reservations have been made at the different hotels, showing the great interest that is being taken by the florists and representatives of the allied trades in all parts of the country.

The list of exhibitors, published elsewhere, speaks for itself. To avoid confusion and save time at the convention, dues may be sent to the secretary now at the Auditorium Hotel, Chicago, and receipt and 1912 button will be returned immediately. This button has already been sent to those who have paid dues for 1912. Applications for membership may also be sent to the same address and the 1912 button will be returned. Any inquiry regarding hotel accommodations will be turned over to the local hotel committee for a prompt reply. This will be an opportunity to see one of the greatest and most hospitable cities in the world, and if you do not take advantage of it at this time, you will regret not doing so until the end of your days. And if the kind treatment and many courtesies that have been showered upon your secretary since he has been here are a sample of what they intend doing for every visitor, I can only say—come!

DEPARTMENT OF PLANT REGISTRATION.

As no objections have been filed, public notice is hereby given that the registration of the new geranium "Helen Michell" by the Henry F. Michell Co., 518 Market St., Philadelphia, Pa., becomes complete.

July 29, 1912. JOHN YOUNG, Sec'y.

Florists' Hall Association.

The report of the officials of the Florists' Hall Association, for the year ending August 1, 1912, will show that the sum of $44,155.30 has been paid for glass broken by hail. The year just ended has been one of the most disastrous in the history of the Hall Association, and the efficiency of that organization has again been shown by the prompt settlement of claims, although it has been necessary to use reserve fund securities as collateral to accomplish that purpose. The directors have ordered the twenty-fourth assessment to be levied September 15, 1912, in order to secure funds to repay the moneys so borrowed.

JULY AN AVERAGE MONTH.
 "An average July" will about size up the business for the month just passed. The volume of business was slightly greater, just enough to cause the florists to feel that it might have been worse. Out-door stuff has a large part in the traffic at present. Sweet peas were hardly a satisfactory crop this season, and are practically done for now. Carnations are out of the running.. Asters and gladioli take their place. They, with roses and the summer lilies, Album and Auratum, nearly complete the list of staples available. They are all good and there seems to be plenty for all demands.

NOTES.

Elwood Kline left Wichita about a year ago for Lawrence, where he took over one of the old established places of that city. He is planning to open a city store in a few weeks. His brother, Norval Kline, has bought the Schurr floral store in Hutchinson.

F. Kuechenmeister has about completed a show house for palms, ferns, etc., that is unique in the fact that the roof is built of alternate sections of shingle roof and rows of glass. From present appearances a hail storm would hardly think it worth while to tackle it.

John Smith, another Wichita boy, is also in Lawrence, and, we are informed, will take over the place of A. Whitcomb, one of the pioneer florists of the state.

The local florists, in common with other tradesmen, are complaining of poor collections, but are anticipating a record-breaking season for next winter.

Miss Tomer and Miss Wilhite, of the store force of W. H. Culp & Co., and Miss Cobb, bookkeeper, will begin their vacations this week.

WHITE ROSES VERY SCARCE.

The cool weather of the past week has caused the supply to shorten up considerably and roses of nearly all kinds are very scarce and bringing fancy prices. White roses, especially White Killarney, are very scarce and even the short stemmed stock cleans up quickly at a good figure. Killarney roses are quite plentiful but there is a good demand for fancy stock and Mrs. Aaron Ward roses are in oversupply. American Beauty roses are about as scarce as white roses and are very good property. Good asters are scarce but there is a glut of inferior stock, and sweet peas are rapidly approaching the end. The supply of gladioli is very large and the demand is principally for America and Mrs. Francis King. Orchids are very scarce and $7.50 per dozen is asked for the best Gaskelliana and $9 per dozen for gigas. Lily of the valley is very plentiful and the first dahlias of the season arrived this week. The demand for lilies is much larger and Harrisii have advanced considerably in price. Fine snapdragons are arriving in quantity and there is an oversupply in greens. The colored water lilies are still attracting a great deal of attention in the retail windows and a fine showing of the beautiful flowers in white, blue and pink were displayed in one of the retail stores this week. A large quantity of outside stock is being used for window decorations, including Rudbeckia, Golden Glow, feverfew, achillea and large bunches of golden rod. Many of the stores are being repainted and the main topic of conversation on the market is the coming S. A. F. convention. Large banners are seen everywhere and the trade exhibits will be something out of the ordinary and a record breaking attendance is expected.

The Chicago Trade Committee of florists and allied trades are requesting the local employers to close their stores as early as convenient Convention Outing Day, Friday, August 23, so that their employes may have an opportunity to participate.

Out-of-town buyers should time orders so as to reach this city August 23 not later than 8 a. m.

The wholesale florists all cordially invite the visitors to the convention to visit their stores and it would be well for everyone to make a complete trip through the great central market.

NOTES.

J. F. Amman, of Edwardsville, and C. E. Gullett, of Lincoln, are attending the Bull Moose convention here this week. Mr. Amman represents the district that has Madison county for its headquarters and Mr. Gullett is very much interested in the suffrage meeting that is being held in the Fine Arts building. Mrs. C. L. Washburn is also taking a prominent part in this meeting and her genial husband is seen wearing the "votes for women" button.

A. Lange says that this summer's business is very good and shows about a 10 per cent increase over previous years. He gives advertising a great deal of credit for the splendid showing and is one of the few enterprising retailers who realize the true value of printer's ink. H. A. Stone, head designer at this establishment, says that July was a good month for weddings and even much better than June.

The A. L. Randall Co. is making a great many improvements to its store and when these are completed it will be one of the finest equipped stores in this section of the country. A large ice-box is being installed and Frank Johnson is getting things in shape at the store for convention week.

O. Johnson says that the Batavia Greenhouse Co. has already finished its rose planting in its new range and will soon start planting its carnations. This firm has only been in business for a few years and with its new addition has over 150,000 feet of glass.

Joe Beaver and Chas. Balluff are busy distributing convention advertising and are doing a good job of it, for the market looks as if Ringling Bros.' billposting crew passed through it this week.

N. P. Miller, with Kennicott Bros. Co., has just purchased a five passenger Oldsmobile touring car and will be right on deck with his machine at the S. A. F. convention.

The Geo. M. Garland Co. has just installed a large amount of new machinery in its factory at Des Plaines and now has a very modern shop.

A. I. Simmons, captain of the seventh infantry, was called to Springfield by the request of the governor this week.

Mention the American Florist when writing

At the Sherman Hotel, August 5, the National Associated Florist Salesman Society was organized as a fraternal order for the development and the progressiveness of the trade. The meeting was called to order by A. F. Longren presiding as temporary chairman and T. E. Waters, Samuel Seligman, C. E. Pruner and several others in attendance. Another meeting will be held on August 17.

The S. Wilks Manufacturing Co. has a large number of hot water greenhouse boilers in stock and is going after the business in grand style this fall. This firm has been manufacturing greenhouse boilers for a great many years and its neatly illustrated catalog and price list will be mailed to any florist upon request.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are receiving a fine grade of American Beauty roses from Wm. Dittman, the well known grower, of New Castle, Ind. Miss Paradise has returned from an enjoyable outing in Michigan and Miss Pearson and Wm. Johnson are now enjoying their vacations.

Carl Ickes says that the A. Dietsch Co. is enjoying an extremely busy season and that orders are always coming in. M. Miesse, of Lancaster, O., has placed an order for three new houses 30x225 feet and Mrs. Chas. Schafer, of Kankakee an order for a 90 foot plant house.

Bassett & Washburn are getting along very well with work on their greenhouses and everything is going along in tip-top shape. This firm will have a fine place when the range is completed and according to one of the proprietors it will be second to none in this country.

A. C. Kohlbrand, with the E. C. Ameling Co., is back from a fishing trip at Torch Lake, Mich., with the report that the fishing was very poor and that he did not even get acquainted with very many members of the finny tribe.

Miss Nelda Wolf, Zech & Mann's efficient bookkeeper, is visiting friends in Indiana, and Fred Ottenbacher, Z. & M.'s old reliable standby is spending his vacation with James Novac, the rose specialist, at Wietorville, Kenmore.

A. Henderson & Co. have just received a carload of Formosa lily bulbs and a carload of French bulbs is expected to arrive at any moment. A large shipment of sphagnum moss has arrived and is now being distributed.

Samuel Seligman, Wertheimer Bros.' "Sprinkleproof Sam," is in the city this week and reports taking big orders for his firm's new crepon chiffon which is very likely to outrival the famous Sprinkleproof brand.

R. A. Smythe, of Benton Harbor, Mich., is attending the Progressive convention in this city this week. He is a candidate for state senator in the seventh district of the Wolverine state on the Bull Moose ticket.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is enjoying a very busy season and is having a good call for roses of all kinds. The supply department is also very busy and a full line of everything is now on their list.

John Huebner, Joseph Foerster, George Asmus, Ernest Farley and Wm. Wolf will be in the team that will represent this city at the S. A. F. convention bowling tournament.

Joseph Pfeffer, bookkeeper for Wieland & Risch, is back from his vacation.

Fred Lautenschlager, Kroeschell Bros. Co.'s boiler man, is pretty busy these days with convention matters and is always on the job early and late.

Leonard DeLair, brother-in-law to W. E. Lynch and formerly employed at E. H. Hunt's, died of typhoid fever at Park Ridge, Sunday, August 4.

George Washington Flowers Leveson, better known as Little George, the flower boy, and wife are back from a visit at South Haven, Mich.

A meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association will be held at the Tavern, West Washington street, next Thursday, August 15.

The E. C. Ameling Co. is painting the interior of its store, and John Michelson and his able force are all ready for a banner fall.

John Kruchten and George Gobel returned on Sunday, August 4, from a most enjoyable fishing trip at Big Sand Lake, Wis.

Fred Stielow, of Niles Center, is shipping some very fine gladioli to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association's store.

The Geo. Wittbold Co. is rebuilding one of its greenhouses on Buckingham Place with Dietsch material.

Mrs. Ennis, of the Wisconsin Floral Co., Milwaukee, Wis., was a visitor to the market on August 5.

Wolfe, the Florist, of Waco, Texas, was in the city on business and pleasure combined this week.

The Des Plaines Floral Co. will grow one house of single violets this fall.

A. Miller returned on August 1 from a business trip to Minnesota.

Miss Martha Gunterberg is vacationing at Fairmount, Minn.

Max Cohn, with J. H. McNelly, is away on his vacation.

Wilder S. Deamud took his first degree in Masonry on Friday, August 2, in the lodge that his grandfather, H. H. Wilder, was master of before Mr. Deamud's parents were married. His father, the genial J. B. Deamud, had the honor of being the first to receive his son when he was admitted to the lodge.

Edgar Winterson is back from a visit with friends at Alton and Indianapolis and is again attending to his duties at Winterson's seed store. Louis Winterson is now enjoying a well-earned rest at Blue Field, Ky.

Wietor Bros. are all through planting carnations and have a nice surplus of field grown plants. This firm extends a cordial invitation to all visitors to the S. A. F. convention to inspect their greenhouses in Kenmore while they are in the city.

W. P. Kyle says that business is very good at Kyle & Foerster's store and that the receipts for July were very satisfactory.

Hoerber Bros. have had very good success growing gladioli this year and are now showing some very fine stock at their store.

Mrs. Arthur C. Lang says that business was very good this summer and that July was a banner month for funeral work.

Miss Nettie Parker, the Chicago Carnation Co.'s popular stenographer, has returned from a most enjoyable vacation.

Frank Kral says that business is very good and that he is filling a large number of funeral orders.

Erne & Klingel are featuring a fine line of greens, particularly adiantum and smilax.

E. Bollinger, of Lake Forest, is back from a business trip to Milwaukee.

W. W. Randall is back from a very successful 7,000 mile business trip.

INVITATION

Visiting Florists during Convention Week, or any other time, when in Chicago, are cordially invited to make themselves at home at our place of business, where their mail can be addressed with the assurance that same will receive the utmost care until called for.

We are centrally located on all direct and connecting lines with the Coliseum, where the Convention will be held. Our place is large, cool, airy and commodious, and we will try to make you feel at home while here.

Chicago is noted for the home of the Flower Industry, and you are invited to make your home with us. EVERYBODY WELCOME.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association is filling a large number of orders for fine Killarney and White Killarney roses from stock shipped in from the Wellworth Farm greenhouses. A meeting of the directors and stockholders of the association was held August 7 at 3 p. m., when much important business was transacted.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. received a telegram this week from F. C. Vrecek, of the Fulton Market Flower Shop, Columbus, O., that his only daughter was buried August 3, and the sympathy of the trade is extended by his many friends in the city.

Thos. Franks, of Champaign, Ill., stopped in Chicago on his way home from a trip to the Pacific coast. He was a month on the way. He thinks the northwest a fine country and found grand opportunities there for young men.

The Superior Machine & Boiler Works has just sold a No. 00 to A. H. Burt of Kankakee. Mr. Pontious says that he expects to book a couple of more orders before the convention is over.

J. A. Budlong's lily of the valley is of fine quality and the magnificent long stemmed stock, well clothed in luxuriant foliage and heavily laden with large bells, is meeting with very good sale.

Tim Matchen says that business continues to be good at Peter Reinberg's store and that White Killarney and American Beauty roses clean up well.

C. M. Dickerson is back with his company of boy scouts and is now busy with convention matters. Welcome, General.

Eric Johnson has returned from Sister Lakes, Mich., and is again on the job at the A. L. Randall Co.'s store.

Vaughan's Seed Store is showing some fine blooms daily of named fancy gladiolus in many kinds, both imported and American seedlings.

Fred Liebermann and wife, who are playing on the Bloomer Girls' baseball nine, are back from a western tour.

The veteran, John G. Heintz, and family, came in by automobile from Terre Haute, Ind.

William Jaap, of Duluth, Minn., is here looking for building material.

Arthur Huebner is spending his vacation at Fort Atchison, Wis.

Chicago Florists' Club.

The regular meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club was held at the Union Restaurant, August 1. Vice-President Robertson in the chair. President Foley was in attendance but could only remain a short time to report for the entertainment committee as he was called out of town on urgent business. Various other convention committees reported progress, showing all arrangements for the coming meeting of the Society of American Florists to be in a very satisfactory condition. Chairman Rudd of the committee on by-laws revision again read the new code, which was adopted. The club's quartet, consisting of Geo. Asmus, E. F. Winterson, Chas. Balluff and Chas. McKellar, which is in training for the coming convention, rendered a number of selections in their famous old-time style. The quartet was warmly received and although many moons have come and gone since the last public appearance, showed no diminution of style or finish in their rendition. The following new members were elected: L. P. Miller, 84 East Jackson boulevard, N. P. Brunke, 84 East Jackson boulevard. The next meeting will be held at the same time and place, August 15.

DEMAND BELOW AVERAGE.

The month of August has entered very coolly, so to speak, with snow falling in some parts of the state, but not here. Still the glass marked 51 degrees recently. The demand was a trifle better the last week, which, however, is not saying much, as it was still a trifle below the average. There is not much bother about business anyway. All those who can get away are out of town for a period or on week-end trips, and many of the growers are not sending in except on orders. Kaiserin and White Killarneys are not seen at all or so poor as to be almost worthless. The designers are put to it to get enough to supply even the meager demand which once in a while is quite important, however. Pink roses are often substituted and Mrs. Taft, which appears to be a good summer rose, also has a place. American Beauties are scarce, the imported stock being all sold often before it arrives. Valley and Easter lilies are a great help. There are quantities of asters—nothing very great as yet, but still some very fair stock is seen. Hydrangea paniculata has arrived and will be a staple for the next month. Rarely fine gladioli are seen in most of the stocks. There has been great improvement in this flower in the past five years, some of the newer white sorts supplying grace and beauty to design and decorative work better than any other flower at this season.

NOTES.

The August meeting of the club was rather poorly attended, many of the members being on their vacations. The best routes to Chicago and the hotels of the convention city were discussed. After hearing reports of Geo. W. Watson and John Westcott on railroads it was decided to go with the Washington and Baltimore clubs. At the next meeting the Chicago convention will be discussed from every standpoint.

Eleventh street is again to the fore. George Craig has ordered an autocar, one of the best, which will be due early in September. Robert Cromford, his neighbor, was the pioneer with the motor car. His was an electric purchased years ago when they were somewhat of an experiment. After a year's time he gave it up and went back to horses.

In the wholesale markets there is the usual morning hustle and then it is all over for the day, except for a call over the phone. The Pennock-Meehan Co. closes during August at 5 p. m. Asters and gladioli are taking up the table space these days. Good gardenias and valley in quantity are also seen.

Robert Gaul was married to Miss Mabel G. Field Wednesday, July 31. Mr. Gaul is one of the Pennock-Meehan force. Artist Thompson, of the same force, made the shower bunch of valley and white roses, a very dainty affair.

The Jos. Heacock Co. has closed its city office for this month and is now resting the roses for the fall campaign. They still have orchids, as their large stock of cattleyas enables them to cut a few at all seasons.

The Berger Market offers splendid asters and Easter lilies. They have secured some important new consignors and are laying plans for a large increase in business for the coming season.

The Leo Niessen Co. is very strong on asters, handling immense quantities daily. Amerca Gladiolus, a little above the average, is a summer leader here. Edward Fancourt is busily engaged in getting out the firm's new catalogue which will be the last word in a book of this kind.

Edward Reid has gone on a southern trip, but will be back in time for the convention. K.

MERIDEN, CONN.—A. N. Pierson offers a reward for the arrest of Salafatore Barone who assaulted Antone Olsen, foreman of a rose section of the Pierson establishment, with an iron bar.

North Shore Horticultural Society.

The annual summer exhibition of the North Shore Horticultural Society, of Lake Forest, Ill., was held August 3. The exhibition was a success in every way and was well attended. Those who carried off the honors in some of the various classes were as follows:

Vegetables—Best display on table: D. M. Cummings (K. Lofing, gardener), first; J. F. Swift (G. Koppenhoefer, supt.), second; Cyrus H. McCormick (E. Orpet, supt.), third. General display: B. L. Smith (Albert H. Reuphe, supt.), first; Wm. O. Lindley (Max Fischon, gardener), second. Sweepstakes: Louis F. Swift, first; A. M. Day (O. Urdahl, supt.), second; Wm. O. Lindley, third.

There were about ninety classes in the flower division. Among the first prize winners were H. C. Taylor, W. O. Lindley, Mrs. C. H. McCormick, Mrs. Frank Farwell, Mrs. Moos and others.

ASTER SEASON STARTS.

There is still a little business, though the general run of the goods coming in is not up to the standard. Considering everything, however, we cannot expect anything better. Roses have not improved much and carnations are walking the plank. Asters are beginning to come in. They have dropped in price and increased in quantity. Mums have made their appearance, Golden Glow is seen, and considering the earliness of the season there are some fairly good ones.

NOTES.

Dunn and Bradstreet both report good business prospects, better than a year ago, and the crop prospects are so that they expect a banner year. We hope they are right.

Vacations are the general rule yet, and those returning come refreshed and ready for another strenuous season.

Daniel Welch arrived from Europe Tuesday, July 30, having made a six week's trip. He looks well. MAC.

Washington.

The outing committee of the Florists' Club decides this week when and where to hold the field day, as there are a lot of prizes that the committee is desirous of giving for events that could not be run off on account of the bad weather at the last outing.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club on August 6 will be ladies' night, as President Richard Vincent, Jr., of the S. A. F., will give an interesting lecture and stereopticon views of his visit to the International Flower Show in London.

The first chrysanthemums of the season have made their appearance in the store of Mrs. Freeman. Also some good Melody and My Maryland roses, which are about the best that has been seen on the local market for some time.

Harry Jones, formerly of Washington, but now of Philadelphia, was quietly married August 1 to Miss Frances Orth, of Baltimore.

From all reports the delegation to the convention from this city will be small. Of course some of the old guard will be on hand.

W. E. McKissick, Washington manager of the S. S. Pennock-Meehan Co., left August 5 for a month's vacation at Atlantic City.

W. W. Kimmell is enjoying a few days' fishing at Blackston Island.

CLUB ELECTS OFFICERS.

The annual election of the Detroit Florists' Club was held Monday evening, August 5, resulting as follows: Jerome K. Stock, president; Michael Bloy, vice-president; Hugo Schroeter, secretary; Robt. Rahaley, treasurer. The president-elect is young and aggressive and his popularity as president is already assured. He will be ably assisted by Vice-President Bloy, who has previously served the club in a similar capacity and always "makes good." The valuable services of Hugo Schroeter as secretary were again recognized by his re-election the fourth time. Robt. Rahaley as custodian of the club's funds has for several years demonstrated his fitness for that office and his unanimous re-election resulted as in the case of the popular secretary.

NOTES.

State Vice-President E. A. Scribner, of the S. A. F., made a vigorous appeal to the members to join the National Society and attend the convention in Chicago. It developed that a party of about twenty-five will attend from here.

The club will hold its annual summer outing next week. A committee was appointed to take charge of the affair and the date and place will be known by notices mailed by the secretary.

The sympathy of the trade is extended to E. O. Feters, whose brother died last week.

STOCK INCREASING.

The past week has been about the same as the week previous, as far as business is concerned, but stock of all kinds and varieties has increased considerably. Asters are now very plentiful with a wide range of prices, short stem and smaller flowers going for from "a song" to 50 cents a 100, better grades at $1.50 a 100, and the best about $2, buyers' choice. The cool weather has improved the carnations somewhat, some very fair stock coming in for this time of the year. Easter lilies are very plentiful, with but a limited demand. Water lilies are selling fairly well, but the season for these flowers will soon be over. A few dahlias, the advance guard of a large army to come, arrived in Cleveland on Saturday. Roses are becoming a bit more plentiful and the Killarney in particular is of very good color. A. Ward roses are again arriving, cut from new stock. Adiantum fern is a drug on the market, in fact, nearly all kinds of green goods move rather slowly. Valley, stock, is a trifle scarce.

NOTES.

The Ohio Horticultural Society of this city, which intends to stimulate an interest in amateur floral culture, was incorporated yesterday at Columbus. The incorporators are Wm. G. Mather, John N. Stockwell, Jr., A. F. Holden, Joseph Foster, Jr., and John Body. The society will not be conducted for profit. A show is to be held this fall and if there are enough entries one of the armories will be used. The society will number among its members amateurs in the plant and flower growing line, but professional florists will not be eligible. Professional florists will, however, be invited to compete for prizes at the flower shows.

The powder mill near the Harvard and Denison avenue bridge blew up July 23, doing considerable damage to nearby windows. C. B. Wilhelmy, whose store and greenhouses are located about one and one-half miles from the scene of the explosion, had a large plate glass window in his store blown in, besides about 200 small glass in his greenhouses and two large show windows. The large plate glass window in Mrs. Jos. Nosek's store on Broadway was also demolished.

Carl Whitthuhn spent a week's vacation at the firm's greenhouses on Schaaf Road, South Brooklyn. He is back again feeling much better after a short rest.

The Florists' Club picnic will take place Wednesday, August 14, at Puritas Springs Park. The ball game and other sports will be a feature as usual.

ASTERS DOMINATE MARKET.

Conditions are easier in the matter of supply. Asters of very ordinary quality dominate the market, only a small percentage of flowers showing quality. They are cheap, quotations are variable and there is difficulty in disposing of all of them, the bulk moving at very low figures. More of the newer varieties of roses are appearing, mostly low grade stock, with some good Killarneys. My Marylands and American Beauties are more plentiful. Asters fill the void left by the carnations of which there are more than usual at this late date. Harrisii and Valley are still being held at seasonable prices, but the demand is not so brisk as last week. In fact the general demand has dropped off and prices with it. This should occasion no disappointment for we are now in August, the dullest month of the year. Cattleyas are "off and on." The supply is not large but the demand is not constant. Gladioli are now plentiful and cheap.

THE CONVENTION SPECIAL.

Chairman Frank H. Traendly has booked the following for the trip to the convention at Chicago:

F. H. Traendly and wife, W. F. Sheridan and wife, Chas. Weathered and wife, Arthur Buckholz, P. O'Mara and sister, A. L. Miller, Joseph Manda and wife, Chas. Weber and wife, Robert M. Schultz, H. Bunyard and wife, Robert Simpson, Robert Wilson and wife, Robert Koehne, Bert Chadwick, Louis Schumtz, Jr., A. DeMeusy, W. R. Cobb, Henry Hornecker, W. G. Badgley, W. R. Pierson, F. W. Armistage, Leonard Barron, R. E. Berry, Peter Beuerlein, Geo. Blake, Oscar Boehler, John Donaldson, V. S. Dorval, Wm. Eccles, Phil. Einsmann, G. J. Esler and daughter, J. D. Fiesser, A. Hanig, W. F. Kastings, Wm. H. Kueber, Emil Leuly, Frank Manker, S. Masur, M. Matheron, W. E. Maynard, John Meisem, Frank Niquet, J. H. Pepper and wife, John Reimels, Julius Roehre, Jr., Chas. Schenck, Wm. Sefton, W. H. Siebrecht, C. H. Totty, C. C. Trepel, J. Weir, J. R. Lewis, C. W. Scott, A. Kakuda, W. Stewart.

Chairman Traendly wishes it to be distinctly understood that it is not necessary to be a member of the New York Florists' Club or the S. A. F. to go on this special train. Anyone from the east contemplating going to the convention is invited to join the party. Charles Greitner, city passenger agent of the New York Central, will accompany the party to Chicago to see that all arrangements are carried out properly. The transportation committee has all details for the trip arranged. And as the club at its last meeting removed the limit on the cost of refreshments and entertainment, there is no doubt but that every one of the party will be well taken care of. However, it is necessary for all who intend to go with the New York delegation to so inform the committee at once. A vaudeville entertainment by members of the club has been arranged for to provide amusement on the journey.

NOTES.

Charles Vick, of Rochester, and Dr. Earl A. Bates, of Syracuse, were in New York during the week, having an appointment with Park Commissioner Stover to endeavor to get an exhibit from the parks for the state fair at Syracuse, September 9-14.

John Evans, who is the last to return of the party that visited the London International show, was in town Saturday, hurrying home to prepare his exhibit for the convention.

Alex. McConnell is spending his vacation at the Oriental Hotel, Manhattan Beach.

New York State Florists' Club.

The second annual meeting of the New York State Federation of Florists' Clubs will be held at the state fair at Syracuse, Thursday, September 12. Prof. Bartey and other prominent horticulturists will deliver addresses. A large exhibit of flowers and plants will be on display at the fair. Municipal exhibits by the cities of the state will be a feature. The committee in charge is planning to make this display different from the old stereotyped state fair exhibit and to give instead a modern flower show. The main hall will be arranged in conservatory effect. The officers of the Federation are: Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, president; Dr. Earl A. Bates, Syracuse, first vice president; Chas. B. Wethered, New York, second vice president; E. R. Fry, Rochester, third vice president; John Young, New York, secretary; W. A. Adams, Buffalo, treasurer. The state fair committee is composed of the following: George E. Thorpe, Syracuse; Wing R. Smith, Syracuse; Arthur Cowee, Berlin; Frank H. Traendly, New York; F. A. Danke, Albany. Chas. H. Wick, W. E. Day and Dr. Earl A. Bates will have charge of the arrangements.

New York to Chicago.

As the time is fast approaching and we are thinking of vacations, stop thinking about them and write to F. H. Traendly of Traendly and Schenck, 131-33 W. Twenty-eighth street, New York, for accommodations on the convention special which will leave Grand Central station, Forty-second street, Monday, Aug. 19, at 10 a. m. en route to Chicago. It is most important for every live florist to attend this convention. Those who are members of the S. A. F. know the advantage they derive by being members and florists that are not members should not miss this opportunity and become a member at once. Come as our guest and let us demonstrate the advantages to you. You will surely be convinced at the knowledge you will derive and will be well repaid for the trip, the meeting with other florists from all parts of the United States and Canada and the great trade exhibition that will eclipse any heretofore held. This is an opportunity that a florist should not let go by as it is as important as any part of our business to keep up with the times. Any further information and application for membership blanks will be gladly furnished and we hope that we may meet a good-sized party August 19 when our New York Florists' Club's special leaves the depot. Mr. Traendly and the committee who have charge of the arrangements en route have left nothing undone to make this the most pleasant trip ever leaving New York for a convention.

A. L. MILLER, State vice-president for Eastern New York.

Pittsburg.

TRADE IS HOPEFUL.

Cheerful and hopeful are the two words that best express the sentiments of the Pittsburg florists at the present time toward the condition of business. Nobody was expecting much business this month and further almost every one was looking forward with forebodings of hot weather. It is surprising for this season of the year to see the retailers keep their stores so well stocked up and the natural conclusion is that they must be selling or they would not buy and personal observations confirm this supposition. Saturday, August 3, though very cool, was clear and pleasant, and the streets were crowded with shoppers and the florists seemed to share in the benefits. Roses, carnations, asters, gladioli, phlox, rudbeckias and a miscellaneous lot of other cut flowers and plants are much in evidence, the cut flowers being as good and even better than is generally expected at this season. At a time when it is generally expected that about all the old carnations have been thrown out, it is surprising to see so many on the market of fair quality. Their quality, however, is not so much a cause for comment as the fact that they are here at all. There seems to be a good local supply of gladioli and some shipments are said to have reached here from the Childs farm at Floral Park, N. Y.

BEDDING AND NATURALIZING. We have made arrangements with the leading growers to have our bulbs specially selected.

NOTES.

The genial E. C. Ludwig, president of the Pittsburg Florists' Club, will attend the Chicago convention and take with him as many friends and associates in the craft as can be persuaded to go. All who have come under the spell of his genial suavity will agree that there is likely to be a merry company. At this writing the following have signified their intention of attending: E. C. Ludwig and Mrs. Ludwig, E. C. Reineman, Fred Burki, William Loew, Edward McCallum and Howard Carney. It is also expected that a number of private gardeners of Pittsburg and vicinity will attend. During the absence of Mr. Ludwig his son De Forest will be in charge of the business.

T. P. Langhaus of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. regrets that he cannot attend the convention, but if the cool weather continues business is likely to still further improve and that will be a consolation as he is "all business."

A. W. Smith is another whose presence would greatly add to the transaction of business and the enjoyment of social functions at the convention and it is to be regretted that he does not expect to attend.

Charles Erhardt has the sympathy of the craft on account of the long siege of scarlet fever through which his little daughter has passed; she is now improved.

Harvey C. Sheaff, manager for Mrs. E. A. Williams, is another who should be seen at Chicago, but while this cool weather lasts he is on the lookout for business.

Wm. C. Mohr is now associated in business with Mr. Erhardt in the Allegheny market. He is a bright and capable young man and we wish them success.

Fred Burki now spends most of his time at their extensive range at Gibsonia. Mr. Burki is optimistic regarding the cut flower situation.

Edward McCallum started August 3 for a two weeks' vacation at Chautauqua, N. Y., and other northern points.

G. and J. W. Ludwig are busy and their fine store well stocked with all seasonable flowers.

Buffalo.

TRADE STILL DULL.

Continued cool weather has not been beneficial to some of the out-door flowers, and with rain it has had a bad effect. Trade has been about as quiet as at any time this summer. Those who are or have been on vacations from the different stores can easily be spared now. Roses show some improvement in quality. Kaiserin and Carnot are very fine. Some good My Marylands are to be had. Another week will see gladioli in good supply.

NOTES.

The Buffalo contingent are all talking convention. From pictures that the writer has seen it will be well worth the time. To see the pictures that F. C. W. Brown, of Buffalo, is going to use in connection with his lecture on "Floral Arrangements" will be worth the trip. His coloring is especially good.

Again the matrimonial bee has been hovering around the floral stores, and one of the Beau Brummels in the business has fallen a victim to the charms of one of Buffalo's popular young ladies. The engagement is announced of Robert A. Scott and Miss Helen Grass. September will be the month. Congratulations.

The marriage of Miss Anne T. Lindsay, who has been with S. A. Anderson for several years as bookkeeper, occurred Tuesday. The lucky man was P. J. Hampton, of Bradentown, Fla. After an extended wedding trip they will return to their home at Bradentown.

Henry Krauss and Harry Ast have returned from Cramer Villa at Conesus Lake.

J. Benson Stafford has a very beautiful window decoration for summer.

Miss Edna Goehring, of Anderson's, is sojourning at Angola.

E. FRIEDL, Phillips, Wis.

Waynesboro, Pa.

Jacob Frick, Jr., was busy planting carnations and his stock is exceptionally fine. It is not many years since Mr. Frick took up carnation culture, but he has certainly made a success of it.

Henry Eichols has a large stock of Princess Charming and Christmas Cheer carnations. He also has a variety of seedlings.

L. C. Happle of Wayne Heights has also a good stock and has no complaint to make with the trade.

A. C. Butterbaugh shows a good stock of carnations. He expects to erect a new rose house next season.

CARLISLE, PA.—W. O. Smith, who succeeded the Carlisle Nurseries, is busy getting his benches in shape for carnation planting. He has 30,000 square feet of glass, and in addition to a large area of carnations, grows roses, chrysanthemums and a good general stock suitable for retail trade.

ASTERS MANY, BUT POOR.

Cool weather still prevails in this section. Severe storms in western Maryland have done great damage there. The hail seems to have been very severe, though we have not received accounts of glass loss as we did last year. Fruit trees and foliage trees and all vegetation suffered. Carnations are still coming in. Roses are scarce and sell readily. Asters are coming in in abundance, especially pink and white varieties, but they are not perfect flowers. The later ones coming on promise to be better. Gladioli, some varieties, sell well. The off colored ones are poor sellers, however. Some pale pink shades look very much like azaleas and those sell very well.

NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Johnston and family met with quite an accident while touring near their summer home in New York state. In some manner control was lost over the automobile and it rushed down a steep embankment into a lake. Fortunately this stopped the progress of the machine and probably saved their lives. None were injured, although they were badly shaken up.

Mrs. Sarah J. Fowler, widow of the late Wm. Fowler, passed away August 2. Mr. and Mrs. Fowler for years lived at Clifton Park, the home of the late Johns Hopkins. He was one of the old pioneer gardeners and florists and had full charge of the greenhouses and the park at this beautiful place.

F. Bauer, I. H. Moss and T. C. Stevenson ran over to Philadelphia last week. They visited the large rose range of Geo. Morrison at Roslyn, Pa., and also the Dreer trial grounds at Riverton, N. J.

We noticed lilies from Hamilton's greenhouses at Mt. Washington, Philadelphia; also from Webber's, Philadelphia.

The retail stores have been busy for the past month but are feeling the mid-summer quiet in their business. B.

Allentown, Pa.

Horn Bros. have recently been making a fine display of gladioli and other stocks, grown at their own greenhouses. Their store at 20 North Sixth street is always attractive. It is under the management of Chas. Horn. John F. Horn manages their extensive greenhouses at Ritterville.

Chas. F. Beckmeyer is now conducting the store formerly known as the Ellsworth Flower Shop. He is an experienced man in the retail business.

The Johnson Estate, formerly a nursery, has gone on the real estate market and is being cut up into city lots.

Business has been rather slow but the florists are looking forward to a good season.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

Next annual convention, June, 1913.

SOME of the California growers are offering surplus carrot seed.

THE onion set harvest is now on at Chicago. Rains have made the run large in size. The crop is a good one.

CHICAGO. Prices on the Board of Trade, August 7, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $4.50 to $6 per 100 pounds.

CARMINE FARAONE MENNELLA, seedsman at Torre del Greco, Italy, succeeds the late Vincent Postiglione of Naples, who died some months ago.

ENKhuizen, HOLLAND.—Visitors here July 15 were Lester L. Morse, San Francisco, Calif.; Howard M. Earl and wife, Philadelphia, Pa.; Carl Cropp, Chicago.

A LEADING California Seed Grower reports July 27, probable deliveries in full of most seeds, excepting sweet peas. Of these they expect to deliver only 20 to 25 per cent.

ADVANCE crop reports from Holland show estimated deliveries as low as 25 per cent on cabbage, 5 to 10 per cent on turnip, 25 per cent on beet, 20 per cent on celery and 20 per cent on parsley.

VISITED CHICAGO: S. F. Willard, of Comstock, Ferre & Co., Wetherfield, Conn.; H. G. Winheim, of the Nebraska Seed Co., Omaha, Neb.; F. R. Cooper, representing F. Cooper, Ltd., Wellington, N. Z.

ARTHUR L. DEAL, representing W. W. Johnson & Son, Ltd., Boston, England, is now calling on his firm's American customers, with mail address at the Imperial hotel, Broadway and Thirty-second street, New York.

HANSVON DIPPE and Carl Esche, of Quedlinburg, Germany, are touring the United States completing a trip around the world. Besides looking over the horticultural interests of the various countries they also took in other points of interest. In America they visited both the Yosemite and Yellowstone national parks. They have been greatly interested in the sugar beet industry in this country.

CONSUL WILBERT L. BONNEY, of San Luis Potosi, Mexico, states that there is some demand for cactus seeds and plants from European cities for ornamental purposes, and also for medicinal purposes. Shipments from San Luis Potosi to continental Europe have arrived in good condition, and it is said that some of the plants that can be had for a few cents in Mexico bring fancy prices in the cities of northern Europe.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

The Second Vice-President.

Arthur B. Clark, newly elected second vice-president of the American Seed Trade Association, is inclined to be reticent when asked to speak about his own achievements and modestly contents himself with a bare statement of meager facts. Mr. Clark, who is president of the Everett B. Clark Seed Co., with the main office in Milford, Conn., and branches in Michigan and Wisconsin, is proud of the fact that he is a Connecticut Yankee. He is a graduate of Yale and has been in the seed business ten years. The Everett B. Clark Seed Co. is one of the country's responsible business houses and its seed growing operations extend from coast to coast. In addition to his connection with the seed trade Mr. Clark is also president of the Milford Trust Co.

Arthur B. Clark.

Second Vice-President American Seed Trade Association.

Conditions of Invoice.

The Donaghpatrick Co-operative Society, Ltd., versus Ashbourne Agricultural Society.

From the statement of the counsel, it appeared that the plaintiffs had ordered a quantity of red chaff white wheat from the defendant company for three customers. It was the habit of the plaintiffs to receive orders from farmers, and the defendants supplied the seeds direct. All the other orders were executed satisfactorily and gave rise to no complaint, but in the case of three customers it was alleged that they had not been supplied with red chaff wheat ordered, but with an inferior article called white chaff white wheat. The wheat was supplied in 1907, and in 1908 these three customers sued the Donaghpatrick Co-operative Society for damages, and decrees were made in the County Court, Judge Curran, in their favor for sums of £3 10s, £6 4s, and £2 13s 4d, respectively. An appeal was made to the judge at assizes in one case, and the decision was affirmed. The present proceedings were taken by the Donaghpatrick Society against the Agricultural Company to compel them to indemnify the plaintiffs for the amount of the decrees and the costs. The whole question practically turned on whether the conditions printed on the face of the invoice which was sent with the goods protected the sellers from any action in respect of the goods once the latter accepted. The invoice set out that—"We guarantee our seeds to be pure, as far as they can be tested by an expert analyst. If professional analysis does not confirm our guarantee, we will take back the seeds if immediately returned and pay all costs of carriage. After the seeds have been sold we cannot accept responsibility for the produce beyond the above guarantee; we give no warranty, expressed or implied, as to description, quality, productiveness, or any other matter of any seeds we send out. If purchaser does not accept the seeds on these conditions they are at once to be returned."

Several witnesses having been examined to show that the seed when it grew up was not of the nature ordered, the Recorder made a decree for the sum of £20 10s 7d, with costs, and £3 10s witnesses expenses.—The Horticultural Advertiser.

South Africa Wants Seed Samples.

An American consul reports that a resident of South Africa would like to procure samples of the following seed for experimental growth: Mesquit grass, blue grass, red or white clover, supra corn, and pop corn. The report states that inasmuch as a constantly increasing quantity and variety of seed are being imported it would appear to be a good business proposition to induce large planters as well as seedsmen to give a fair trial to such American seeds as are adaptable to the climate and soil of that region.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

Congressional Seed Distribution.

The bill now presented has been considerably altered from preceding bills to meet the contentions of the nurserymen, among important changes are: To the several states are left the responsibility of inspection at destination of imported stock and the cleaning up and disinfection of local quarantine districts and the appointment of the Federal Horticultural Board in more in the manner advocated by the nurserymen.

"The Kenilworth Strain" of Giant PANSY Seed

Must Not be Compared with the flimsy Trimardeau

It is much larger and of good substance; the immense flowers of 3 1/2 to 4 inches are of perfect form; every tint and shade is produced in striking combinations and endless variations of beautiful colors and markings. The stock plants are most critically selected. It is rich with shades of brown, bronze, red, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention.

Marketing Sweet Corn.

In our section of the country sweet corn occupies a very important position as a market garden or truck crop. We believe it has first place in acreage and value of crop. While potatoes are more important, these are shipped in from all directions, while the sweet corn is strictly a home product. In spite of all this importance the corn is marketed in the poorest shape of all vegetables, in striking contrast to tomatoes, for instance. One could buy hundreds of bushels of tomatoes, each tomato of which has been selected, wiped with a cloth and carefully packed, and at times for a ridiculously low price. The same is true of bunched onions. These onions are skinned, washed spotlessly clean and tied and packed at a price of, say, three dozen bunches for 25 cents, while the corn is pulled and dumped into any old wagon and sold for what it will bring regardless of maturity, worminess or other defects.

One large buyer states that his firm loses money on corn, no matter what the price, simply because the waste is enormous and the annoyance out of proportion to receipts. He is glad every season when the corn is all gone. Ever since we placed corn on the market we have pursued a different policy—not only guaranteeing each and every ear but keeping all inferior ears at home and feeding it to our live stock. All our corn is either pulled early in the morning or late in the day to get it cool; it is at once crated in the field, strawberry and orange crates being used. The crating prevents heating in bulk, which is a serious damage to quality. The corn is drawn to a shed, where each ear is examined and slightly opened with a knife. Every inferior ear is dumped out. Very often the prevalent corn worm can be removed without blemish or the blemish cut out; if not, the ear is discarded. The ears are again crated and counted, each crate holding 5 or 6 dozen, according to variety.

This sorting and counting relieves the salesman, as he knows at all times how many dozen are on his wagon and a sale can be instantly made without counting. Our method has proved so effective that we never have to look for a buyer for our corn, being compelled to constantly refuse orders, and we get from 5 to 10 cents a dozen above market price. Of course it means a lot of work at the farm, but the result is well worth considering. Grocers who receive our corn are relieved from all rehandling—hundreds of dozens are shipped into their order boxes immediately upon the arrival of our wagon, with never a complaint from the consumer. This method of selling has another effect—it makes the producer more careful. We have gradually reduced our waste from about 25 per cent to almost nothing by careful culture and pulling. We thin and sucker the fields at the right time and raise our own seed. In fact, we have produced our own strains to meet conditions. MARKETMAN.

Chambersburg, Pa

Byer Brothers continue to do a large business in both plants and cut flowers. In addition to their extensive wholesale trade they have a good local business in cut flowers, ferns and bedding plants. They fill large wholesale orders on short notice, carrying an average stock of 200,000 plants of many varieties. Quite a feature is their trade in hollyhocks and pansies, and they are working up a good seed trade.

Fisher Bros., who succeeded to the business of their father, the late Philip Fisher, are improving their range and have good stock, with an increasing local trade.

The greenhouses formerly owned by Wm. B. Reed are now conducted by Geo. Ridgeley.

H. S. Gilbert has a good seed store and seems to be prosperous.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y. Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

BIDDEFORD, ME.—Nicholas Staples, of Kennebunk, was fined $10 and costs for the alleged selling of nursery stock without a license. He will appeal.

"THE PECAN" is the title of a bulletin by C. A. Reed, recently issued by the Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., containing much valuable information on this important nut tree.

The Late Samuel Papointe.

Samuel Papointe, of Monroe, Mich., a well-known nurseryman, died July 26 at the age of 63 years. He had been sick but four days. A widow and six children survive.

Boskoop Exhibition of Roses.

A foreign communication says that in the month of July, 1913, a great exhibition of roses will take place at Boskoop, Holland, by the well-known society "Bursary of Trees and Plants." This society can count on the support of nearly all the inhabitants of Boskoop, since the great exhibition of flowers in 1911 had such an enormous success, although it had been brought about by only 50 persons. Y. H. van Nes, then president of the exhibition, will again, supported by the best forces of the village, accept the presidency, which guarantees a success. Already more than 30,000 pots of roses have been inscribed.

Restrictions on Imported Gooseberries.

In order to prevent the spread of American gooseberry mildew, the English Board of Agriculture has issued an order containing the following provisions: The landing in England or Wales of any gooseberries brought from any place outside Great Britain (except the Channel Islands) is prohibited, except where there is attached to the package in which the fruit is imported a label bearing the words "Imported gooseberries," and stating the name of the consignor and the country and district in which the fruit was produced. The label must not be erased or obliterated, or detached from the package so long as any of the imported gooseberries remain therein.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

Newport, Pa.

Mrs. Anna Eshleman, who for quite a number of years has been the only florist here, continues to do a good business, supplying this and neighboring towns with plants, cut flowers and funeral designs. In addition to her neat greenhouse Mrs. Eshleman now has many fine flowers in her garden, phlox and roses being very noticeable.

BRATTLEBORO, VT.—Carl S. Hopkins, one of this town's most successful florists, is building a new greenhouse, 32x100 feet.

WHAT THE USERS SAY

— ABOUT —

KROESCHELL BOILERS

Kroeschell Boiler—Half the Coal and Half the Work.

Your No. 13 Boiler is carrying 25,000 sq. ft. of glass, and I can keep it at 60 degrees in the coldest weather without any trouble. I have three sectional cast iron boilers also, heating a range of 25,000 sq. ft. of glass, but the No. 13 Kroeschell Boiler only takes half the coal and half the work to get the same results.

J. G. FRISZ, Vincennes, Ind.

Kroeschell versus Cast Iron.

The No. 7 Boiler I bought from you is heating 14,000 sq. ft. of glass; I think it can take care of 16,000 ft. I do not have any trouble to keep up temperature of 50 degrees in the coldest weather. I fire only once after 12 o'clock midnight. The boiler has given perfect satisfaction. I have four cast iron boilers—like the Kroeschell best of all. If anyone wishes to inquire about your boiler, let them write me, for I think your boilers are good ones.

CHARLES SCHULTZ, Menominee, Mich.

Cast Iron Boilers Crack.

I want to thank you for your promptness in shipping the boiler I ordered of you on January 13th. I had a breakdown, one of a battery of two cast iron boilers cracked so it was impossible to use same, so I got you on the telephone at 8.30 a. m., January 13th, and ordered one of your hot water boilers. Same was put in my boiler room in the afternoon of January 15th, after which we built foundation and connected up. Since that time the boiler has taken care of same glass as the two cast iron boilers had done, easier and better in every way.

(Signed) ANDREW BATHER,

Clinton, Iowa.

Kroeschell Better Than Cast Iron.

The Kroeschell Boiler is indeed a dandy and beats any cast iron boiler we have had any experience with.

A. BECKRINK, Jamestown, N. Y.

August.

The bees grow drowsy in their hum o'er freighted flowers, honey laden;
In hammock, shaded from the sun, sways to and fro the dreaming maiden;
The skies are blue and earth is green, and in the sunlight and the shade
The joyousness of life is seen, the poetry of life portrayed.
And now and then a flash of gold, or gleam of red or sober brown,
And from the branches overhead stray bursts of song come floating down, Stray gleams of flowers among the grass, and murmurs of a distant stream—
And so the days of August pass, and we are well content to dream.
—Frank H. Sweet in the National Magazine.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Those Amendments.

It is natural for us, in matters which do not touch us vitally, to say "let well enough alone," and a reasonable amount of conservatism is a good thing. The conservatism which insists on being "shown" before acting is one of the best of good qualities, but the conservative who refuses to be shown, or after being shown refuses to act, must be given another and harsher name.

The amendment changing the manner of selecting the city in which the meeting is held, should hardly have any opposition. At present we vote on this important question from the floor and there is no way of checking the results, or of preventing anyone in the room from voting, whether in good standing or not. The vice-president must be a resident of the city where the meeting is held, hence it is evident that the city should be selected on the first day, so that all officers may be nominated at one time on the following day.

The balance of the amendments are practically one amendment, that is, they cover the various changes in the wording of different parts of the by-laws necessary to make the secretary's office appointive instead of elective and to take away from the secretary the right of voting at meetings of the directors. Of course it would be highly improper to allow him to vote at meetings of the body which appoints, and may discharge him.

It seems to me that this proposition is simply a business one, to be carefully considered in all its bearings, and to be decided by each member as he would decide any important business matter coming up in his own business.

There is no occasion for hysterics nor for impassioned bursts of eloquent hot air. The society will not go to the "demnition bow-wows" if we make no change, neither will the bulwarks of our freedom be overthrown, nor will we become slaves under the lash of the despots who are engineering this dark and despicable conspiracy, should we adopt the wise and business-like course of taking the secretary out of politics.

The admitted fact that the society prospered years ago under an elective secretary is no argument, unless it can be shown that conditions are the same now as then. They are vastly different now and every member of the society knows they are.

The secretary may today be considered our head bookkeeper and business manager combined. Within seven years we have had five secretaries and it is rumored that another candidate is in the field—not because the present incumbent is not doing well, but because the other fellow wants the job.

What would happen to a business concern which changed its manager five times in seven years?

Twenty-five years ago no one dreamed that the trade exhibition was, or would be, a valuable asset, but it will this year without doubt yield a revenue running into the thousands of dollars.

This exhibition is a big thing and requires tact, skill and experience.
We have heretofore had little gain from this source because we have had new and inexperienced men to handle it. Under the present plan of placing the secretary in charge better results will be had, but if we do not change officers, this year's experience will teach him much of value for next year.

We all know that when it comes to elections, being a "good fellow" often counts more than business ability. Being a "good fellow" gets votes, but the "good fellow" is not always the man whom you and I want to handle our money and transact our business.

Take the present year, for instance, the secretary has on his hands the whole management of the trade exhibition on top of his other duties at the convention and yet, with those duties requiring every minute of his

In a real business concern, such as our society now is, there must be some one employe who holds over and keeps in touch with business details which a new man cannot master, fully, for six months or more.

Two presidents of the society have considered this matter of so much importance that they have recommended it in their annual addresses. The whole present board of directors has recommended the change. Here is the list of names:

J. A. Valentine, ex-president; Geo. Asmus, ex-president; Richard Vincent, Jr., president; Wm. F. Kasting, ex-president; Robert Craig, ex-president; W. N. Rudd, ex-president and ex-secretary; E. Allen Peirce, director; Harry A. Bunyard, director; C. H. Totty, director; John A. Evans, director; August Poehlmann, vice-president.

These are the men who are "backing this movement" and who Mr. O'Mara intimates have something or some person "up their sleeves."

These men know from actual experience the present business needs of the society.

They strongly recommend this change.

Shall the sober judgment of these men be considered?

Let us take the secretary's office out of politics and put it into business.

Chicago's Convention of 1887.

The twenty-five years since the last S. A. F. convention—the third in the history of the society—was held in Chicago has marked a great change in the city and in the trade as well. Floral establishments that were then considered of monster proportions now would be regarded as of very little importance, and where hundreds of dollars were represented at that time there are thousands today. But it was the plans that were laid then and the enthusiasm of the time that has had much to do with the position Chicago now occupies in the commercial cut flower business. The Society of American Florists when it met in convention at the First Regiment Armory in 1887 did not have the large membership it boasts at this time, but in loyalty and ardor it could not be exceeded. Although the society was but three years old then, the convention drew from the entire country and even from abroad. Henry Bennett, noted rosarian of Shepperton, England, was among those present from across the Atlantic and expressed himself as much pleased with our city and America in general. A few years before, when a national organization was suggested by a western florist, many in the trade feared it would not be practicable on account of the distance many of the members would have to travel. We were not such travelers in those days as we are now, but there was enough interest in the convention to bring a crowd.

Robert Craig, of Philadelphia, was the president of the society when it met and E. G. Hill, of Richmond, Ind., was elected to succeed him. Mr. Craig made the opening address, in which he reviewed the history of the society and spoke hopefully of the future. He was introduced by J. C. Vaughan, who briefly welcomed the visitors and paid a high tribute to the retiring president. "Chicago welcomes all," said Mr. Vaughan. "Her streets are wide, her hotels many and large, her railroads reach to every point, and the largest possible crowd is the greatest delight of her people. We trust this meeting will well repay your generous expense of time and travel and we hope you can and will make yourselves at home."

Mr. Craig said in part: "To my mind the organization of this society is the best thing that has ever happened to the florists of America; although so young it has already stimulated activity in all departments of the business, diffused much knowledge, and promoted and developed a fraternal spirit and hearty good feeling which is most desirable; it has been instrumental in defeating a proposed obnoxious change in the postal laws, which if passed would have been a great loss to those of us who do a mailing trade. It has also, thanks to the earnestness and persistence of a few devoted members, placed the matter of hail insurance on a practical footing so that all who desire to participate in its benefits may do so without delay. Its exhibition of plants, improved heating apparatus, mechanical appliances, florists' supplies, etc., has been interesting and instructive, and must at each succeeding meeting prove to be a leading and valuable feature. All who have anything of value to offer should avail themselves of this annual opportunity of bringing to the notice of those most interested the fruits of their works.

"The essays and discussions are educational in a high degree; it is impossible that so many practical and thoughtful men can meet together to exchange opinions on matters of vital importance to all without developing much that is of mutual benefit. The fact that the meetings are held in such widely separated sections must in itself tend to enlarge the views and broaden the mental vision of its members. It is an old and true adage that 'when you go from home you go to school.' All good ideas do not grow in the west nor the east, but they are liable to crop out anywhere, and those who travel with open eyes can always learn something.

"The society has done wisely in not restricting its membership to any class but has thrown open wide its doors to welcome all friends. Its chief object is to cultivate in the people of America a taste and love for plants and flowers. But to return to our society. The greatest success will be attained only when each and every member does his share of work. When an exhibition is attempted every gardener and florist in the neighborhood should, as a matter of personal pride and duty, do his part. If we open to the people a good show we can depend upon moral and financial support.

"On the whole, the outlook for horticulture in America is encouraging. The nation is young and prosperous, with unbounded resources and ever increasing wealth. The enterprise and activity of its citizens are marvelous. In America every industrious man (no matter how humble his position) can afford to indulge more or less in matters of taste, and it is our mission to invite him to spend a part of his time in the garden, and to assure him that he can not find any higher pleasure on earth than its delights afford."

In accepting the highest office in the power of the society to bestow, Mr. Hill made a brief but felicitous speech. He also read a paper on roses which was both instructive and entertaining. The other officers elected with Mr. Hill were: John N. May, Summit, N. J., vice-president; M. A. Hunt, Terre Haute, Ind., treasurer; William J. Stewart, Boston, Mass., secretary. That it was not a temporary enthusiasm that brought into being the Society of American Florists is proved by the fact that some of those in attendance this year were here twenty-five years ago and have attended the conventions regularly in the intervening time. That the members were careful even then to choose those fitted in every way for office and who possessed the qualities of successful florists as well is evidenced by the subsequent history of the establishments of the retiring president and his successor. Both the Craig company and that of Mr. Hill are still among the country's foremost, having kept step with the steady march of the industry.

There were not so many exhibitors or exhibits at the first exhibition as at the Coliseum this year, but the exhibits were all of high order for that day and in the list of exhibitors were many of the same names. There were only forty-seven exhibitors in all but the number of members present was between four hundred and five hundred, which certainly showed well for that early day. The florists' clubs were just then coming into vogue in the cities of the United States and the convention gave great impetus to the organization of these. The Iowa contingent met at the Grand Pacific Hotel while here and organized a state association. C. C. Cole was elected president and J. T. Temple secretary. The eastern representatives came, many of them, by special trains. One train started in New York and stopped at Philadelphia and Baltimore, in each of which cities it picked up an enthusiastic crowd of delegates. Boston also was the starting point for a fine crowd. Many of those who attended Chicago's other convention have since passed on to their reward, the most of them after a successful service, but many of them are still with us and still as actively interested in the affairs of the association as when it was first organized.

Chicago Wholesale Cut Flower Trade.

Thirty-four years ago, or in 1878, J. C. Vaughan started a small commission business in cut flowers. This was the modest beginning of Chicago's wholesale flower business, grown today to monster proportions and yet only in its infancy and destined to undergo still greater development and possibly more radical changes. The wholesale cut flower business of 34 years ago was not especially inviting, and it was several years after the first essay was made in this line before the second firm entered the field. Seven years after Mr. Vaughan started to sell cut flowers on commission, E. H. Hunt, who had for some time been in charge of this department for the Vaughan firm, purchased the department, together with the right to style himself "successor to Vaughan's cut-flower department." Mr. Hunt continued to run the business successfully until his death in 1898, when C. M. Dickinson took over the business but retained the old firm name.

In 1881 the present firm of Kennicott Bros., then known as Amasa and Flint Kennicott, entered the field as number two in the list of wholesale florists. In 1887, although Amasa had withdrawn from the business, the firm was incorporated as the Kennicott Bros. Co. Ten years later, on the death of Flint Kennicott, the president, the control of the firm passed into the hands of E. E. Pieser, who had long been one of the Kennicott employes and who retained the old name.

Nine years after the Vaughan establishment began the commission business in cut flowers, or in 1887, the third firm entered the Chicago field—C. H. Fisk and A. L. Randall entered into partnership for this undertaking. Like Mr. Hunt, they were both employes of Vaughan's where they learned the rudiments of the business. The firm was known as Fisk & Randall until 1902, when Mr. Fisk withdrew, since which time it has been known as the A. L. Randall Co. On the incorporation of the company Mr. Randall associated with him in the business Frank Johnson.

The Reinbergs and Poehlmann Bros. were the next firms in the field. Adolph Poehlmann started to grow flowers for himself in a small way at Morton Grove in 1885. In 1889 John and August Poehlmann joined their brother and the firm entered the cut-flower market in 1894 under its present name. Both ends of the business have proved highly successful, and the little range of glass at Morton Grove, about 20,000 feet in all, has reached the enormous total of 2,000,000 feet today.

Peter and George Reinberg, who had been growing vegetables, began in 1887 to grow flowers as well, and soon dropped the other branch of their business. At first they sold through a commission house, but soon saw the opportunity that awaited them as their own wholesalers, and entered this field also. The partnership was dissolved in 1900, since which time the brothers have each conducted his business separately. Peter began raising his famous American Beauty roses in 1893. Only a year later he was compelled to put up a range of houses exclusively for these flowers.

In 1892 Chas. W. McKellar, who had been with the Vaughan and Hunt firms, formed a partnership with Fred Sperry and later with T. J. Corberry, Sperry having withdrawn from the business. Several changes in the firm have taken place since that time. It was known as Vaughan, McKellar & Winterson, and later as McKellar & Winterson. Chas. McKellar is now in business for himself. E. F. Winterson, one of the partners, has been for several years proprietor of a wholesale firm of his own and the business has developed rapidly under his management.

Another Vaughan graduate who has since made a mark for himself is J. B. Deamud. Mr. Deamud began business for himself in 1893 as the head of J. B. Deamud & Co. In 1906 Mr.

Robert Craig Twenty-Five Years Ago.

Deamud and Wm. P. Kyle incorporated under the name of the J. B. Deamud Co. Mr. Kyle had previously been with Kennicott Bros.

The Deamud Company handled the flowers of Bassett & Washburn at the start, but the latter firm, composed of O. P. Bassett and C. L. Washburn, soon saw their opportunity in the wholesale business, too, and it was not long until they were doing their own selling. They have a large plant at Hinsdale.

Wietor Bros. started business moderately in 1894. They now have a large range, and roses, carnations and chrysanthemums are their specialties, although they raise and handle other flowers as well. J. A. Budlong deferred entering the fast-growing wholesale market until 1898, although he had been a grower since 1880. In 1896 Weiland & Risch began business, and a year later E. C. Amling entered the commission trade. John Kruchten found the business promising and began in 1902. Two years later Vaughan & Sperry, now the A. L. Vaughan Co., started business. In 1905 the rapidly growing Zech & Mann firm was formed by John Zech and Matthew Mann.

W. E. Lynch, at present a grower, and F. F. Benthley, now with Kyle & Foerster, were formerly in this business on their own account and the trade has experimented with two market ventures which proved unsuccessful.

The complete list of the thirty-three wholesalers doing business in the city today is as follows: E. C. Amling Co., Bassett & Washburn, Batavia Greenhouse Co., Mrs. F. Beu, H. C. Blewitt, J. A. Budlong, Chicago Carnation Co., Chicago Flower Growers' Association, Chicago Rose Co., J. B. Deamud Co., Erne & Klingel, D. E. Freres, M. C. Gunterberg, Hoerber Bros., Hunt Bros., E. H. Hunt, Hunt & Co., Percy Jones, Kennicott Bros. Co., John Kruchten, Kyle & Foerster, Chas. W. McKellar, Poehlmann Bros. Co., A. L. Randall Co., George Reinberg, Peter Reinberg, Sinner Bros., H. V. Tonner, A. L. Vaughan & Co., Weiland & Risch, Wietor Bros., E. F. Winterson Co., and Zech & Mann.

Chicago Parks.

If there is any one feature of his home city of which the loyal Chicagoan is prouder than another it is probably the town's magnificent park systems and the boulevards which connect them. A good idea of a city's prosperity, progressiveness and love of the esthetic may be gained merely by glancing at the parks she provides for her citizens, and certainly in this respect Chicago has a right to boast. Other cities may have larger parks, or rather one park larger than any one of Chicago's but if any place has a greater park and boulevard acreage connected through the various systems into one great whole, as her's are, or parks and boulevards more beautiful than those of the middle western metropolis, it yet remains to be discovered.

The parks of Chicago are grouped into three great systems, containing altogether 4,388 acres, and connected as has been mentioned, by boulevards which makes them of easy access. These boulevards themselves are These boulevards themselves are remarkably beautiful and an automobile ride around the belt, visiting each large park in turn, is a pleasure often indulged in by citizens and never to be forgotten by the stranger. The three systems referred to are the north, the west and the south, each governed by its own park commission. There is also a special commission whose duties it is to investigate the need for smaller parks and an outer-belt system.

The great parks of the city are Lincoln, on the north side; Garfield, Humboldt and Douglas on the west, and Washington, Jackson and Grant on the south. Each system contains many smaller parks also, the number both large and small being 23, with an acreage of 2,423.37, for the south system; 13, with an acreage of 629.27, for the west system, and 8, with an acreage of 600.25, for the north system.

Lincoln is the one large park on the north side and it is one of the city's best known and most popular. With the 250 acres recently added and now being improved, this is the greatest of the town's public pleasure resorts. It has been more or less intimately connected with the stirring events in Chicago's history and will always possess a warm spot in the hearts of her citizens on this account and because of the park's great beauty and the reverence for the martyred president from which it drew its name. A cemetery was established here in 1837 and during the historic fire it was the place of refuge for thousands of people, many of whom were glad to seek immunity from the flames in the graves from which the bodies had shortly before been removed. This park contains much to interest the general public and particularly the florist in its conservatory coln to the south side by way of the west side. It contains 182 acres. Large trees, flower beds and shrubbery add to its natural beauty, and green lawns are another attraction.

Washington park contains 371 acres and is the second in point of size of those on the south side. Here, in the center is a large meadow where a flock of sheep add to its bucolic appearance and keep the grass nibbled close to the ground. There are twenty-three acres of lagoons and many winding paths bordered by trees and Grant park as known today is a recent institution. It lies between Michigan Boulevard and the lakes and is composed chiefly of "made" ground dumped into the water. Its greatest improvement is yet to be made, each year adding to its beauty. It contains 205.14 acres and is the last connecting link between the South and North systems. These are only the larger of Chicago's magnificent parks, the most prominent in the greatest system in the world.

Lewisia Howellii.

Plants of the white-flowered Lewisia oppositifolia have been grown in gardens as L. Howellii, but the former species is quite distinct, as indicated by its loose, spreading habit, according to a correspondent of the London Gardeners' Chronicle. The true L. Howellii was collected by Carl Purdy, California, who sent specimens to Kew in January, 1911. In autumn, large consignments were received in this country, and plants in flower were exhibited by Mr. Prichard at the meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society on April 30. The best plant was a fine specimen carrying nine inflorescences, each with about 30 flowers, and it well deserved the award of merit bestowed on it. L. Howellii is found on the Moony Mountain, in Josephine County, Oregon, and is closely allied to the beautiful L. Cotyledon. It forms the same kind of rosette, but the leaves are narrower, and spatulate, with undulated or crisped margins. They are about three to four inches long, and about one half inch broad at their widest parts, also very thick and fleshy. The flowers are one inch in diameter; the petals are of buff-yellow color streaked with crimson or pink lines. The plant, potted in sandy loam, has survived the winter at Kew in a cold frame. Others planted out in the rock garden in sunny crevices and sheltered positions in the late autumn are equally healthy. L. Howellii is the eighth member of this attractive genus introduced into cultivation, all being natives of western North America.

group, which includes a palm house, fernery and show house. Many orchids, easter lilies and chrysanthemums, as well as other flowers are found here. The old fashioned garden, containing 450 species is also a point of interest. The rose garden, which surrounds the sunken area near the Dearborn street entrance, and the small ponds for the culture of aquatic plants, must not be passed by without notice. The trees and shrubbery too are a constant delight, and there are many other interesting features which can not be mentioned for lack of space. A statue of the great naturalist Linne must not be forgotten. It stands near the conservatories, facing south. Four allegorical figures, representing botany, zoology, geology, and entomology, surround the base.

Humboldt park is the largest and is considered by many the most beautiful of all those of the west side. It contains 205.86 acres, and its many forest trees, growing as nature intended them, are one of its chief charms. Lilies and other aquatic plants grow in profusion at one end of a lake of 24 acres. A perennial garden and a rose garden, the latter beautified with walks and pergolas may be found on either side of Garden Hall. The statue of the scientist Von Humboldt, who gave the park its name, is another attraction to those of a scientific turn of mind.

Garfield park lies directly west of the loop district, being divided by Madison street, and is reached by way of Humboldt from Lincoln. It contains 188 acres and has the second largest conservatory in the world. Here may be found in profusion, palms and aquatic plants as well as conifer trees. South of Madison street are the formal gardens where grow thousands of plants used to beautify the park.

Douglas park is south of Garfield, and is the last of the large west side parks on the journey from Lin-shrubbery.

Jackson is the south side's most noted park and contains 542.89 acres, extending along the lake, it being the only large park besides Lincoln and Grant which has a lake frontage. It is noted as containing many relics of history, many of them kept from the world's fair of 1893. About 8 miles of drives are contained within its borders and many walks and bridle paths add to its beauty. There are also 254 acres of lawn and 107 of artificial lakes. Wooded Island is one of the most attractive spots and contains the old Cahokia Court house said to have been built in the early part of the eighteenth century. A tiny formal Japanese garden near the Japanese buildings left from the World's Fair may be seen here.

Lake Forest.

When a number of prominent citizens of Chicago in 1855 awoke to the necessity of a new residence suburb with the advantage of an educational institution included, they decided that the site must be within convenient proximity to the city and yet far enough away to secure the quiet of the country as well. The result was the organization, on February 28, 1856, of a land company known as the Lake Forest Association, and the se-farm, gardens and lawns. His is perhaps the only model farm in the state that is run on a self-paying basis. The Swift estate is located west of the town between the Chicago & Northwestern and the Milwaukee & St. Paul railroads, and the most of the land required draining, fencing and fertilizing before it became the beautiful place it is today. The work was done in a short time under the able direction of George Koppenhoefer. The home was built on the gentle slope very pleasant and Mr. Koppenhoefer is entitled to great credit for the way in which he has carried out the work in such a short time.

Not far from the Swift homestead, Ogden Armour has built an Italian mansion in the center of a tract of 1,000 acres. The land was formerly a swamp and useless for farming and required an immense amount of labor to put it in shape. The house, with the Italian gardens, lawns and drives, makes the estate one of the country's most costly, and the work is far from being finished. The progress has been slow, due perhaps to the fact that some of the landscape artists were not in sympathy with the plans. O. C. Simmons planned and platted the original scheme of embellishment, and he was followed by Jens Jensen and A. B. Yeomans. Although the plans of none have been followed out in detail, in the formal water gardens, west of the mansion, the most beautiful conception of what such gardens should be has been achieved. Both in the statuary and in the planting, perfect harmony with the surroundings has resulted. The rose garden to the north, rising from 2½ to 3 feet above the water gardens, is well planned and is planted with the utmost care, only such varieties as are adapted to the climate being used. The planting was done under the direction of James Wilson, and great credit is due him for the manner in which the work was carried out. Mr. Armour is said to dream of making this the most beautiful estate in the Northwest, but the work lacks considerably of completion. The conservatories and the orangery were built at a greater cost than those of any other private estate in the West and are stocked with rare plants of many varieties to be used to decorate the house and the formal gardens. About four hundred acres will be devoted to lawns, ornamental gardens, ponds and nurseries and the rest to farming. A grove of ten acres of forest trees were left standing as found and are the only planting done by nature. A drive about two miles long planted on both sides with double rows of American elms and sugar maples, leads to the mansion. The Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, which divides the estate lection of a site along the shore of Lake Michigan 28 miles north of the city. The place was picturesque and inviting, the shore line rising to a height of from 90 to 100 feet above the lake and broken by deep ravines. The wealth of trees and wild flowers added greatly to the beauty of the spot and no doubt influenced the association in its choice of a site.

The city of Lake Forest was laid here according to the plans of the late Frederick Law Olmsted. Mr. Olmsted was a well known landscape artist of the time and to arrive at the reason for his prominence in the craft it is only necessary to walk today through the streets of the town. The winding thoroughfares, the successive vistas of shady nooks and of bridges spanning the numerous ravines, and an occasional glimpse of the lake, all testify to his sense of beauty and harmony. Senator Charles B. Farwell, D. B. Holt, T. E. Learned, Charles Calvin and Henry and Joseph Durand were the first to build here and the beautiful lawns and driveways laid out at the time hold their own today with the best of the more modern landscape artist's work. For several years these men and other families were the only residents in the new suburb, and prior to 1892 there were no macadamized streets and likewise no water, sewers or fire protection.

Today Lake Forest has all these improvements and many of Chicago's wealthy business men now make their homes here. Among the many who realized the town's desirability as a place of residence was Louis F. Swift, who purchased nearly 2,000 acres of land which he has turned into model overlooking the valley, and the house is surrounded by beautiful shade trees that were bought from nearby farmers and hauled and planted in the most natural positions possible. The orchards extend east and west of the house and vegetable gardens, nurseries and conservatories are also on the west side. The palm and fruit houses are of modern construction, placed not too far from the residence and connected with the lawn and the gardens. The entire estate is well balanced and the landscape effects are into two parts is spanned by an immense cement bridge.

The A. B. Dick estate, located within a stone's throw of the Armour entrance, is in the center of a treeless tract of land. Looking at it at the present time it seems rather bare of possibilities, and yet in the next 7 or 8 years Mr. Dick expects to make it one of the show places of the neighborhood. He already has extensive laid out by E. Bollinger and proves him to be thoroughly alive to his opportunities as a landscape engineer.

Cyrus H. McCormick's estate is perhaps one of the most noted in Illinois for its natural beauties and deep ravines. The plan was made by Werren Manning who aimed to retain the natural loveliness of every tree and flower and to help nature rather than to tear down her work. The "Walden," from seeds and cuttings to decorate the grounds. A bridge spans the main ravine, which is followed by a drive, both in the bottom and at the top. Edward Orpet is the superintendent here and the results prove him to be a sincere lover of nature. Each year Mr. McCormick buys a few more acres of ground and keeps from 18 to 25 men working summer and winter to improve his acquisition.

Another place worthy of note is that of H. C. Chatfield-Taylor, although the estate is comparatively small. It was formerly owned by Senator Farwell, and is one of the oldest in the town. The place was laid out in 1860 and has been well kept ever since. It is second to none of the more recently built homesteads. An extensive lawn, fine old trees, beautiful ponds and formal flower garden are some of the noteworthy features here. Carl Gelpert is the superintendent and has succeeded admirably in retaining all the beauty the place has long boasted.

The future of Lake Forest offers great possibilities from the gardening point of view. Practically all the land nearby has been bought by men of wealth. A tract extending seven miles west and five north has been sold or will be soon for country homes. Each place will be from 10 to 100 acres or more in extent. Among those making recent purchases are Stanley Field, A. A. Sprague, James R. Thorne, J. V. Farwell, Jr., S. W. Moore, and Arthur Meeker. The college, seminary and public schools of Lake Forest are as good as the country affords and the natural beauty of the surrounding country also goes to make this one of the most desirable of American residence places. flower, vegetable, and trial gardens and conservatories under the able management of John Tiplady, and some very rare collections of orchids, foliage plants and cut flowers are grown.

Among the older places, started some 15 years ago, we find on the border of the lake, Byron L. Smith's estate, which is of especial interest to lovers of all varieties of trees, shrubs, perennials and wild flowers. The beauty of the results obtained by ornamental and natural planting can hardly be excelled. Every situation is well studied and carried out to perfection. On the bluff overlooking the lake are planted in the most natural way possible large collections of native trees, shrubs and wild flowers, the conifers predominating over the other trees. Winding walks lead everywhere through the picturesque estate. The ravines, like many others in Lake Forest, are wooded on both sides with groves of native trees and there is a tangled undergrowth of native shrubs and ferns. The lawn as seen from the main part of the house is artistically laid out and offers many opportunities for the study of color effect in the fall, and especially in the winter. The gardens are well designed and stocked with the best material to be had. In the nursery and trial grounds are many rare plants yet to be tried. Those which prove satisfactory will be planted in the places most harmonious with the rest of the estate. The three-acre fruit orchard is the best of the younger orchards in this part of the country. One of the largest collections of hardy plants of which Mr. Smith is particularly fond is found here. The Smith house is of the colonial style and the planting is in harmony. "Briar Hall" as the place has been called was as the place is appropriately named, contains more natural beauty in its 40 or 50 acres than can be found in many larger places. Year after year, for 17 or 18 years, has added to its appearance. Trails through the ravines, walks, bridges, drives, etc., go to make it an artistically natural success. The flower and vegetable gardens are the best in Lake Forest. The greenhouse, used mostly for propagating, is always well filled with plants grown Lake Geneva and its Gardens.

Lake Geneva, in southern Wisconsin, 75 miles from Chicago, is one of the most picturesque bodies of water in the entire country. The lake is surrounded by high, wooded hills and the steamers, launches and sailboats proudly riding the crystal water present an inspiring sight. It is little wonder that people of means as early as 35 years ago selected this spot as Krupa, gardener) are beautifully located and prominently in view from the lake. Both places have splendid collections of shrubbery. American rhododendrons were given a large trial on both places, but were not found adaptable. That is one thing it is useless to attempt to grow in this locality. Both of these places are noted for their large collections of peonies. Formal gardens planted to annuals are voted to roses, carnations and mums, also a young vinery. Melons and tomatoes under glass are also a feature, and prove a success with the growers. The Martin A. Ryerson estate is next with Miles Barrett as gardener. This place has about 5,000 feet of glass for general purposes. Frederic D. Countess (W. H. Griffiths as gardener) has about 6,000 feet of glass. The next place of importance is the R. T. Crane estate. The three different residences here give Axel Johnson, the gardener, a great amount of work. On account of the removal of some dwellings the landscape is being changed considerably here. Some modern greenhouses are also going up, the Lord and Burnham Co. having the contracts. The houses are 22x125 feet, half-iron construction, curvilinear roof. When finished they will be planted to roses, carnations, mums, etc. One section will be reserved for palms and store house plants; another house like this is to be built later in the season to take the place of the present melon house. When finished the Crane estate will have the finest range of glass on the lake. The grapery, some 20 years old, is a sight worth seeing; Muscats and Black Hamburgs in splendid condition, crops full ripe and later ones coming, and pot fruit also. Nectarines, peaches, plums and pears all speak well of the care they have had.

Many more places there are on this north shore, most of which serve only for summer residences and remain closed for the winter. A number of public resorts that prove attractive to a good class of people are here too. The south shore also has its large estates, chief among which are the Fleming, Seipp, Crommes, Dreke, Moore, Walker, Dickenson, Byllesby, Jones, Mitchell and Selfridge.

At the J. H. Moore place, where A. Martini is in charge, we find a beautiful park of 37 acres that was laid out and planted some 10 years ago. Trees and shrubs are effectively grouped, and the massive plantings show up splendidly at their different seasons of bloom. Here, also, we find a modern constructed fruit house, devoted to grapes and peaches (the latter on the cross trellis plan) that prove an entire success with their heavy the ideal place for rest and recreation. Since the first well-to-do families chose the place for summer homes many more have been drawn there until today scores of the most beautiful private homes in the West are to be seen overlooking the lake or within easy reach.

These estates vary in sizes from a few acres to about fifty acres of ground, this of course, not including farms of considerable size in connection with some of the estates. Only a fourth of a mile from the town, on the north shore, is H. H. Porter's place, with its large rolling lawns and beautiful native oaks, elms and other trees that one loves to see remain in well-chosen places (as they do here) when grounds are first laid out. This place as well as the Leiter, Sturgess, Fairbanks, McCrea and Strong estates is quite old. The chief beauty of each is its natural landscape with no hint of the grotesque or artificial.

By far the most beautiful hardwood maples are to be seen at the Fairbanks homestead and will long be remembered for their grand and symmetrical appearance. Here, too, is located the oldest vinery on the lake (composed of the Black Hamburg variety mostly). Here are canes four inches in diameter that have borne heavy crops in years gone. C. L. Hutchinson's place is another deserving attention, and Wm. P. Longland, the gardener, who is also a fisherman and crack shot, delights in showing a really fine collection of herbaceous plants and shrubs as well as orchids and ferns, all grouped effectively in large masses with always some new thing for the visitor to learn. The next four or five places near by are of more recent date. Edw. F. Swift's, where Robt. Sampson is gardener, and N. W. Harris' (Jos.

features also. Mr. Swift has about 2,500 feet of glass and Mr. Harris about 5,000, and both have a variety of tropical plants as well as 'mums in pots and in the benches. Here, too, we find as on most grounds here large kitchen gardens, where everything is produced in season in first-class quality.

S. B. Chapin and A. C. Bartlett own estates facing the lake and each has open lawns bordered by natural woods. On the "narrows" of the lake we come to S. W. Allerton's residence. Robt. Blackwood is Mr. Allerton's gardener. Here are about 10,000 feet of glass decrops. This place is also noted for its grand stables, considered by many the finest in the West. A half-mile race track a short distance away near the public road, has become a landmark with its solid hedges of Spirea Van Houttei and Lonicera Tatarica.

About 2 miles from town is "Cylon Court," the summer home of J. J. Mitchell, with A. J. Smith in charge of the pretentious grounds and range of glass. Splendid landscape effects are obtained with well kept lawn and driveways. Ornamental gardening is also followed to a certain extent. A very large perennial garden as well as lily ponds and a rose garden are features. Also we find large specimens of palms, ferns and other tropical and subtropical plants that serve for out-of-door decoration and give harmony to the Oriental style of architecture of residence. About 20,000 feet of glass produce cut flowers, vegetables and fruit the year round. A grand collection of crotons and other stove plants in prime condition is to be noted.

It is to be regretted that the Harry Selfridge place is not kept going as in years gone by. Here was a little paradise, the untiring labors of Charles Gebhart making these grounds most beautiful to behold, but since Mr. Selfridge's departure for London no attempt is made to keep up the estate. The splendid orchid collections were presented to Lincoln Park in Chicago about 4 years ago. A year earlier a gardeners' association was organized for the purpose of fostering all branches of horticulture, resulting in friendly competition. Fortunate indeed was this association to have the good will of the gardeners' respective employers, for through the efforts of C. L. Hutchinson a commodious horticultural hall has been erected where from time to time exhibitions are held and the public is invited free of charge to enjoy the displays. A. M.

Mystery of Temperature Regulation.

Of the numerous parts of which a modern heating and ventilating system consists, none is clothed with as much mystery and misunderstanding as the automatic temperature control system. This has been caused partly by the intricacy and complicated mechanism of the original thermostatic system, but the principal reason has been the attitude of the manufacturers toward the buyers and users of temperature control.

When temperature control first came into existence the manufacturers very foolishly assumed an attitude toward the public similar to that of physicians and lawyers toward laymen, placing themselves, as it were, behind a screen, disregarding standards entirely, using special screw threads and sizes, with the idea, no doubt, that they were entitled to make all repairs. Even the artisans who were skillful enough to adjust a thermostat were referred to as experts.

The reader can imagine the result of this unfair and unbusinesslike attitude and the very unsatisfactory operation of the apparatus, where it was necessary to depend upon thermostat experts perhaps hundreds of miles away for the adjustment of a screw or valve, or for the replacing of some small part which had become worn. At that time the heating industry was in its infancy and there were a number of defective heating plants installed throughout the country. In a great number of cases, these defects in operation were blamed on the automatic temperature control, and, to a certain extent, the same condition obtains even today.

At the present time, however, this condition has partly changed and the successful manufacturers of automatic temperature controlling systems have brought the various parts of the apparatus to a standard, making it possible for the operating engineer or janitor to make simple repairs and to do whatever adjusting is necessary.

A number of people are of the opinion that on account of the work expected of the thermostat, it must be a very delicate instrument. This is not true, for while a thermostat must be a very sensitive instrument, it does not necessarily have to be a delicate one.—Heating and Ventilating Magazine.

Cutting Greenhouse Glass.

Many of our readers are familiar with "Red Devil" glass cutters, manufactured by Smith & Hemenway Co., New York. This company, which, by the way, is the largest manufacturer of glass cutters' and glaziers' tools in the world, has been sending out to florists and others free samples of its No. 204 "Red Devil" glass cutters, with a view of demonstrating the excellent work it does. The company has sent free samples to nearly 4,000 greenhouse owners, and will continue to send one sample only to anyone who has not as yet had a sample on receipt of 6 cents in stamps.

Chicago Florists' Club.

Pursuant to a call of those interested in the convention of the Society of American Florists, which was to be held at Chicago in August, 1887, a well attended meeting of the florists of the city and vicinity was held November 3, 1886, and an organization was formed under the title of the Chicago Florists' Club, with the idea of forming a permanent social organization for members of the trade only. Fifty members were enrolled and the following officers elected: J. T. Anthony, president; R. J. Donovan, vice-president; G. L. Grant, secretary, and Joseph Curran, treasurer. Meetings were held during the winter and on February 17 the club held a ball and reception, at which the decorations were a great attraction and were highly praised by the daily press. Fully 700 people were present and the affair was a great financial and social success. The club then leased a very pleasant room at 189 Wabash avenue, and by April the membership had reached the 100 mark. In August the Society of American Florists held their convention in Chicago, and the club entertained the visitors during their stay in the city, and an excursion was made to South Park. In November a chrysanthemum show was held, which was very successful, despite the inclement weather and the excitement caused by the execution of the anarchists, which caused many people to remain in their homes.

At the second annual meeting the officers elected were as follows: F. F. Benthley, president; Andrew McAdams, vice-president; G. L. Grant, secretary; M. F. Gallagher, treasurer, and P. J. Hauswirth, financial secretary. At the next annual meeting a board of trustees was added to the elective officers, and those elected to fill the several positions were: James D. Reynolds, president; D. B. Fuller, vice-president; G. L. Grant, secretary; P. J. Hauswirth, financial secretary; Flint Kennicott, treasurer; Thomas Hopkinson, F. F. Benthley, A. McAdams, Joseph Curran and M. F. Gallagher, trustees. A banquet was held November 8 and a ball held February 8 in the First Regiment Armory, at which the decorations rivaled those of the ball held two years previous.

The following year, 1889, the old board was re-elected and in the summer of 1890 a committee consisting of James D. Reynolds, J. C. Vaughan, F. F. Benthley, George Gardner and G. L. Grant was appointed to further horticultural interests at the World's Fair. During the World's Fair the club took an active interest in all matters pertaining to floriculture, and their committees served efficiently.

A local trade organization of gardeners and nurserymen preceded the club, but survived only a short time.

The list of presidents of the club, with the years they served, is as follows, the deceased being indicated by an asterisk:

Chicago's First Commercial Greenhouse.

Chicago's first commercial greenhouse was a lean-to affair about 14x50 feet at 100 Adams street, facing north on part of the present site of the post-office. It was built about 1845 by Samuel Brookes. This greenhouse had an outside rear door but was entered also through a window from the house, against the east side of which it leaned. With our ranges of a million feet or more of glass, for which Chicago has become famous, this seems a small enough beginning, but as a matter of fact in those pioneer days it was considered a big house and was mainly used for the culture of azaleas, camellias and other pot plants.

About three years later, in 1847 or 1848 as F. W. Brookes now recollects it, Job Carpenter and his brother built a greenhouse on the west side, adjoining Union square on the north. These brothers were market gardeners as well as florists.

Samuel Brookes was an old-fashioned English gardener who had owned one of London's biggest places previous to 1832. He came over to the new world expecting to settle in Canada, but soon drifted to the United States and on October 23, 1833, with a family party of 16 he came around the lake from Buffalo by wagon. His son, F. W. Brookes, journeyed with him, a lad about 7 years old. The latter, now a man of 85, lives at Morgan Park. Here five of the original Norway pine sash of the first greenhouse are still to be seen.

When seen a few years ago it was not a difficult matter to get him started in a reminiscent vein. It was here that his father died in September, 1875. This place on Lake avenue was sold out in 1892 and he moved to Morgan Park to take things a bit easier with advancing years, though, as above noted, he still clings to his garden. He well recalls early life in local floriculture, having been more or less intimate with Edgar Sanders, John Goode, George Wittbold, Dr. John Kennicott, W. G. Newitt and J. T. Anthony. Mr. Brookes is not associated with any of the trade organizations, but was connected with some of the forerunners of the present Chicago Florists' Club. In the old days of the Exposition building on the lake front, where the Art Institute now stands, he frequently exhibited with other florists a few specimen plants.

While the son of a florist and gardener he had a natural inclination for flowers, but was brought up to the trade of printer, starting on an old anti-slavery paper in Chicago, September 17, 1844, and was with the Tribune when it started business, and later with "Long John" Wentworth until 1853. Then he drifted into the flour and feed business which he carried on for six years at Canal and Madison streets.

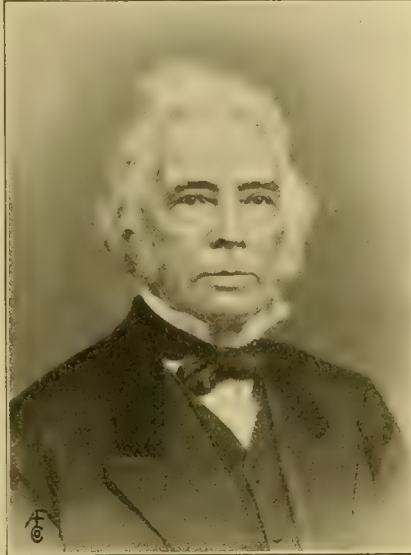

In 1859 his early instinct for floriculture finally induced him to enter into partnership with his father in the greenhouse business at Thirty-ninth street and Lake avenue, where the late Samuel Brookes then had his place. The next year he moved to 4525 Lake avenue into "Old Tibbitt's orchard." Here he stayed for 30 years.

Facts About Chicago.

The Drainage Canal built by The Sanitary District of Chicago, at an expenditure thus far of over $66,000,000, is one of the world's most wonderful engineering feats, and disposes of Chicago's sewage through an artificial canal from Lake Michigan to the nearest point on the Desplaines river.

Chicago, is a subway 62 miles long, 6 by 7½ feet in size, designed, not for passenger traffic, but for cars laden with various kinds of merchandise, coal, ashes, etc.

The total strength of the Chicago Fire Department is about 2,000 men, including 1,799 uniformed men, noted throughout their world as fire-fighters. The Department requires 700 horses and 60 miles of hose to keep it at its standard of efficiency.

As an educational center, Chicago possesses schools and colleges of the highest order. The University of Chicago is now one of the greatest of the country, while Northwestern university, situated in the suburb, Evanston, is also of the highest rank.

Everyone has heard of the Chicago Stock Yards. Back of the stock yards are situated the meat packing plants, known the world over, and under the supervision of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Many factors contribute to make Chicago the great central market. It is near the center of population of the country; has excellent railroad facilities and entertainment attractions to draw big buyers.

Already Chicago is one of the great banking centers of the United States and with its geographical situation, rapid growth and natural resources, it is destined to become vastly superior in this respect in the future.

The city and county buildings form what is unquestionably the finest edifices of their kind in America, if not in the whole world, the total cost of the two buildings being $10,000,000.

An example of the increased valuation of Chicago real estate is the southwest corner of Clark and Washington streets, where the Chicago Opera House now stands. The lot, in 1832, sold for $61, but recently sold for $2,000,000.

Chicago annually produces manufactured goods to the value of over $1,104,000,000 in 8,175 plants, this product covering almost every sort of merchandise used in America.

The Board of Trade, located at LaSalle St. and Jackson Blvd. is a most interesting sight, a large gallery for visitors is always open during the trading hours, 9:30 a.m. to 1:15 p.m.

South Water Street is the greatest market in Chicago for concerns dealing in fruit, vegetables, poultry, butter and eggs. Between 200 and 300 commissioners do business here each day.

Territorially Chicago is as large as it is in population. The length of the city is 26 miles, its greatest width 14½ miles, and its total area 194.5 square miles.

Chicago, in size, in commercial achievements, in civic development, in the character of its institutions, and in its many avenues of progress is one of the great cities of the world.

In literature, Chicago has made conspicuous progress. Five great libraries, besides the numerous secondary ones, are situated in various parts of the metropolis.

As a center of railroad industry, Chicago takes precedence over all cities of the world. 1,400 trains enter the city daily and not one passes through, but all end their runs here.

Lake Michigan, on which Chicago is situated, has an area of 22,450 square miles, about two-thirds the size of Ireland.

Chicago, a city of great realities, is building for the future, for a city of added millions and extended facilities, for the Chicago of tomorrow.

There are four great elevated trunk lines from the Loop, all operated by electricity, the current being delivered from a third rail.

Chicago boasts of 50 buildings over 150 ft. high, the highest being the Masonic Temple, at the corner of Randolph and State streets.

The Chicago street car system comprises 913 miles of track in the city limits, on which 3,000 modern cars are operated.

Over fifty different suburbs lie without the corporate limits of the city, and within easy reach of the heart of the municipality.

Chicago is a city of 2,185,283 inhabitants, to which number it is adding approximately 50,000 yearly.

The Zoo at Lincoln Park contains more than 2,300 specimens of mammals, reptiles and birds.

There are six railway stations in Chicago, with an average of six lines using each depot.

There are 11 principal lake steamship passenger lines from Chicago, for ports on the great lakes.

Chicago's police force contains about 4,500 officers, distributed from 47 precinct stations.

There are about 40 well known theaters in Chicago, besides nearly 500 five and ten cent show houses.

The corner of State and Madison streets has the reputation of being the busiest corner in the world.

The public parks of Chicago cover an area of 4,388 acres of park and boulevard systems.

Thirty-three foreign consuls have offices in Chicago, representing most of the world's greatest powers.

There are about 500 hotels in Chicago, varying in price and location.

Ferns Living In Fossils.

As a usual thing, the fossil ferns belong to extinct species that may suggest more or less close relationships to present day forms but are not identical. Such generic names as azolophyllum and asplenites indicate relationships of this kind, according to the Fern Bulletin. For the most part, the ferns now inhabiting the earth belong to recent genera and are not found fossil. There are, however, a considerable number of fossils that are regarded as identical with modern genera, and not a few have been assumed to belong to existing species. The fern genera reported among American fossils are anemia, asplenium, blechnum, Davallia, Dicksonia, aspidium, gleichenia, goniopteris, gym-nogramma, hymenophyllum, lygodium, onoclea, osmunda, phegopteris, polypodium, Woodwardia and pteris. Among the fern allies we note equisetum, isoetes, lycopodium, salvinia, ophioglossum, selaginella, and tmessip-teris. Among the species thought to be identical with living ones may be mentioned nephrodium argutum, n. Goldieanum and onoclea sensibilis and six species of equisetum, namely, arvense, laevigatum, limosum, robustum, scirpoides and sylvaticum. The occurrence of these species in the fossil condition makes the link connecting modern and fossil ferns seem much more real than ordinary and opens up a new view upon the continuation of the species. Apparently some of these forms, inflexible as they may appear, have nevertheless, been sufficiently flexible to adapt themselves to the many vicissitudes the race has encountered during the ages that have elapsed since their appearance upon the earth and enabled them to survive while multitudes of other species that started with them have gone down to oblivion and left no sign. In this connection it is well to remember, too, that many of the forms, once regarded as fossil ferns, have been lately proved to be not ferns at all but fern-like seed plants.

Mrs. Reimers Continues Seelbach Stand.

We are informed by Mrs. M. D. Reimers of Louisville, Ky., that our Louisville correspondent is in error in his statement in our issue of August 3 that she has decided to discontinue her flower stand in the Seelbach hotel, and we gladly make this correction and trust Mrs. Reimers will be put to no inconvenience by reason of the error. Mrs. Reimers says that instead of discontinuing the flower department mentioned she expects to enlarge it and the place is now undergoing a general cleaning up preparatory to an expected brisk fall trade.

Summer Flowers in Design Work.

SEE SUPPLEMENT WITH THIS ISSUE.

Owing to the extreme heat and the limited demand for cut flowers during the summer months, the quantity of choice stock offered is very small and the assortment confined to a few staples for the most part grown throughout the year, together with outside flowers that give more or less satisfactory returns to the grower. Beginning in the spring, the shrubbery, such as duetzia, spirea and snowball, are a great help to the design worker. Later on these are followed by the Hydrangea arborescens grandiflora. Every florist who grows any of his own stock should have several rows of this splendid hydrangea. Its flowers are very white and lasting, holding on the plants a long time, and keeping, when cut, in saleable condition longer than any other cut flower. Hydrangea paniculata follows and lasts until the any of the popular designs, such as wreath, cross or pillow, solidly filled and rounded into shape with a ground work of any of these flowers, the piece is more than half finished. It is then possible to arrange on the same foundation the greatest variety of combinations and color schemes.

With regard to the pillow, the mossing of this should be rather high—the dish flower is preferable, that is, without the top. The moss (always use sphagnum) should be piled rather high and bound on with a bobbin of wire, which is much to be preferred to string. When finished the straggling ends of the moss should be sheared off, which takes but a minute, and the entire surface, both top and bottom, covered with hardy ferns pinned on. If it is considered necessary to use foil on the bottom, let it be dark green. This applies to all designs. The frame having been solidly covered with flowers, sprays of six or more roses or other flowers hanging down from the corners add to and relieve the squareness of the design that is so often seen. Bringing two garlands or crescents from one corner of the pillow to the other at each end, making them full and high in the center, gives a pretty effect, and if choice flowers are used the result is a very handsome piece. When there is to be an inscription the garlands can be run lengthwise, which gives a long central space for the lettering.

Another treatment which is also much admired, is to bring a garland or draping from the left hand corner across the top to the opposite corner, then another down the left side to the bottom. The center of this garland is quite high and full and occupies about one-third of the surface from the corner. This leaves the right-hand side and bottom without embellishment, but the design is a decorated pillow and in every way desirable. A fringe of swainsonia, sweet peas, pyrethrum or other like flowers around the edge which projects well downward add to and soften the lines. The feet or wire support should always be concealed with asparagus or something else green. The most popular of all the designs is the wreath. There appears to be no end to the combinations possible with this arrangement of flowers. First, the solid foundation of flowers or galax or magnolia leaves, either on the crescent or the full round form; then the artistic placing of the selected blooms and these that are to stand forth and really make the design should be without blemish. They should be placed so that all are seen. So many pieces are made in which flowers are so huddled together that many more are used than required and much of their beauty of form is lost. The old style, even round wreath, into which flowers were stuck until it seemed full all over, has given way to the crescent shape or more artistic arrangement of the simple frame, so that the formal appearance is broken and a new effect produced.

A cluster of gladioli in the center, tapering to a point and covering half the form, is pretty. A combination of Lilium roseum and album on either a white or bronze magnolia foundation makes a good effect. White roses in the center and lavender or purple asters on either side tapering to a point and covering about two-thirds of the wreath is a good combination. A solid foundation of purple asters, ornamented with Easter lilies, makes a very handsome affair when a good sized piece is required. Water lilies, beautiful in themselves, make a unique piece when used in combination with bronze magnolia. A word about the magnolia—these leaves are fast taking the place of the grand old galax for the reason that they are not perishable. At this season, when there is plenty of time, as many of these wreaths can be made up as there is room to store them and they will always be found in a saleable condition; or, if there is not room to store the made-up forms, the leaves can be stemmed with wire or toothpicks and packed away in the original cases, to be made up as required.

The wrapped crescent wreath of magnolia is sure to attract attention. It is made on a flat crescent frame that is mossed on both sides, one side about two-thirds full and one-third on the other. The leaves are pinned on with small hairpins or shaped pieces of wire, beginning at the narrow part of the wreath, working both ways with small leaves, gradually using the larger ones, and pinning one leaf over the other, the point of the new leaf being drawn back until just covering the wire that holds the old one in place.

Where the ends meet in the center a few leaves are stood out so as to hide the junction. Such a wreath ornamented with deep purple asters and a few sprays of ivy, together with a purple ribbon, is very acceptable for the funeral of an elderly person. All wreaths can be ornamented with ribbon if desired. In most cases it adds to the appearance if turned gracefully amongst the flowers. In cases of large pieces, where lettering is desired, the ends can be tied across the center, or in a standing form are allowed to hang down so that the inscription can be better seen.

The cluster or spray is the first choice of many people and here as in are easily hidden in the green and yet are pliable enough to give as the completed bunch is handled.

Street Sweepings as a Fertilizer.

The use of street sweepings as a fertilizer is treated rather comprehensively in a recent report of the Bureau of Soils of the Department of Agriculture. The report is made as a result of scientific investigation carried on by J. J. Skinner and J. H. Beattie, and shows, speaking generally, that the sweepings are beneficial but not so good as fresh stable manure, at least until they have had the oils from the before such fertilizer goes on the ground becomes more and more necessary.

In the government experiments three samples of sweepings were taken. The first consisted of the debris secured by hand sweeping with a brush, the second that swept up with a machine, and the third was the decomposed debris from a dump pile. Apparently there was little physical difference between the first two samples, both being composed of raw horse manure. Sample number three consisted chiefly of well-decomposed horse manure. In the chemical analysis, however, the first sample (that secured by sweeping by hand) was found to contain more nitrogen, potash, and phosphate than either of the others. None of them contained quite so much of any of these constituents, however, as ordinary horse manure fresh from the stable. To test the effects of the sweepings on soil, wheat, corn and radishes were grown in paraffine pots. Five experiments were made in each case, the stable manure being tried at the same time as the sweepings and the natural soil, a clay loam, also being used.

In all cases the fresh stable manure led as a fertilizer, the growth being greater where it was used. That swept up by hand was second each time, with samples numbers two and three following in the order named. The soil which was untreated remained a bad fifth except in the case of the corn experiment, in which the third sample—consisting of manure from the dump pile—was last. The increase over the natural soil amounted, in the case of the stable manure, to forty-six per cent for the wheat test, and thirty-four for the corn test. That for the first sample of street sweepings was thirty-one and twenty-seven respectively. About the same percentage holds good for the radish test. In the case of the sweepings with the oil extracted there was very little difference between it and the fresh manure. To sum up the results of the investigations, it may be safely said that a continued use of the untreated sweepings on the same soil is to be advised against, but that where the oils have been removed the results are not appreciably different from those obtained with ordinary manure from the stable. That the oil is the harmful substance in the sweepings is further borne out in experiments in which oil was used directly, resulting in a harmful and reduced growth.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—The park board is planning an enlargement of the park greenhouses at Lyndale farm, and an appropriation of $8,000 is asked for this purpose. It is hoped to start the building before November and it is believed the contract will be awarded to the Lord & Burnham Co.

MARSHALLTOWN, IA.—This city is justly proud of the artistic floral display on the grounds of the Iowa Soldiers' Home, for which many compliments have been received from the state board of control and others. There are more than 82,000 plants, mostly in bloom, and they are arranged artistically in the form of emblems, mottoes and flags. The grower has given 800 feet of space north of the main building over to the growing of carnations from which he cuts flowers daily for the hospital sick rooms.

the wreath there is a great variety in the form and color scheme of the arrangement. The white or light pink gladioli are good in themselves or as a background in combination with roses or asters or Japanese lilies. Very handsome double sprays for the top of the casket are made with the addition of palm leaves, which project from either end. A wide ribbon bow in the center makes a good finish. When large clusters are desired of roses, asters or other flowers, the stems of which at this season are not long, it is well to keep a supply of light bamboo sticks, which when used to strengthen the backbone of the spray streets removed. These oils have been found harmful, and while the use of the sweepings proves better than no fertilizer at all, for the time being, it is thought a continued use of such fertilizer without the process of removing the oils may result in injury to the land. This result is especially to be provided against where there is no good drainage system to carry off the harmful properties in the fertilizer. The growing use of the automobile makes it certain that as time goes on the sweepings from the streets of our great cities will contain more and more of this deleterious substance, and an economical method of removing this PLANT NOTES.

Heaths.

During the hot weather the ericas will demand considerable attention. The plants should be plunged in the coolest location possible, yet where they will get the full sunlight. The pots are now full of the very fine roots and if these once get dry the tender roots will burn. There is no plant the florist grows that demands closer watching and more careful watering than the heaths. They are so hard wooded that they do not show neglect as quickly as the softer wooded plants, but if they get once fully dried it means absolute disaster with no flowers the succeeding year. The grower well posted in the culture of these plants can tell at a glance when they should be watered and never neglect them. If the plants are growing unshapely they should be pinched back so that the form will be kept. The plants that are in small pots will need repotting in September; a fine loam with but little fibre and with no manure is to be preferred for these plants, for their fine roots do not like a coarse soil and manure of all kinds should be omitted from the soil in which they are grown.

Mignonette.

The plants of mignonette from seed sown in July will have to be placed in their winter quarters in the bench in September. If extra large and long spikes, that are always so much admired, are wanted, the soil will have to be very rich. To ordinary compost (that is, two-thirds loam and one-third manure), add about as much manure again, making the soil about half and half. The plants should be set about 12 inches apart. Water only around the plant until the roots begin to spread in the soil. Keep the soil free from weeds, well scratched over and loose, that it may not become sour. The tops should be pinched off until six or eight branches have been formed. The cabbage-worm will soon make its appearance unless this has been guarded against, and if a leaf is found eaten hunt for them at once. When they first make their appearance they are only about a quarter of an inch long. They are green, just the color of the foliage, but have a velvety appearance and are generally found on the midrib of the leaf or on the stem. Hand-picking is the only remedy and it takes sharp eyes to find them, but they must be got rid of or they will soon ruin the plants.

Violets.

It will soon be September and the time to house the plants of the double varieties of violets that are grown in the field, the more successful growers being of the opinion that the plants should be under glass before the season of heavy dews. In preparing the beds have plenty of old leaves; it is not necessary that they be rotted; in fact, leaves gathered last fall are to be preferred, for they will generate a little heat in the soil and the violet plants seem to grow and push their roots into half-rotted leaves better than in leaf-mold that is finely decomposed. A layer of three inches of leaves in the bottom of the bed will prove of great advantage in violet culture. Whatever manure is used should be thoroughly rotted, the violet will not root into fresh manure at all. An old gardener, who was very successful in violet culture, once told us how he prepared his frames. They were made in a similar manner to hotbeds, only instead of manure a foot of leaves was placed at the bottom and eight or ten inches of soil placed on them. The leaves will furnish a mild heat nearly all winter and greatly assist in keeping the frames warm. We tried that method the following fall and thinking that the leaves would not furnish nutriment enough we incorporated a good quantity of half-rotted manure in the soil, the manure still being more or less lumpy. The violets grew finely and produced an excellent crop of large flowers. In the spring when we lifted the plants we found the roots had all gone into the leaves, there being no feeding roots in the soil, and in making their way through the loam had avoided all the manure, this still being in the lumps that it was placed in the soil. In lifting the plants avoid allowing the roots to become dry; lift with a good clump of soil and do not keep the plants too long in the air, only lifting what can be handled expeditiously. Plant firmly, but avoid walking on the beds; water as soon as planted and water well so that the soil will be firmed around the plants. Shade for a few days until growth starts and then give all the air and light possible.

Hollyhocks.

During August and early September is the right time to sow hollyhock seed for the next season's flowering. Seed sown in the spring will not produce a plant that will flower to any great extent that year, and they will have to be carried over the winter to make good, large plants, but seed sown now will make fine plants for next year. For the last few years the fungus that has attacked hollyhocks has made it difficult to carry the old plants over with any degree of certainty, but with late summer sowing much of this trouble is obviated. Be sure and purchase a good strain of double seed, and sow in a shaded frame, and as soon as large enough pot up in 2-inch pots. Grow them in a frame until November 1 and then pot in 3-inch or 4-inch pots. These can be carried over the winter in a cold greenhouse or in well protected frames, and started in the greenhouse in March and nice plants for summer blooming be assured.

Alternantheras.

The propagating bed will not be full at this season and it is one of the best times to procure a stock of that splendid carpet bedding plant, the Alternanthera patens major. This plant simply refuses to grow during the winter and it is almost impossible to procure cuttings until late, with the result that the plants are necessarily small. Any amount of cuttings can be procured now and they can be easily rooted either in flats of soil or in the propagating bed. When the cuttings are inserted give them a good watering and keep them shady for two or three weeks and they will all root. They can then be placed in flats about one inch apart and placed in a frame outside or in the greenhouse. They can be wintered in a warm dry house on a shelf near the glass, and potted in April, and will make fine plants. The other varieties are much more vigorous and will thrive in a lower temperature. A few old plants can be lifted and propagated in the spring in the usual manner.

Grasses for Shady Places.

Lawn grasses do not thrive equally well in sun and shade. In dense shade it is usually impossible to maintain a turf. This difficulty is especially pronounced in small city yards and in the grass strips under unthinned Norway maple trees on a city street, according to L. C. Corbett and others in Farmers' Bulletin No. 494, on "Lawn, Soils and Lawns." There are three factors that may contribute to this trouble: (1) shade; (2) local drought caused by the twofold action of the tree in keeping rain from the ground under it by the denseness of its foliage, and by the absorption of moisture and plant food by its roots; (3) a possible poisonous action of the tree on the soil as already mentioned. Probably the second factor is the most important as dense foliated shallow rooted trees are the most difficult under which to keep grass. However, in a drought when large open areas of lawns are brown and parched, it is often noticeable that the grass under the limbs of the surrounding trees has the richest color and keeps growing slowly. The Rhode Island bent, creeping bent, and Canadian bluegrass do well in shade. The latter is a grass that is persistent in gravelly lands and under considerable traffic. It does not make as fine a turf as the other shade grasses, it being rather wiry. The red fescue and the sheep fescue are also desirable shade grasses. Unless the sheep fescue is crowded, it is apt to grow in clumps or hummocks. For this reason it is best used in mixtures and where the seeding is heavy. Orchard grass is a coarse grass that also grows in hummocks, but where crowded with some other grass it will often enable one to get a turf where otherwise it is impossible. It should only be used when the better grasses are known not to succeed. In attempting to seed in shade it is advisable to use as many promising varieties as possible in the hope of finding those that will respond to the particular conditions. On broad areas in sun it is desirable to use just as few varieties as possible. For the small home lot it would be better to use a mixture, for these conditions of both sun and shade have to be met.

By a proper selection of the kinds of grasses sod may often be maintained where the conditions are quite severe. Kentucky blue grass stands shade well, especially where not subjected to severe tramping, and is the basis of shade mixtures as offered by seedsmen. In the South it does better in the shade than in the open. The wood meadow grass is the very best of shade grasses for the regions where Kentucky blue grass and redtop flourish. Formerly this grass was added in large quantities to the ordinary grass mixture to make it a "shady nook" mixture. Its excessively high price in recent years has largely prohibited its use except in a small way.

Along the Gulf coast the grass known as carpet grass is well adapted to shade and is a strong competitor of Bermuda grass for all lawn purposes. It has a habit of growth very similar to that of Bermuda grass, and it is possible that when it shall have been given a thorough test its region of adaptability will be coextensive with that of Bermuda grass. Under some conditions it thrives and maintains itself to even a greater extent than does the Bermuda grass. It also has another advantage in that in certain localities it produces seed which with little care may be gathered and may become a commercial commodity. Whether or not carpet grass will carry its seeding habits to its northern limits remains to be determined. It is readily propagated from turf, like Bermuda grass, and can be easily established upon a lawn, but it is not so difficult to eradicate if that should be necessary.

Another good grass for shade on clay lands in the moist regions of the extreme South is the large water grass, while the knot grass is good on sand under the same conditions.

So many of the fescue and bent grasses being indigenous to or naturalized in the Rocky Mountains and the neighboring plains, it seems that the lawn grasses of the future for these regions must be found among these plants.

On the Pacific coast south of San Francisco the rye grasses are the most promising for use on sand in shade.

ELMIRA, N. Y.—At the election of officers of the United States Cut Flower Co., recently Seymour Lowman was advanced from secretary to president, succeeding Wm. R. Compton, who died some time ago. Harry N. Hoffman was elected vice-president, and Frank Inksater secretary-treasurer. J. S. Fassett will fill the vacancy on the board of directors occasioned by Mr. Compton's death.

The Automobile in the Flower Business.

The horse seems doomed to go, especially as a furnisher of power for the delivery of goods. The automobile has not supplanted this faithful beast of burden entirely and apparently the prediction of a few years ago that it would was unfounded. But as the motor-driven carriage has succeeded the horse-drawn vehicle as a pleasure conveyance, so is it gradually crowding the draft animal to one side and taking its place. The automobile truck is assured of its place for a long time to come, and the lighter auto delivery wagon is also coming in. In common with the other lines of trade, the florists are going in extensively for this mode of delivery and while many still cling to the old-fashioned method, it is a significant fact that those florists who have displaced their horse delivery wagon with the auto, especially since the latter has become really reliable, could not be hired to return to the former method.

There are many arguments for the use of the automobile, and though florists who still use horses are often inclined to scoff at the innovation, it is undoubtedly true that delivery by motor is, on the whole, to be preferred. The first question that naturally arises is that of cost. The fear of an excessive expense account no doubt deters many from displacing their horses and wagons with motor cars. However, automobile men (and they are corroborated by florists who have made the change) aver that the automobile is in reality no costlier than the horse. One machine costs more than one animal, it is true, but (as in the case of one well known florist), it often means the doing away with a number of wagons and horses and the releasing of a driver or two. The florist referred to bought an automobile two years ago and it has taken the place of three horses and two wagons, while one chauffeur now does the work which formerly required two drivers. The same story might, in effect, be told of other florists in most American cities, Chicago included.

Apart from the initial cost, which may be slightly in excess of that for horses and wagons—though this will depend a great deal on the make—the automobile is in reality the cheaper of the two means of conveyance. The running expenses for the two are nearly equal. A gallon of oil will run a motor truck of 1,000 pounds from 250 to 350 miles, the distance depending a great deal on the condition of the roads, and a gallon of gasoline will be sufficient for a drive of from fifteen to twenty-five miles. The cost of keeping the equivalent of the machine in horseflesh will about equal this, but the automobile costs nothing while not in use, while the horse may be said to "eat its head off" every time the florist has a slack season. Another very important item is that of quick delivery. The automobile will go three or four times as far as the horse in the same length of time, making more deliveries and a greater trade possible, and also assuring the delivery of all goods in a fresh condition.

One more point in favor of the automobile which the truly progressive florist will hardly dare to overlook is that of appearance. A really handsome automobile delivery wagon with the florist's name in conspicuous lettering serves as a moving advertisement and acquaints the entire city with his name and business and the fact that he is up-to-date. On the other hand, the horse vehicle is apt to advertise the owner in a disagreeable way. People like success and the florist who shows the public that he is doing so well he is forced to use a motor car for delivering his goods has something on the man who still retains his old-fashioned horse and wagon. In wearing qualities, too, a good automobile of modern workmanship will outlast the best of wagons, and to hark back to appearance, the automobile furnishes an opportunity for artistic decorating and consequent advertising which is almost wholly lacking in the horse wagon.

To the florist who contemplates changing to the automobile delivery system, the question comes up as to which car is the best. Before deciding this he should take into consideration the nature of his trade in the present and the outlook for the future. A really serviceable car, one well worth the money, may be had for from $700 on up. The cheaper cars are, of course, of the lighter weights, but the best makes are all reliable and the wear and tear, especially on the tires, is not so great as on the heavier machines. From $700 to $3,000 is the usual price the florist pays and he always finds his money well spent if he takes advantage of all the motor's possibilities. Each car has its own points of excellence and of appeal to the purchaser. The simplicity of design and construction of the Lansden electric makes this a favorite with many in the cut flower business. It is of light weight, but the parts are carefully proportioned, making it substantial, and there is no sacrifice of strength. The low cost of maintenance also makes friends for this machine, and the fact that its simplicity does away with the necessity for an expert chauffeur is an added argument for it. This machine also requires little space and as it uses the Edison storage battery, its service is of the highest order and always dependable. It seems destined to gain new friends with every sale.

More than one-third of all the florists of Chicago are now using motor cars for deliveries and the number is constantly growing. Indeed the florists everywhere are awaking to the fact that the automobile pays for itself many times over. That the next two or three years will see many more motor-driven than horse-drawn delivery vehicles in the flower trade goes almost without saying.

NEW YORK.—The Knight & Struck Co. has been granted a permit to build another greenhouse, 40x100 feet. It will cost $2,500.

H. Bayersdorfer & Co.

Philadelphia is the center of the florists' supply business of this country and the name of H. Bayersdorfer & Co. is a familiar one in every retail store of any note in North America. More florists' supplies are sent out from this city than are furnished by all the other cities of the country together, and a walk through the establishment of Bayersdorfer & Co. and an examination of their stock will show that they are a large factor in this thriving trade.

Everything in supplies is seen here in quantity, from the largest plant and flower baskets down to the smallest gilt ribbon letters. There is a wonderful variety, many goods that one section of the country never sees being in constant demand in another. Metal flower wreaths and other like designs are largely bought by florists with a cemetery trade, while many stores seldom handle them. Certain odd shaped baskets that some dealers do not care for at all are sold to others by the gross. Shelves are packed with fancy colored raffia mats which go out in gross lots to be used as pot coverings, but which have no call from some dealers, and this follows through all the stock. Mr. Bayersdorfer says, "We have such a variety that we can supply every demand of the trade from the most exclusive city store to the small country florist who grows and retails his product."

Mr. Bayersdorfer makes a personal inspection annually of the European centers of trade, keeping in a close touch with all that is latest and selecting the best for this market, half of their immense warehouse being filled with these importations. The products of their factory are quite equal to the imported stock and a large force of expert basket makers are kept busy the year around making up standard stock and working out original ideas of their own as well as special designs for customers. A complete dyeing system enables them to do all color work and with better results than that done abroad.

Canadian Horticultural Association.FIFTEENTH ANNUAL CONVENTION

After the close of the first session, a report of which appeared in our issue of August 10, page 115, President A. C. Wilshire's reception was held at his residence, where he and Mrs. Wilshire heartily welcomed the guests. From the reception the guests went in a body to Dominion Park. They were preceded by the famous Victoria Rifles band.

C. H. Janzen, treasurer, read his report at the second session and H. E. Philpot and Edw. Dale were appointed auditors. J. Connor urged the meeting to take steps to gain new members and to urge the appointment of one of the members to the new park commission by the provincial government. Complaint was made by H. L. Janzen that the government employed incompetent men to fumigate imported nursery stock. The tariff question was now taken up and discussed and a permanent tariff committee was appointed. The members are J. Connor, Jas. McKenna, H. Simmers, E. A. Mepstead and W. W. Gammage.

The report of the judges on the trade exhibit was now read. H. Bayersdorfer & Co.'s exhibit of florists' supplies was awarded a diploma. The Dale Estate, Brampton, exhibit of florists' supplies, cut chrysanthemums, ferns and orchids was also awarded a diploma. The Wm. Ewing & Co., Montreal, exhibit of tools and garden supplies, was awarded a diploma. The Dupny & Ferguson exhibit of tools and garden supplies was awarded a diploma. E. Hayward, St. Paul, Minn., exhibit of commercial ferns and palms was highly commended. The Craig & Hutchins exhibit of cyclamens and commercial ferns was also highly commended. The G. M. Taylor, South Bolton, exhibit of native greens and sweet peas, highly commended. The Moorehead Steam Trap Co., the Montreal Paper Box Co., and a few others got honorable mention.

Wm. Gammage's paper on the cost of production of florists' stock provoked an extended discussion. Money was freely promised to employ an expert to get at the bottom of this question, but no concrete action was taken. Geo. M. Geraghty's paper on "The Management of a Retail Store" was read by the secretary at the third session, Mr. Geraghty being absent. It also was thoroughly discussed, especially by the retailers, who were most interested in store management. T. Manton now read his paper, "Commercial Orchids." This was one of the best of the meeting. The description of the Osmunde fibre was very interesting. One could almost see it grow.

Peterboro was selected for the next convention at this session. There were many questions turned in, some very lengthy, and a number of these were answered.

The fourth session was taken up with the election, the final resolutions, and the rest of the questions were disposed of. H. Dilleuth was absent and the practical demonstration in cut flowers did not take place. The motion that the offices of secretary and treasurer be changed to one was carried.

The entertainments planned by the Montreal Gardeners and Florists' Club were carried out very successfully. Wm. C. Hall, the club's president, was indefatigable in looking after the delegates and everything on the programme was most enjoyable. The harbour inspection was an eye-opener to all. Never before did they see the inside of the "works." The city drive was much enjoyed, as was the lunch on top of Mount Royal. The trip to St. Anne's and Macdonald College was a fitting climax to the convention. The grounds were in splendid condition after the recent rains. Lunch was provided by Lady Clouston and R. B. Angus. Bob Burrows was an able director and everything was thrown open, even the peach houses and cellars. It was agreed that the association's banquet was the best ever. A. C. Wilshire and Mrs. Wilshire were given handsome presents by the members, who all agreed that this was the most successful convention so far held.

The new officers elected are: Walter Muston, Davisville, Ont., president; H. B. Cowan, Peterboro, Ont., first vice-president; Geo. Hopton, Montreal, Que., second vice-president; Julius Luck, Montreal, secretary-treasurer. Executive committee—Three-year term: John Milford, Sherbrooke, Que.; F. Wise, Peterboro, Ont.; A. Ferguson, Montreal, Que. Two-year term—J. Graham, Ottawa, Ont.; A. H. Ewing, Woodstock, Ont.; H. J. Mullies, Brampton, Ont. One-year term—A. Amandale, Toronto, Ont.; F. S. Cersman, London, Ont.; E. A. Mepstead, Ottawa, Ont. Auditors—Jas. McKenna and Jos. Bennett, both of Montreal.

THE PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

Ladies and gentlemen, members of the Canadian Horticultural Association:

I esteem it a great honor and privilege to address a few words to you, as president, at this, the opening session of our fifteenth convention. I think we have every reason to congratulate ourselves on the position we, as a society, occupy today. We have passed the time when there could be any doubt of our being a permanent force in the horticultural history of our country. It is true our members are comparatively few, but they are increasing and our prospects for the future are bright.

We meet here partly for social, and partly for business purposes. As those engaged in a common means of livelihood, we wish to get into personal contact with each other, to get an interchange of ideas, and converse without that stiffness and formality that enters ordinarily into our business dealings. We also wish and expect to extend our business by showing samples of our goods and productions. With this object, we have our trade exhibit, a cheap and effective form of advertising, that is not taken full advantage of by growers and dealers in supplies. Although immediate results may not be large, persistent efforts in this direction must have the desired effect. To encourage those who have exhibited this year, I would ask the members to go carefully through the exhibits, and, if they see fit, to place an order.

If our society is to grow in importance and influence, means must be provided to hold together our present membership, and gather in those who, so far, have either held aloof or have lost their interest and dropped out. If given something to do, they (especially those who are unable to attend our conventions) would feel an interest in the society. I would suggest that our vice-presidents be appointed from large commercial centres, and that the members in that locality act with them in considering matters that might arise from time to time, affecting the trade or profession. The recommendations could be dealt with by the central committee with better knowledge of the facts, and our influence as a body could be used to correct these difficulties.

These questions might include such as the proper interpretation of the tariff on plants, cut flowers, etc., the improvement of the status of the private gardener, and the dumping or slaughtering of stock. There will probably be a revision of the tariff during the coming year, and this society should be prepared to lay before the ministers the opinion we, as a society, hold regarding changes thought advisable. The provincial government of Quebec is about to select members of a board to act as park commissioners, the intention being to lay out a system of parks in and around Montreal. I think this association should suggest to the government the advisability of naming among these members at least one practical man of known ability in this city.

Our trade paper is making somewhat slow progress, but the responsibility for this rests largely with ourselves. More matter of a practical nature is needed, and this the editor is striving to obtain, but meets with little encouragement. I would appeal to all to support this medium of information, by contributing articles, or notes which would make it more interesting and helpful. We have again met with some difficulty in inducing our best men to furnish essays for our programme. But if those we have are discussed thoroughly and full use is made of the question-box, our time will be well spent. A little longer time than usual is provided for sight-seeing and social intercourse. We trust no one will find it too long or think of leaving until the last minute.

M. Rice & Co

The elaborate and handsome catalogue for 1912 just issued by M. Rice & Co. shows a wonderful and complete assortment of everything that is used in the way of supplies for the up-to-date retail florist. A walk through their factory and store rooms, the ten floors of which are packed to repletion, shows that the goods are all there, ready to be shipped off at a moment's notice. Immediate delivery is one of the first rules of the house, this being possible on account of the large stock always ready to select from. One hundred and fifty thousand cypresses leaves for one item will give some idea of the size of the general stock. Everything staple is seen in large quantities.

A four-story fire-proof annex immediately in the rear of the old building has been added the last year. In it is the paint shop and the dyeing department, and it contains large storage facilities. B. Eschner, who is now sole proprietor, says that the company is able to manufacture much stock that heretofore had to be brought from Europe. A compressed air electric power machine is used in coloring baskets, some very beautiful iridescent effects being seen that would have been impossible to get with a brush. Two-tone effects in various shades give a coloring that is very striking and beautiful.

Many of the baskets and other articles manufactured are creations of their own, something new being turned out all the time. An electric lamp stand of wicker with a handsome shade is a beautiful ornament that will fit in well with many choice decorations. There are whole floors filled with recent importations of the best baskets and vases from European makers, many of them unique in shape and color. Ribbons are a specialty and are seen in large assortment. A new waterproof wire-edged ribbon for the handles of corsage and other bouquets will certainly become staple.

They are sole agents for an album of colored photographs of designs, gotten up by F. C. W. Brown of Philadelphia and Toronto, Canada. Mr. Brown is a first-class floral artist, as well as a photographer and this combination has enabled him to produce the best work of this kind that we have ever seen. It should be a great seller. The Rice company will be represented at the convention with a great display of their goods. B. Eschner, F. J. Farney, A. Zirkman and Robert Shock, all live wire salesmen, will take great pleasure in pointing out the merits of the exhibit.

Our Portraits.

We present in this issue portraits of some of the well-known men identified with the Chicago trade.

W. N. Rudd—President of the Mount Greenwood Cemetery Association, and chairman of the badge and ticket committee.

J. C. Vaughan—Head of Vaughan's Seed Store, and chairman of the finance committee.

Proposed Publicity Campaign for Flowers.

The following communication has been received at this office without the name of the sender:

"The committee appointed by the New York Florists' Club to appear before the convention of the S. A. F. & O. H. at Chicago to obtain the endorsement of this movement by the society and its assistance in starting the campaign, has received the support of the florist clubs of several of our leading cities, which clubs have appointed committees to act with the New York committee at the convention. The New York committee will, at the convention, present a resolution asking for the appointment of a general standing committee to conduct the campaign, its membership to embrace one delegate from each florist club organizing a publicity committee before October 1 of each year, such general committee to direct the work of the local committees, which latter are to conduct the campaign within their respective districts. The S. A. F. committee would be expected to go into session annually at the society's conventions, receive the reports of the local committees, review the work as a whole and formulate plans for the continuance and extension of the campaign. The New York committee has devoted much time to consideration of the project and ways and means to put it into operation, and it is hoped that the campaign will be started at the Chicago convention."

CINCINNATI, O.—Henry Meazer, who has finished erecting greenhouses in Reading Wood, is preparing to build a "florists' emporium" at the same place.

Pittsburg.BUSINESS FAIR.

The business of the last week was very fair, considering the season. There were some large orders for funeral work and a fair bench trade. In addition to the supply of greenhouse stock, a noticeable feature has been the profusion of outdoor stock, gladioli being very prominent. Phlox and the old fashioned tiger lilies, the latter being used with good effect in some stores for window display, are also popular. Asters are now arriving in quantity and of better quality than they were a week ago. Very good stock of Kaiserin, the Killarneys and My Maryland roses are seen. The carnations are fast disappearing; they had to go to make room for the new crop.

NOTES.

The new show room and conservatories of Randolph & McClements in connection with their new store at Penn Avenue and Whitfield Street, are rapidly nearing completion. About all that now remains to be done is the pipe-fitting and the placing of the fountain and rockery in the show room. When all this is finished this establishment will come so near to being the finest in the country that there will be little ground for argument on that point. A good feature of the location which shows foresight in its selection is that nobody can put up a tall building that may overshadow theirs. Located on a corner, on the other side is a wide lawn, surrounding one of the leading churches and the possibility of it going on the real estate market is very remote. The front of the conservatory on Penn Avenue is a beautiful execution in plate and ornamental glass, while there is even more space for display on the Whitfield Street side. In addition there is another greenhouse behind the show room and another over the wagon and shipping shed, the whole comprising a glass area of nearly five thousand square feet.

B. L. Elliott, who now owns the plant growing business known as the John Bader Co., has erected three new greenhouses this summer at the Troy Hill range each 21x125 feet. The material was furnished by the Lord & Burnham Co. The houses are very staunchly built and have cast iron gutters, the posts being anchored in concrete, of which the sides and foundation are constructed. At this range an immense number of palms and ferns are grown from seed. The growing stock of palms and ferns is very fine. There are also about 800 tubs of large imported Kentias, and several thousand in sizes up to 6-inch pots from their own seed. There are six houses in ferns of different varieties. Mr. Elliott will force 10,000 azaleas for Easter.

P. S. Randolph, Jr., is taking a very active interest in their new range of 25,000 square feet of glass which is located near the city line. The firm name is P. S. Randolph & Sons and we understand that it is a separate business from that of Randolph & McClements.

During the absence of Edward McCallum, who is on his vacation, J. B. Martin supplies his place in the store. Miss Kyle, bookkeeper at this store, has gone to Rochester for her vacation. Theo. McCallum has returned from a trip to Buffalo and other northern points.

One of the very handsome stores of this city is that of the Zieger Co. Inc., on Baum Street, East End. The company is pushing an automatic plantstand of their own invention which will be seen in H. Bayersdorfer & Co.'s exhibit at the Chicago convention.

John Bader, who was married about a month ago to Mrs. Edlefsen, once a Pittsburg florist, has retired from business and he and Mrs. Bader have made their home at Lorraine, Oregon.

W. Jarvis Smith, treasurer of the A. W. Smith Co., was at the Pittsburg store during the past week. A. W. Smith, Sr., who has been quite unwell, is now improved in health.

Ray J. Dasbach has been making fine window displays with the old fashioned "tiger" lilies. He is another retailer who expects to make the Chicago trip.

Much interest was manifested in the free distribution of flowers August 9 among the children at the closing of the vacation schools.

G. P. Weaklen, South Highland avenue, is so well pleased with the season's business that he has decided to see the convention.

S. McClements was at Bar Harbor, Me., during the past week, superintending an elaborate wedding decoration.

Chas. Graham, Cleveland, O.
S. A. F. Chairman Sports Committee.

Albert Landsettel has bought the retail store formerly conducted by M. J. Steiner at 6255 Frankstown avenue.

A "for sale" sign is on the property of Frank Byers & Son, Westview.

Mrs. Ella A. Williams is at her summer home near Lake Erie.

Louisville.

The annual convention of the American Federation of Catholic Societies is held here August 18, and one of the features will be a grand parade with many floats depicting historical, religious, educational and patriotic scenes. The decorating of the floats will require plants and cut flowers and will help the florists in the dull season.

P. G. Reynolds, while ill last winter, met with the loss of nearly all the stock in his greenhouses by freezing, but Mr. Reynolds pluckily got things in shape again and he is producing quantities of asters, lilies, carnations, etc.

A. Rasmussen has recovered from his recent illness and will attend the Florists' convention with his family, making the trip in an automobile. He intends to make a leisurely journey, taking three days to go.

The son of E. G. Reimers has graduated at the state agricultural college and has accepted a position with Donaldson & Co., Warsaw, Ky.

Henry Fuchs has had his greenhouse establishment newly painted and everything looks bright as new.

J. G. Billman & Son have been bringing in fine America and Augusta gladioli.

The Deer Park Conservatory Co. has begun work on its new plant.

Nanz & Neuner are making extensive improvements.

Flowers of all kinds are rather poor in quality and the demand is light.

H. G. W.

Rochester, N. Y.MUCH STOCK WASTED.

Much good stock has gone to waste during the last two weeks on account of the slackness of trade. Each florist has the same story to tell and the paint brush and hammer are much in evidence. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are now on the market and are very good. Asters and gladioli sell well, the lighter shades of the latter being most called for. Roses and carnations are good but there is no demand for them.

NOTES.

Recent visitors: Mr. Berg with Lion and Co., New York; Thos. Cogger, with N. F. McCarthy & Co., Boston.

Mrs. Frank Fox, of Wayland, is still sending some good sweet peas to the city, and they find a ready market.

Salter Bros. are filling in spare time by erecting new benches at their Park avenue greenhouses.

Miss Lillian Wheeler will spend the last two weeks of August at Conesus Lake.

Albert Young left Aug. 16 for Atlantic City, where he will spend some time.

Chas. Suhr is cutting some excellent Golden Glow chrysanthemums.

Charles Curtis expects to attend the S. A. F. convention.

Felix Alberts reports a fair trade considering the season.

Twin Cities to Chicago.

The Twin City florists will go to Chicago in special cars on the Pioneer Limited, over the C. M. & St. P. Ry., leaving Minneapolis at 8 p. m. and St. Paul at 8:40 p. m., Monday, August 19. The following persons are booked to go: From Minneapolis—C. F. Rice and wife, A. S. Rice and wife, C. N. Ruedlinger and wife, H. Rosacker and wife, H. Will, W. F. Holmes, O. H. Carlson. From St. Paul—L. R. Cady, August Vogt, N. C. Hansen, A. W. Lemke, F. Gustafson, S. D. Dysinger, F. W. Topel, O. R. Eckhardt, A. Zachman. Others will no doubt join the party later. Several will go ahead of the party and will meet at Chicago. All Northwestern florists are invited to join the Twin City florists on the trip. Berth reservations may be sent to either the Minneapolis or St. Paul agent of the C. M. & St. P. Ry. Co., or to S. D. Dysinger, St. Paul, state vice-president of the S. A. F.

S. D. DYSINGER, Sec'y.

DILLON, MONT.—Horne & Greiner of Helena, have purchased a plat of ground here and will erect a greenhouse immediately and others as business requires.

FITCHBURG, MASS.—Geo. H. Hastings, teacher of agriculture in the normal school here, has made the state a gift of a greenhouse, 28x150 feet, to be used for purposes of instruction.

San Francisco.

STOCK IMPROVING.

Market conditions as to prices and supply continue about the same as the preceding fortnight, the quality of the stock, however, slightly improving. Best American Beauties are still selling for $1.50 a dozen, a few specials bringing $2. The usual commercial roses move at 25 cents a dozen, while some good outdoor Ulrich Bruner bring 37½ cents. A few of the downtown stores are showing a few clever little bunches of Mrs. Aaron Ward, which bids fair to share the popular favor with Cecil Bruner. Cattleyas are plentiful at the usual rate. For carnations you may name your own price. Outdoor stock, with the exception of sweet peas, is overplentiful.

THE FALL EXHIBITION.

The Fall Exhibition committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society held their initial meeting and organized for business by electing Angelo J. Rossi, manager; H. Plath, assistant manager; Eric James, treasurer, and Thos. F. Taylor, secretary. A preliminary premium list was arranged and ordered printed. Chas. A. Cooke, one of the few honorary members of the society offered a premium cup from the Hotel Fairmont, of which he is manager. It was announced that Mrs. Jas. L. Flood, of Menlo Park, has offered a very valuable cup to be presented to the best exhibit in the show, this award to be won three years in succession to become the permanent property of the holder. The date of the show will be set at the next meeting.

NOTES.

The flower shops are displaying a card announcing their closing on Sunday, August 25, the picnic day of the Horticultural Society. Pete Matraia is actively engaged as chairman of the committee in arranging a program of games and athletic events for the picnic, one feature being a tug of war in which the florists will pull against the growers. D. Mac Rorie on account of his Taft-like proportions has been chosen anchor man for the growers.

During the spring F. T. Schlottz-hauer, of the Francis Floral Co., gave away over 3,000 small plants of Shasta daisies. The practical assistance rendered the "city beautiful" movement is evidenced by the quantity of Shasta blooms to be seen in the Richmond district and other suburban parts of the city.

The Union Florists, Benedetti & Corvi, have a card in their well-stocked window announcing, "We do not patronize Japanese." They evidently desire to conduct their business to harmonize with the firm name, the labor unions forbidding the patronizing of Asiatics.

Pelican & Rossi's windows are attracting much attention with a display of hydrangea paniculata in 8-inch fern pots. These plants, elegantly done, were grown by E. James & Co. of Elmhurst.

Henry Mohr reports an average July business with counter sales light, the principal business being funeral work.

Messrs. Kennedy and Brown are away on a vacation, as is Amiel Canepa, of Canepa Bros.

Geo. F. Otto motored up from San Diego recently and evidently enjoyed his 600-mile trip.

The Frank & Parodi Co. is showing a fine line of Kentias in its McAllister street store.

SOCIETY MEETINGS.

The recent meeting of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society was one of the best attended and most representative ever held in the history of the society. The occasion was the complimentary smoker tendered H. Plath, D. Mac Rorie, Julius Epstein and the society's president, Angelo J. Rossi, prior to their departure to the convention of the S. A. F. At the short business session preceding the smoker, J. D. Avansino and G. E.

Chicago Parks.

Chicago Parks.

Statue of Humboldt, Humboldt Park.

Stanger were elected members. Applications were received from G. W. Appleby, Jas. Bostock and Chas. Shaw. E. W. McLellan showed some Killarneys and My Maryland that were very good for the season. William Kettlewell and Thos. A. Munro showed excellent dahlias and the Mac Rorie & McLaren Co. exhibited a handsome cattleya dowiana with 28 blooms. A fine 4-foot specimen adiantum from H. Plath's collection was much admired. After the business meeting the members adjourned to the banquet hall where they were received by the entertainment committee, who served a collation as varied as it was liberal. Singers and entertainers added to the pleasures of the evening. Walter Eglington recited in good style and M. Pos scored his usual hit with vocal selections, accompanied on the piano and violin by Chas. Crogan and T. F. Taylor. The enjoyable affair broke up at a late hour with handshaking and wishing bon voyage to the departing members, with the hope that San Francisco would be favored with the convention of 1915. T.

DRY WEATHER HURTS BUSINESS.

Business in the tri-cities has been rather dull the past two weeks. Funeral work is about all that is doing, and there is not much of that. Flowerers have been scarce and of poor quality, owing to the extreme heat and dry weather. There has been no rain for nearly a month, and outdoor flowers are suffering in consequence. Asters are plentiful, but not large. Gladioli and tuberose are coming in but find few buyers. Dahlias have also made a showing though they need rain badly.

CLUB MEETING.

The August meeting of the Florist Club was held on the afternoon of August 8 at the Alta Vista Nurseries. The crowd was met at the end of the car line by autos and was taken out to the nurseries early enough in the day for all to inspect the grounds and stock. The boys were all pleased with the fine and large grounds, the immense stock of trees, shrubs, etc., and the way everything was grown. After the inspection of the farm came a social hour and then the supper, which everyone agreed was just right. The meeting then was called to order and bills and claims allowed for the annual picnic, which was held July 11. "Flowering Shrubs" was the topic up for discussion. The Chicago convention received its share of attention, and a party of about fourteen will represent the club there.

NOTES.

Supt. C. E. Boehm will leave next week for Boston to attend the convention of park superintendents. He will also take in the S. A. F. convention at Chicago.

Some of the growers have finished planting carnations, but most of them will have to wait for a rain, as it is impossible to lift them at present.

Harry Bills is remodeling and painting his downtown store and getting things in fine shape for the expected big fall business.

Geo. Ewoldt of Ewoldt Bros., took a 700-mile auto trip recently, touring Iowa and Nebraska, on his annual vacation.

Anderson & Torepsen, of Moline, will entertain the Florists' Club in September, the date to be announced later.

Wm. Knees is well again and is taking a lively interest in business affairs.

Charles Hummel is putting the finishing touches on his new greenhouse.

Henry Pauli is busily engaged building a fine office and workshop.

Ewoldt Bros. will cut their first mums—Golden Glow—this week.

FRANKLIN, MICH.—The Oakland County Horticultural Society held a meeting at L. B. Flint's fruit and stock farm at Novi, August 10.

OBITUARY.

Mrs. Catherine Osgood.

Mrs. Catherine Osgood, widow of Charles Osgood, died suddenly at her home in Boston, Mass., August 3. Mrs. Osgood had not been in good health for some time but was not considered critically ill until suddenly stricken shortly before her death. She was 72 years old and six years ago, shortly after the loss of her husband, she established a flower shop. With the help of four of her sons she built up a good business. She is survived by six sons: Fred W., Willard S., George F. and Frank T., all of Boston, and Samuel B. of Portsmouth, N. H., and Hiram N. of Philadelphia. The funeral was held August 6 at the home.

Joseph M. Cole.

Joseph M. Cole, one of the pioneer florists of Peoria, passed away at the age of 58, August 9, 1912, after a lingering illness of three or four years. Mr. Cole was one of the first to open a flower store in Peoria but sold out his business in 1894 and since then has not been actively engaged in the business. However, he always took a deep interest in anything pertaining to floriculture. He was a member of the Masons and Knights of Pythias, fraternal orders, which had charge of the funeral services. He was laid to rest in Springdale cemetery at 2 p. m., August 11.

Westchester and Fairfield Hort. Society.

SECOND ANNUAL OUTING.

The Westchester and Fairfield Horticultural Society held its second annual outing at Rye Beach, on Wednesday, August 7. More than 150 members attended, most of them accompanied by their wives and children. The games were all well contested, valuable prizes were carried home by many, and as for the dinner, just ask anyone who was there! To put it briefly it was the most successful outing ever held. The three contests between Westchester and Fairfield—quoits, football and tug-of-war—were won by Westchester. The results of the different contests were as follows: Running broad jump—W. J. Sealey, first; J. B. Roy, second. Putting the shot—Th. Atchison, first; J. Atchison, second. High jump—tie between W. J. Sealey and J. B. Roy. Quarter-mile race—A. Clarkson, first; A. Possell, second. Standing broad jump—J. B. Roy, first; W. J. Sealey, second. 100-yard dash—W. J. Sealey, first. Fat men's race—J. Manda, first; J. Stuart, second. 50-yard race, for men over 50 years of age, for silver medal presented by Oscar Frankel, Yonkers, N. Y.—Jack Henderson, first; J. McAllister, second. Walking match for same prize on same conditions—Wm. Smith, first; J. Henderson, second. Girls' race—H. Addor, first; M. Addor, second; H. Croner, third. Boys' race—B. Freymond, first; J. Flod, second; F. Henderson, third. Ladies' race—Mrs. A. S. Peterson, first; Mrs. Wright, second. Mrs. R. Wester of Mamaronock won the prize for the most beautiful lady present.

Convention Sports.

OFFICIAL PROGRAM.

The official program of the convention sports is out and shows a great number of interesting contests and valuable prizes to be awarded the winners. On August 22, the third day of the convention, there will be bowling contests for both men and women as well as a prize shoot. The ladies will indulge in an individual bowling contest at Bensinger's alleys, 29 W. Randolph street, at 10 a. m. August 22. The individual contest for men will take place at 2 p. m. at the same place. The shooting contest will be held at 2 p. m. the same day, at Peter Reinberg's farm, Kedzie and Devon avenues. Contestants are expected to meet at Bensinger's alleys at 12:30 sharp. Peter Reinberg is the captain. At 4 p. m. of the same day the men's team bowling contests will take place at Bensinger's.

The fourth day, August 23, will be the day of the big field meet at Ravinia park. There will be all kinds of races and field sports, beginning at 11 a. m. sharp. At 1 p. m. at the Ravinia park ball grounds the Chicago Florists' Club ball team will battle with the Society of American Florists all star club.

All contestants must be members of S. A. F. and those taking part on the Chicago Florists' Club team must belong to that organization. Ladies must be members of the Ladies' S. A. F.

WELCOME.

CHICAGO started it.

THRASH it out in open meetin'.

THAT the proposed memorial for the late William Robertson Smith, known and revered as the superintendent of the United States Botanic Garden, is interesting the general public as well as horticulturists is testified to by editorials and articles in the papers of Washington and other cities. The Washington Star says that that city will undoubtedly support the project.

THE United States Department of Agriculture has issued a notice of judgment in the insecticide case brought against the Zenner Disinfectant Co., of Detroit, Mich. Suit was brought by the Federal Government under the Insecticide Act of 1910, on a charge of misbranding, after an analysis had showed that the product consisted partially of water. The ingredients and their amounts were not stated on the label. The case came for trial March 20, and the president of the defendant company was allowed to enter a plea of nolo contendere. Sentence was suspended.

MEMORANDUM No. 1678B of the Canadian Department of Customs contains the consolidated and amended regulations under the destructive insect and pest act, and specifies that no tree, plant, or other vegetation or vegetable matter infested with any of the insects, pests, or diseases to which the act applies shall be imported into Canada except in accordance with the rules therein laid down.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

Ladies' S. A. F.

The annual meeting of this society will be held at the Auditorium Hotel, on the sixth floor, Wednesday, August 21, at 10:30 a. m. Free for all. The Ladies' S. A. F. will also give an informal reception and dance at the same hotel Thursday evening, August 22, at 8:30. Members will find the secretary at Exhibition Hall, Coliseum, all day Tuesday, to receive dues. The ladies are requested to wear their badge pins.

MRS. CHAS. H. MAYNARD, Sec'y.

Our Supplements.

Subscribers should see that they get copies of the fine supplementary illustrations showing high grade design and decorative work. These fine supplements should be carefully preserved, as they mean much to the retail florists in dealing with their customers, illustrating as they do the various kinds of work that the everyday florist is called upon to perform.

The papers in which the supplements appear should be likewise preserved, as they contain much valuable data with regard to these special illustrations. Subscribers should see that they get every issue, as otherwise they may miss some of this high-grade work.

Chrysanthemum Society of America.

The report of the tenth annual meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, held at St. Louis, Mo., November 8, 1911, has just been issued. A copy may be had of Chas. W. REVERO

GARDEN

Revero "Non-kinking" Made in 500 Ft. lengths Old Style "Kinking"

WHY buy Garden Hose of the old style (wrapped construction) which readily kinks and the plies easily separate, necessitating couplings when lengths of more than 50 feet are desired? You can avoid all this by buying Revero Garden Hose which is made in 500-ft. lengths, so that you may have any length desired in one piece. It will withstand any water pressure. Let your next order be REVERO.

We are the largest growers of Double Violets west of the Hudson River —fragrant stock in any quantity no matter how large on short notice.

Business at long range has become so common in the last decade that it is taken as a matter of course. A great many florists outside of Chicago have been doing business with us for years and would not know us should they bump against us on the street. The personal equation, however, still cuts quite a figure in the business world, and for that reason we would be glad to have you come in and get personally acquainted. Do it Convention week.

Strong and Well Established

WE CALL the attention of all members of the S. A. F. & O. H. to our exhibit at the Chicago convention and extend a cordial invitation to visit our places at Wyncote and Roelofs, where you will find much to interest you. Twenty minutes' ride by rail from Philadelphia. One train every week day. Railway station, Jenkintown.

We grow all our Kentias above 6-inch size in cedar tubs made especially for us, avoiding breakage of pots in shipment and giving better satisfaction to our customers. While they cost us a great deal more than pots, we sell the plants for the same money. They are the neatest, lightest and best tub ever introduced. Painted green, with electric welded wire hoops. We order these tubs by the car load.

GOLDEN GLOW CHRYSANTHEMUMS ARRIVE.

The weather the past week has been very unfavorable and as a consequence trade has fallen off considerably and with a few exceptions stock is very plentiful. Mrs. Francis King and American gladioli are exceptionally fine and are arriving in very large quantities, but are not bringing the prices that they should. Orchids are a trifle more plentiful but the demand still holds up and there is no surplus to speak of. American Beauty roses are fine and are bringing good prices. Asters have improved considerably in quality but are not yet up to the standard. White roses are also a little more plentiful and some choice White Killarneys are now obtainable. Killarney is also in grand shape and the demand for Mrs. Aaron Ward roses is much better. Rhea Reids are arriving in much larger quantities and there is also a good supply of My Maryland, Prince De Bulgarie and Radiance. Daisies have seen their last days but dahlias are now in and lilies are seen in abundance everywhere. Indoor carnations are arriving and the first chrysanthemums, Golden Glow, made their appearance on August 10. They are very good for so early in the season and are bringing $3.00 per dozen. Greens of all kinds are plentiful and smilax and adiantum are very good. Lily of the valley is improving in quality and is having a fairly good call. The wholesale stores have all been redecorated and everybody is making preparations for the big convention. The visitors will find a trip through the great central cut flower market very interesting and will receive a royal welcome from everyone.

NOTES.

The following local concerns will have exhibits at the coming S. A. F.

Co., Superior Machine & Boiler Works, United Fertilizer Co., Universal Portland Cement Co., Vaughan's Seed Store and the Geo. Wittbold Co.

The Raedlin Basket Co. will have a very large exhibit at the S. A. F. convention and also at its salesroom, 713 Milwaukee avenue, and its many customers are cordially invited to inspect its line.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association has fitted out the second floor of its store for the convenience of visitors to the S. A. F. convention and cordially invite everyone to favor the firm with a call.

E. E. Pieser and wife celebrated their china wedding at their home last Tuesday, August 13. They leave this week for the wilds of Canada for a visit with friends and relatives.

Fred Strail, with Lubliner & Trinz, has been suffering considerably with rheumatism since he has returned from his vacation.

Erne & Klingel are putting the finishing touches on their store and are now nearly ready to celebrate their first convention.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant, West Randolph street, August 15.

The Cook County Florists' Association will hold a meeting at the Tavern, West Washington street, August 15.

Harry Manheim, Hoerber Bros.' efficient store man, has returned from a very enjoyable vacation.

Miss Olga Aris, with A. M. York, Hancock, Mich., was a welcome visitor this week.

F. J. Simon wants it distinctly understood that he is still with Percy Jones.

J. B. Crofoot, with A. Henderson & Co., is back from a successful western trip.

N. J. Wietor says that Wietor Bros. are receiving a large number of orders for field grown carnations and that his firm now has a surplus of 200,000 extra choice plants. White Killarney and Killarney roses of fine quality are leaders at this house this week. Mr. Wietor, who is treasurer of the allied trade committee, speaks glowingly of the coming S. A. F. convention and says if there is anyone that has not yet made his donation he would be pleased to have him call at his office.

Miss Madaline Hirschberg, of the Atlas Floral Co., is spending her vacation at Lake Villa and Frank Williams is comfortably located at Kenilworth. Mrs. Williams is at the store as usual to see that everything runs along smoothly and is about as busy a lady as there is in the trade. Mrs. Goldstein resigns her position as bookkeeper this week after a long period of faithful service.

Schumann & Kohout of Libertyville are shipping a fine grade of American Beauty and Rhea Reid roses to the Chicago Flower Growers' Association's store.

Bassett & Washburn cut their first chrysanthemums on August 10 and a fine grade of Golden Glow are now seen at the store.

Gust. Alles, Wietor Bros.' old reliable storeman, is spending his vacation at his employer's home in the northern woods.

The Superior Machine & Boiler Works has just sold two No. 1 Superior boilers to Aug. Preibs of Park Ridge.

Kyle & Foerster's leaders this week are a fine grade of Golden Glow, chrysanthemums and convention asters.

A. J. Phillips has accepted a position with J. A. Budlong and is now assisting Wm. Homburg at the store.

George Keller & Sons recently shipped a carload of flower pots to the city park commissioner of Calgary, Alberta, Can., and the duty and freight on the car amounted to $302. This firm has manufactured flower pots since 1892 and are well known in this vicinity. A. F. Kohr and L. Hrudka, two other well known local manufacturers of flower pots, are enjoying a very good business and report an exceedingly heavy demand.

The M. Winandy Co., manufacturers of the new Winandy bench and heating system, is receiving a great many inquiries from interested florists throughout the country and it looks as if the firm will have plenty of work to do from now on. Mr. Winandy says that he has plenty of people on his staff to superintend the construction in out-of-town cities and that he can handle the work just as well as if it was in this immediate vicinity.

The following members of the ladies' reception committee of the Society of American Florists were entertained at the home of Mrs. Chas. L. Washburn at Hinsdale on August 8: Mrs. Adolph, August and John Poehlmann, Mrs. J. C. Vaughan, Mrs. Guy French, Miss Poehlmann, Mrs. George Asmus, Mrs. Zimmer, Mrs. Hancock and Mrs. E. H. Hunt.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. will give an excursion to its greenhouses at Morton Grove, on Wednesday, August 21, and all visiting florists and their friends are cordially invited to participate. The train will leave the Union depot at 12:40 p. m. sharp, and a reception committee will be in waiting at both the store and depot.

J. G. Mastin Co., manufacturer of the well known Mastin spraying machines, is planning on soon moving to much larger quarters owing to rapidly increasing business. Mr. Mastin says he has eliminated all the objectionable features in his machine and it is now perfect in every respect and should be in the hands of every grower.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are receiving a large quantity of fine gladioli with America showing up exceptionally well. The venerable wholesaler is looking forward to a good time at the S. A. F. convention for he expects to meet many of his acquaintances whom he first met when he was a knight of the grip.

Chas. W. McKellar and wife, George Asmus and wife, James Kissel, John Young and Chas. Baluff spent a very pleasant evening at E. F. Winterson's magnificent home one evening last week and it is needless to say that the famous quartet rendered some very fine selections.

Frank Johnson and his large force at the A. L. Randall Co. have been working like beavers to get things in readiness for the coming S. A. F. convention and will have an exhibit at both the Coliseum and store.

The Geo. M. Garland Co. will show their three new features in Garland greenhouse construction at the convention and Harry S. Garland expects to realize a great deal from the new invention in the future.

The Illinois State Florists' Association will have a booth at the coming S. A. F. convention and cordially invite all its members to make it their headquarters while they are at the Coliseum.

All the old players of the baseball nine are earnestly requested to attend a meeting at the Union Restaurant, Thursday evening, August 15, at 7 p. m. Important. Be sure and attend.

Robt Northam, George Reinberg's store man, says that the orders are coming in splendidly for the greenhouse material from the houses that were wrecked by a cyclone last fall.

Peter Reinberg's store is now being repainted and Tim Matchen, the efficient manager, and his able assistants are all ready to welcome the visitors to the S. A. F. convention.

The Chicago Carnation Co. is disposing of a large quantity of choice gladioli and some magnificent Mrs. Francis King and America are very noticeable.

John Kruchten's stock is arriving in fine shape and in large quantities and the enterprising manager says he is well fixed on everything on the bill-of-fare.

The J. B. Deamud Co. is looking forward to a banner fall and has increased its store force so as to be able to handle the business satisfactorily.

J. A. Budlong is cutting some exceptionally choice lily of the valley and is certainly making a reputation for his famous blue ribbon brand.

L. H. Winterson has returned from a very pleasant outing at Blue Field, Ky., and is again busy as a bee at Winterson's Seed Store.

H. Wittbold is adding some new fixtures to his display room and will have a fine exhibit for convention week.

Percy Jones' store is now completely overhauled and presents a most inviting appearance.

Chas. W. McKellar's new store will be in fine shape for the convention

UNINTERRUPTED SERVICE MINIMUM COST OF OPERATION

The Lansden's claim as the most progressive commercial truck is well founded on this fact—it was the first electric truck built to use the Edison Storage Battery: this was nine years ago. As the one developed, so has the other; this is why the Lansden Electric is safer, speedier, more economical to operate and will run farther on one charge than any other electric truck built.

If you attend the convention visit, our Chicago sales room and let us tell you how much it costs to operate a Lansden truck—facts based on nine years' actual experience.

☐ There are 3000 Lansden Trucks in use.

☐ Made in sizes from 800-pound to 7-ton capacity.

☐ Prices range $1,900 to $5,000.

LARGE STOCK, BUT LITTLE DEMAND.

Market conditions continue about the same. Plenty of everything with but very little demand. Asters are selling at low prices, even fancies not bringing any price. Pink roses are especially plentiful. White are not so numerous but are plenty enough to go around. St. Louis will furnish her share of the convention crowd.

NOTES.

The St. Louis Florists' Club met last Thursday, 35 members being present. Robert J. Windler in the chair. The following officers were elected: F. H. Weber, president; Charlie Young, vice-president; J. J. Beneke, secretary; Will C. Smith, treasurer. Trustees are: Wm. Osseck, three years; John Connon, two years. The following new members were elected: Fred Pape, A. Gumz, Frank Windler, Max Herzog, L. Baumann, Gus Eggling, Charlie Fullgraff.

Arthur Waldman will confine himself to his work at the greenhouses at Pine Lawn, Mo. His retail store will now be conducted by his daughter, Miss Matilda Waldman. This young lady is well known in the trade and we wish her success.

Theodore Miller will open his new flower store at Hamilton and Delmar avenues early in September. The store and building recently were erected by Mr. Miller. He will retain his present shop also.

Charlie Young, of Young & Sons, has been in poor health lately. He has gone to South Haven, Mich., to recuperate. He will attend the convention. Will Young and Jim Arado will also be there.

F. H. Weber has worked hard for the S. A. F. and we are glad to note his success in obtaining new members and getting a large local contingent for the convention.

F. H. Ammann is very busy, but he will attend the convention. He was recently here after taking in the Bull Moose meeting in Chicago.

Wm. C. Smith and wife are spending a few days' vacation at Blue Spring Lodge in the Ozarks.

Alex Walbart and his son Eugene will be visitors to the convention.

ASTERS VERY POOR.

Waiting for something to turn up—that is about the state of the market this week. The buyer has to be hypnotized to make him think he is getting good flowers. In roses, Mrs. Taft holds the lead and the few Radiance that are seen are good. As an all year round rose this one is certainly good. American Beauties are good and the normal supply keeps pace with the demand. Asters are the drag. Some we saw were shipped in bushel boxes, thrown in like so many potatoes. The old excuse, no time, is applicable in these cases. One of the principal assets in the flower growing line is the packing. They ought to reach the agent in a presentable condition, ready for the inspection of the buyer. We have seen flowers of poor quality put up attractively, sell quicker and at a less percentage of loss than the goods of better quality slovenly packed. This rule applies in a time of depression as well as at any other.

NOTES.

The following orders for greenhouses have been placed with the A. T. Stearns Lumber Co., Neponset: Eastern Nurseries, Jamaica Plain, one house 19x74 feet and one house 12x54 feet; Wm. Turner, Woburn, one house 35x200 feet; Gallivan Bros., Holyoke, one house 17x40 feet; Boston Gardening Co., Waban, one house 45x215 feet; Samuel F. Carlisle, West Acton, one house 40x150 feet; Given Bros., Burlington, two houses, 40x250 feet each; Frank F. Hawley, Brookline, one house 25x100 feet.

The auction sales of stalls of the Co-operative Flower Market will be held August 31. This market is still growing and the success they have had has been due to the wise policy of the directors.

WEEK OPENED WITH RUSH.

Last week the opening days showed a pace that had it been maintained would have been a record breaker. Business, however, tired at the stretch and when the end was reached a small spurt on Saturday scarcely had any effect on market conditions. At the opening everything good and some things near good sold in a way most pleasing to the wholesaler. Had it kept up it might have put him in a position to dictate prices, but as it was the close left him where he could only accept what was offered. Shipping business has been strong and steady and has kept up nicely. Summer weather of the good old fashioned kind has brought in tea roses in quantity. The good sell, while the medium, and culls move only at buyers' prices. The demand for American Beauties is good and they sell nicely. The Taft roses coming in are of a very high quality. Many good mid-season and late asters are coming in in good quantities. The good ones sell but the poorer ones hardly move even at buyers' prices. Gladioli have crowded up until now there is a glut of them. The fancy ones alone sell but their price is forced down by the large surplus of smaller varieties. Easter lilies are meeting with a pretty fair call, while their kin, the auratums, are only ordinarily popular. Hydrangea paniculata finds a fair demand. The green goods market is well supplied. Ferns enjoy a good call.

NOTES.

The following will represent Cincinnati in the bowling tournament at the convention: C. E. Critchell, A. C. Hickman, Jr., Ed. Schumann, Ald. Horning and Ray Murphy. State Vice-President Critchell's herculean efforts to get florists to go to Chicago will be rewarded by this city sending the largest delegation that it has ever sent to any convention of florists.

E. G. Gillett entertained at his home Mr. Michler of Lexington on Sunday, for dinner. Mr. Michler came to meet his mother, who was returning from Maryland.

Clarence Ohmer, of West Palm Beach, Florida, will go to the convention directly from Columbus, Ohio, where he will be at the end of this week.

Miss May Carroll is on a business trip through Kentucky. Miss Carroll expects to get back in time to join the local delegation for Chicago.

The Avondale Floral Co. is rebuilding its conservatory back of the sales-room.

C. E. Critchell is having the largest call for cut ferns that he has ever had at this time of the year.

The J. M. McCullough Sons' Co. have been getting in an excellent line of asters.

STOCK SUFFERS FROM RAIN.

Stock has suffered considerably, owing to the continual rain which we have had during the last week. Sweet peas and gladioli, which were selling fairly well up to that time were hard hit. Carnations are practically out of the market and asters have made their appearance in quantity to replace them. Easter lilies are a scarcity, also roses, which sell readily. Valley has not been seen in the market for a week. There are plenty of greens to fill all orders.

NOTES.

Miss Louise Koehn, who has been in the local flower business for a number of years and recently in charge of the flower department of the Home Bros. Co., has resigned to be married some time in September.

Alfred Hollatz, of Brown Deer, has returned to his place at the Holton & Hunkel greenhouses after spending the week at Cedar Lake, Wis.

W. C. Zimmermann returned Sunday night, after spending his vacation at the Eagle convention, at Cleveland, Ohio.

Gust Rusch & Co. are keeping busy and report business far beyond their expectation for this time of the year.

A number of the Milwaukee florists contemplate attending the S. A. F. convention at Chicago.

A. Leidiger, of the Edlefsen & Leidiger Co., is spending a few days at Cedar Lake, Wis.

F. F. Delventhal, of Rusch & Co., is the possessor of a fine new Case touring car.

Gust Rusch has returned after a week's fishing at the upper Wisconsin Dells.

Harry Mann, of G. Rusch & Co., is again on duty after a week's vacation. G. R.

Oklahoma City.

Rains have fallen and the temperature has moderated; all out-doors is very much revived and the hearts of seed growers will be gladdened, for it began to look rather unpromising, owing to the continuous drouth and the occasional hot winds.

Not much life is visible in the flower stores. Things are very quiet indeed, though the summer dullness is not expected to last much longer, for September usually brings with it a material brightening up in business here.

J. F. Hickey, manager of the Barteldes stores, has been on an inspection trip through Arkansas. He was away several days and says it is yet too early to give out any information regarding seed crops. S. S. B.

BUSINESS DULLER.

Duller conditions prevail generally. A gradual increase in the supply of roses finds a not over-ready demand and these at lower prices. Carnations, the few there are of them, are a negligible quantity. Asters, of which we have had a large supply, are not coming in so freely but are still a difficult proposition to handle as to results. Even though all were good flowers—and the larger part are not—there would still be too many. Gladioli are very plentiful and sales slow. The quality is good. Hydrangea has appeared in the market with other field grown stock. Harrisii maintain their price when of the best grade but the tendency to lower prices is evident. Cattleyas are unchanged. Valley are easier with somewhat lower quotations.

NOTES.

Chairman Frank Traendly, of the transportation committee, is still short a few names in order that he may secure the special train for the delegates going to the convention. Unless they have signified their intention by Saturday of joining the party, they will have to be satisfied with two cars on the regular train that leaves at the same time Monday morning. But at the time of writing it seems possible that the necessary number will go.

The members of the Bowling club that will take part in the bowling tournament are in splendid condition, and the baggage car on the train has been so arranged that they may have light exercise on the trip so they will not get out of form. "Bert" Chadwick is captain and has charge of the team.

Charles Schenck has returned from his vacation. The senior member of the firm will now attend the convention with his family and take a month's trip on the lakes and through the lumber camps of Michigan.

The municipal department of highways has compelled some of the seedsmen to move their show windows in considerably which will prevent sidewalk displays in future.

The "outing" of the Tarrytown Horticultural Society, at Rye Beach, August 6, was a great success and reflected credit on the committee having charge of the arrangements.

The firm of Carillo & Baldwin, Mamaroneck, has been dissolved. Mr. Baldwin buying his partner's interest, and the firm name will now be the George A. Baldwin Co.

The men driving the artesian well for the Bedford Flower Co., Bedford Hills, N. Y., have reached a depth of 150 feet, but no sign of water as yet.

A. Hanig and wife are the parents of an eleven-pound boy. Mr. Hanig is the manager of Gimbel Bros.' flower department.

Wm. C. Ford has rented one of the Jno. Nicholas stores at 107 West 28th street and will move in as soon as the store is ready.

The painters and decorators have been busy renovating the store and greenhouse of William Kessler.

H. E. Phillpot, of Winnipeg, was a visitor in the wholesale market Saturday.

A few 'mums are seen daily at the establishment of Badgely, Reidel and Meyer.

George Holst, Jr., will open a retail store at Flushing, Long Island.

"Jack" Gunther has been on jury duty during the past week.

Tommy Martin is spending his vacation at Narragansett Pier. Y.

BUSINESS VERY POOR.

Another hot spell has crept in after a week of delightfully cool weather. Business is very poor. Asters now have the call and quantities of them are daily thrown on the market. "Thrown" is the correct word here, that is, judging from the condition of much of the stock, for it presents a very bedraggled appearance. This may be caused by late planting, insufficient watering, poor strain, lack of root stimulant, cutting too soon or too late, poor picking or other reasons. Such stock returns about 5 cents a bunch, while with careful attention to culture, cutting and picking, it would bring at least 25 cents, and selected stock would bring probably 50 cents. Roses are a shade better, seeming to have more substance and a better color. American Beauties are in better supply. Hydrangea paniculata is in and is seen in window decorations. It is useful to the maker up as a base for designs. Gladioli are bringing into use all the jars not used for the asters. Some of it is fine, but there is a great deal that goes at buyers' figures. Easter lilies and valley are about equal to the demand. Gardenias and cattleyas are cut and sent in on order.

NOTES.

The convention is the topic of the hour and has caused more excitement here than almost in any city in the country apparently. The Robt. Craig Co., H. A. Dreer, Joseph Heacock Co., Chas. D. Ball and the estate of Lemuel Ball will make large exhibits of plants. H. Bayersdorfer & Co. and M. Rice & Co. will sustain the reputation of this city as the florists' supply headquarters. H. F. Michell will also stage an interesting collection of bulbs and garden accessories. There will be quite a representation of delegates, although the list is far from complete at this writing. John Westcott heads the list and has the names of a number who are still undecided. So far the list includes W. K. Harris and wife, Mark Mills and wife, Paul Klingsborn and wife, Leo Niessen, S. S. Pennock, E. J. Fancourt, Joseph Heacock, Theodore Shober, W. P. Craig, Duncan Macaw, Sydney Bayersdorfer, Isaac Bayersdorfer, Stephen Green, E. Eschner, A. Yirkman, Robert Stack and F. J. Farney, and it is thought that quite a number of others will show up about train time. They will go by the B. & O. route with the Baltimore and Washington delegations.

Mr. Mann, of the E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., and Meyer Heller of New Castle, Ind., were in this city last Monday looking up stock for their new chain of stores in the western cities. They are very sanguine of this new system of retailing from grower to buyer at cut rates and expect to find a new field not worked by the old system.

John F. Sibson, long gardener for the Thos. McKean estate, has progressed into a real bona fide grower, having purchased the Rasmussen establishment at Lansdale. There are some 15 acres of ground. Mr. Sibson intends adding some modern houses and get into the game with the best of them.

Louis Dupuy of Whitestone, L. I., was in town Monday looking up plants. He talked very entertainingly of his visit to the recent London show and particularly of the gardens on the Rothschild estate at Ascot, which, he says, are by far the most extensive and beautiful he has ever seen. K.

New York to Chicago.

As the time is fast approaching and we are thinking of vacations, stop thinking about them and write to F. H. Traendly of Traendly & Schenck, 131-133 W. Twenty-eighth street, New York, for accommodations on the convention special which will leave Grand Central station, Forty-second street, Monday, August 19, at 10 a. m. en route to Chicago. It is most important for every live florist to attend this convention. Those who are members of the S. A. F. know the advantage they derive by being members and florists that are not members should not miss this opportunity and become a member at once. Come as our guest and let us demonstrate the advantages to you. You will surely be convinced at the knowledge you will derive and will be well repaid for the trip, the meeting with other florists from all parts of the United States and Canada and the great trade exhibition that will eclipse any heretofore held. This is an opportunity that a florist should not let go by as it is as important as any part of our business to keep up with the times. Any further information and application for membership blanks will be gladly furnished and we hope that we may meet a good-sized party August 19 when our New York Florists' Club's special leaves the depot. Mr. Traendly and the committee who have charge of the arrangements en route have left nothing undone to make this the most pleasant trip ever leaving New York for a convention.

A. L. MILLER, State vice-president for Eastern New York.

Washington.

CLUB RESOLUTIONS.

Resolutions on the death of William R. Smith were passed by the local Florists' Club at their last meeting as follows:

Whereas, The late William R. Smith, an honored member of this organization, was for the greater part of his life a resident of the national capital, where he devoted the best efforts of his noble mind to the uplifting of the florists' trade and

Whereas, It is proposed to erect a monument to his memory in this city;

Therefore, be it resolved, That the Florists' Club of Washington, D. C., pledges two hundred dollars from its treasury towards the fund for such monument and further pledges to use its utmost endeavor with all kindred organizations and individuals to further the movement for a suitable memorial worthy of the memory of the man who worked faithfully and efficiently for the benefit of humanity through the best principles of our calling.

This Budding Knife Free

The Unrivalled Henkel Knife Shown Above Ivory Handle and Fine English Steel Blade will be mailed absolutely free to anyone sending in Two New Subscriptions to The American Florist, the new subscribers being persons in the trade or trade employees. This knife cannot be bought anywhere for less than $1.25 and most dealers will probably ask more for it, as the price of ivory has been advanced recently.

Send Post Office Money Order or Express Money Order for $2.00 with the names and addresses of two New Subscribers (persons in the trade, as Florists, Seedsmen or Nurserymen, or their Employees) and we will send them the paper for one year after receipt of subscriptions.

With Canadian orders it will be necessary to send $4.00 with two new subscriptions and $5.00 with two new subscriptions from other foreign countries.

The request for the knife must be made when sending in the subscriptions, giving name and address of person to whom the knife is to be sent.

The knife will be mailed absolutely free if the sender of the New Subscriptions complies with the above instructions.

This offer is good now for present orders.

AMERICAN FLORIST CO.,

CHICAGO.

St. Paul.

BUSINESS VERY GOOD.

The last week business has done remarkably well. Trade in general is good and funeral work has been holding up well. Most all the retailers are satisfied with the summer's trade. Outside stock is still in the best of condition and with our continued cool weather it should improve constantly. Inside roses are also coming in better and no doubt will continue to improve as the season advances. Bedding throughout the city and in the parks is in the best of shape.

NOTES.

Munich and Wahler have purchased the greenhouses of Leo Hermes on Gorman avenue. Mr. Munich was formerly with Burpee & Co. and Mr. Wahler is from Chicago, where he was with Peter Reinberg. Mr. Hermes, who retires from the flower trade, has purchased a grocery store, and in the future will direct his energy in that line of business.

A number of park superintendents from the western cities, enroute to Boston to attend their convention, stopped over in St. Paul for several days. The party was conducted through the various parks in both this city and Minneapolis. They expressed themselves well pleased with the condition of our parks.

Nearly all the florists in the city were asked to donate flowers last week to the W. C. T. U., who had charge of the flower mission at the Stillwater prison August 11. All prisoners as they leave the chapel after the service are handed a bunch of flowers to which is attached a text from the Bible.

Holm & Olson will furnish Superior, Wis., with 50 acres of parkway. This includes the laying out of all grounds, such as tennis, baseball, picnic, dancing pavilion, bathing beach, etc. The ground will be put in shape so that planting will be started the first of the year.

A flower show was held last week at White Bear, a suburb of St. Paul, and as that vicinity supplies the bulk of the outside stock to the St. Paul market, a fine lot of stock was exhibited.

A great many St. Paul florists are contemplating going to the Chicago convention and no doubt a good representation will be there.

Mr. Sherman, of the Sherman Nursery Co., Charles City, Ia., was a visitor last week.

W. S. Hall of Osage, Ia., was in St. Paul arranging for his next season's cut. C. F.

Butler, Pa.

Butler is the seat of a great steel car and wheel industry and is fast becoming one of the important manufacturing cities of the state. In addition to steam railroads it can be reached by a fast trolley line from Pittsburgh. The Butler florists seem to be sharing in the general prosperity. William Leith has a good store, which is conducted by one of his sons. He has twenty thousand square feet of glass which he personally superintends and several other sons work with him. Wm. Leith, as his name indicates, is a native of the "land o' cakes," and possesses the qualities of quiet industry and carefulness in business transactions, which is a racial trait.

Though engaged in other business, G. H. Walter has erected a greenhouse and grows considerable stock.

Other florists from this city and nearby towns who will be seen at the Chicago convention are: Geo. W. Burki; J. W. Jones, superintendent Phipps Conservatories; P. S. Randolph and two sons, and Joseph Thomas, of Greensburg. Mr. Burki and Mr. Jones will leave here on the evening of August 19. Others of the Pittsburgh party will leave on the same day, but are as yet undecided whether they will go on a day or night train.

Anton Krut has also a good store and several greenhouses.

Vice-President; Arthur B. Clark, Milford, Conn., Second Vice-President; C.E. Kendel,
Cleveland, O., Secretary and Treasurer;
J. M. Ford, Ravenna, O., Assistant Secretary.
Next annual convention, June, 1913.

Chicago.—Prices on the Board of Trade, August 14, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $4 to $5.50 per 100 pounds.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—C. H. Kennerly, one of the best known seed authorities in the state and author of books on agriculture in the south, has opened a wholesale and retail seed store here.

VISITED CHICAGO: David Burpee, W. Atlee Burpee, Jr., and Douglas Earl, of Philadelphia, Pa., returning home after a summer's work at Lompoc on the Burpee sweet pea ranch.

THE conference report on the agricultural appropriation bill August 7 was adopted by the Senate without opposition, the measure carrying $16,650,000 for operation of the agricultural department. The report has not been acted on by the House.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—What is said will be the largest seed warehouse in the country will be erected for S. G. Courteen. The building will be eight stories high, with ground dimensions of 150x300 feet, and constructed entirely of concrete. It will cost $182,500.

BEANS in Michigan and Wisconsin are reported as fair to good. Under the law of averages the dry fall in prospect would be a welcome change from last season's wet harvest. The carryover of beans from last harvest are said to be keeping poorly with much loss in germination.

FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.—J. A. Shelton, who has been manager of the Southwestern Seed Co. since the firm began business about ten years ago, has sold his interest to his brother, Thomas Shelton, who succeeds him as manager. J. A. Shelton has not definitely decided whether he will establish a seed business in a new location, or enter some other line.

THE passage by the senate August 12 of the Bourne parcels post bill, which is thought by the catalogue seedsmen to be a serious blow at their mail order business, will be a great disappointment to the postal committee of the American Seed Trade Association. It is to be hoped that some of the unfair provisions of the bill will be changed in conference.

THE L. L. Olds Seed Co., Madison, Wis., sends the following report: July 13 was the end of our fiscal year, the fourth since locating in Madison. The total amount of business for the year was over $350,000, an increase of more than $110,000 over the total for 1911 or 45½ per cent. The stockholders held a meeting August 5 and re-elected the old board of directors.

THE early seed potato growers of the west have opened sales at much stiffer figures than looked for. A fair crop is in prospect.

THE wet weather has done the onion sets around Chicago no good and most likely considerable harm. Warm, moist weather in the next week will make serious trouble in starting growth.

SWEET PEA crop reports in the west continue favorable. It now looks as if there would be peas enough to go around anyway. Just what surpluses there will be is causing some of the large jobbers considerable worry.

R. L. TEMPLIN, of Cleveland, O., reports a great increase in the demand for penny packets for children's city gardens. Mr. Templin publishes a special catalogue telling how to stir up interest in the work, the making of plans, etc.

THE almost certain material advance on contract sweet pea prices in California is sure to result in some planting for seed in the new western garden pea districts. Former trials would indicate plenty of vine and blossom but not much seed. Perhaps better results might be secured on sweet peas in the so called dry land districts, especially under a favorable season like the present.

Vick Interests Consolidate.

Final steps in the consolidation of James Vick's Sons, the Vick Seed Co. and the Vick & Hill Co., all of Rochester, N. Y., were recently taken. This completes one of the most important movements of this character in the seed business in recent years. For the purpose of effecting the various transfers, the Vick & Dildine Co. was organized earlier in the year as a corporation under the laws of New York, with a capital stock of $150,000. The officers of this company are: F. W. Vick, president; Dr. H. W. Allen, vice-president; Hon. H. F. Remington, secretary; W. H. Dildine, treasurer and general manager.

It is expected that each of the subsidiary concerns will continue practically the same as heretofore, but their union will mean the elimination of much expense and will strengthen every department. All of the men actively connected with the business as reorganized occupied responsible positions in one concern or the other for many years and are familiar with the various phases of the seed, plant and bulb business.

The officers of the subsidiary concerns are as follows: James Vick's Sons: Chas. H. Vick, president; Hon. H. F. Remington, secretary; W. H. Dildine, treasurer. Vick & Hill Co.: F. W. Vick, president; Albert F. Vick, vice-president; W. H. Dildine, treasurer. Vick Seed Co.: Chas. H. Vick, president; Geo. Arnold, secretary; W. H. Dildine, treasurer.

Every florist, horticulturist, nurseryman, and most of the gardeners of any experience are acquainted personally or by reputation with Chas. H. Vick. He is familiarly known as "Charlie" from coast to coast. He is the only son of James Vick, the founder, now remaining in the business. He has been connected with the house all his life. Besides his connection with the business of the firm, Mr. Vick gives a good deal of thought to the success of other horticultural interests. To him more than to any other one person is due the credit for the splendid success of the Rochester flower shows. He was chairman of the general committee for the two previous shows and is acting in the same capacity for the coming show. This season he was urgently requested to accept the position as superintendent of the horticultural department of the New York state fair at Syracuse. He accepted and has thrown into this work his characteristic energy and enthusiasm, with the result that he has secured the support of the various park boards of Rochester, Buffalo, New York and other cities, and of several commercial horticultural interests. The display in 1912 promises to surpass anything seen heretofore in this department.

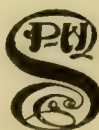

Fred W. Vick, nephew of James Vick, the founder, has long been prominent in seed and plant interests. For many years he was in charge of the entire plant and bulb department of James Vick. Later, as president of the Vick & Hill Co., he established an independent business, closely affiliated with the house of James Vick's Sons. For a number of consecutive years he was president of the Rochester Florists' Association. He has been president of the S. A. F. As head of the Vick & Hill Co., he will continue to have control of the plant and bulb interests of the affiliated concerns.

Albert F. Vick, the vice-president of the Vick & Hill Co., is a son of Fred W. Vick and has been connected with his father's business since he was a boy, which, by the way, was not very long ago. Probably most of the florists who attended the national convention at Rochester will remember him, since he was chairman of the sports committee at that time. He is captain of the bowling team of the Rochester Florists' Association and is a very popular young man. Albert is probably acquainted with more florists and seedsmen in the United States than any other person in Rochester with the exception of "Charlie" Vick.

Fall Bulbs

Our shipments of Roman Hyacinths, Freesias, Ornithogalums, Harrisii and Candidum Lilies are ready for delivery now. They come from the best growers in Bermuda and France. Our Hyacinths, Tulips and other Dutch Bulbs are imported direct from our regular Holland growers, whose stock we have used for years. The fact that we import more bulbs than all other seedsmen, florists and nurserymen in Rochester is proof that our bulbs give satisfaction. Our prices are very low this year considering the quality of the stock we sell. Send for our Wholesale Catalogue.

The Best

The demand for our Aster seed as well as other summer flowering annuals has grown so rapidly that we have a larger acreage than ever before. This year we have fifty acres of Asters alone which will be well worth coming a good many miles to see. Florists and others are always welcome visitors.

James Vick's Sons, Rochester, New York

Johnstown, Pa.

The visitor to the Johnstown of today will see no marks of the awful deluge that engulfed the town May 31, 1889, but far up the mountain there is mute evidence in the white stones that mark the graves of seven hundred and seventy-seven unknown dead, who perished in that disaster which snuffed out three thousand lives and as many homes. The city has been rebuilt and there are many evidences of prosperity, not the least being four good retail flower stores with a considerable glass area connected with three of them.

T. Malbranc has a very large store well equipped for business, in fact its glass frontage of 90 feet makes it a noteworthy store for any city. The interior is well fitted up for display, with a good workroom, office and storage rooms. He is building more houses at his new range, which will be devoted exclusively to cut flowers, while pot stock will be grown at the old ranges on Barron avenue.

Miss Margaret Schneider is exclusively a retailer, but she keeps a good stock at her store in the Cambria Theatre building and seems prosperous.

Wm. Schmidt and wife are in Europe for a three months' stay, they having left home June 18. They are visiting in Germany and Switzerland.

Herman Niessen has a good store and a noteworthy feature is the conservatory attached in which is a stock of fine palms.

Wm. Schrader's store is attractive and he has a considerable glass area several miles from the city.

PENSACOLA, FLA.—A. Hauge has acquired property in a suburb of this place and will erect greenhouses covering four acres. He will also open a flower shop.

Boddington's "Quality"

Christmas=Flowering Sweet Peas

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. William Sim, Clifondale, Mass., the great sweet pea specialist sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3,000 lbs. Few kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

We Can Make Immediate Delivery of the Following:

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA-EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD. An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf and of exceptionally free-flowering qualities. Without doubt the finest early white for indoor planting. We sell one grower in Pennsylvania 35 lbs. of this variety every year; name on application. Oz. 25 cts., ¼ lb. 75 cts., ½ lb. $1.25, lb. $2.00.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August, flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the Winter months. Oz. 15 cts., ¼ lb. 50 cts., ½ lb. 85 cts., lb. $1.50.

of Giant PANSY Seed

Must Not be Compared with the flimsy Trimardeau

It is much larger and of good substance; the immense flowers of 3½ to 4 inches are of perfect form; every tint and shade is produced in striking combinations and endless variations of beautiful colors and markings. The stock plants are most critically selected. It is rich with shades of brown, bronze, red, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

No. 116 "Clipper" Cleaner

This machine has Traveling Brushes on the screens, Special Air Controller, Settling Chamber and Dust Sack for taking care of the dust and light screenings; two stands for pony elevators, sink hopper and bagger.

The cleaner and elevators are driven from a counter shaft on the lower frame of the cleaner.

All belting and pulleys furnished complete, as shown in cut.

The seed is dumped into the sink hopper connected to elevator boot and carried up to the feed hopper of the cleaner. The cleaned seed discharges from cleaner into the opposite elevator boot, is elevated and sacked. This is all done on one floor.

This Is a Complete Cleaning and Elevating Outfit

Self-contained, requiring no mill-wright work, dust spout, dust collector or dust room, and is giving universal satisfaction.

This Machine Has No Equal for Clover, Timothy, and All Garden and Flower Seeds

Various Crops.

The grower who has trouble to dispose of heavy cuts of leaf lettuce in October, November and December should try something else to relieve the gluts. Among such crops are young beets, green onions, radishes and string beans. We have obtained fancy prices for all these immediately after hard freezing, prices that would pay very well as their culture is simple and no heat is needed, or very little. Besides these things have the soil in good condition for later crops of lettuce. For beets, Crosby's Egyptian is best. Planted in rows 12 inches by 3 inches in the rows, they do well and six to seven weeks should finish them. For a snap bean we like either Longfellow, Black Valentine or Extra Early Refugee. Green onions are easily produced from large sets or rather small onions planted thickly. Very often onion growers have stocks too large for sets and too small to sell in the market. These make capital green onions in a short time. Parsley is another good crop if started on time, say before Oct. 1. If one has not got the roots on the place, they can be bought from market gardeners. In radishes, Scarlet Globe is best. It requires four weeks in October, five in November and often six if to come in December. That is, a Christmas crop of radishes should be started about November 10. Head lettuce would be another line, but most growers find trouble in heading it in green houses, and unless well headed it is useless. Head lettuce requires a lower temperature than either Grand Rapids or any of the above crops; hence plan accordingly if inclined to try it.

Novelties Roses, Shrubs Hardy Herbaceous Plants, Etc.

We take this opportunity to announce to the American Nursery Trade that we are large growers of Novelties in Roses.

We buy every year all the Novelties which appear anywhere in the world.

We propagate all the varieties of the sets during the first year they are in our possession; we study them and offer in our Wholesale Catalogue of Nursery Stocks and Roses those that we have noted are among the best.

We continue to propagate and study them as Novelties during three years, and afterwards transfer the very best into our General Collection.

Owing to the great attention that we devote to this culture and the importance of our General Collection of Roses, an inspection of our Nurseries in summer will be of much interest and profit to our American colleagues when on a trip in Europe.

Our Wholesale Catalogue of Roses and Nursery Stocks, Fruit Stocks, etc., which affords very deep interest as to Novelties in Shrubs, Hardy Herbaceous Plants, etc., will be sent on request.

The Nursery Trade

American Association of Nurserymen.

Thomas B. Meehan, Dresher, Pa., President; J. B. Pilkington, Portland, Ore., Vice-President; John Hall, Rochester, N. Y., Sec'y. Thirty-eighth annual convention to be held at Portland, Ore., June, 1913.

OMAHA, NEB.—The F. W. Meneray Crescent Nursery Co., is in the hands of a receiver. Action brought to secure payment of $50,000 in promissory notes was the cause. The receiver, C. W. McDonald, has been empowered to continue the business.

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—The Jackson & Perkins Co., of Newark, N. J., has won its suit against a number of railroads in which it was alleged the charge for shipping nursery stock from California to New York in refrigerating cars was excessive. One icing only was necessary but the charge was $70, the same rate as for freight requiring several icings. The Interstate Commerce Commission in its decision cuts the rate when but one icing is made to $40.

Cornus Alternifolia.

The red-osier dogwood is much used in shrubberies and on lawns, but I do not know that the alternate-leaved dogwood has been cultivated, though I think it deserves introduction into our public parks and private grounds. Outside my window and giving pleasure all the year round stands a specimen brought in unwittingly as seed or seedling probably with some ostrich ferns, says a writer in the American Botanist for May. The snow lies heavy on its roots this March day, but the level branches spreading in tiers from the ground to the summit of what is now a small tree contrast most charmingly with the stiff syringa bushes near by. I think the Indian must have called this the look-up tree because the small twigs that bear the flowers and shining pointed leaves all rise from the upper surface of the slender boughs. It is the peculiar delicacy of its spray that makes this cornel a joy in winter, the abundant level-top clusters of creamy flowers a delight in June, while in late summer the berries—blue on white stalks—will vary the color scheme and attract birds of different species. Indeed the fruit seems to be very palatable to "our little brothers." The range of Cornus alternifolia is wide, extending from Canada to Georgia and from the Atlantic coast through the middle west.

PEONIES

We have been growing Peonies more than fifty years, endeavoring always to obtain and grow the best varieties obtainable, using our best endeavor at all times to have everything true to name. The best time to plant Peonies is in the fall, from September 1st until frost interferes with the work. They start root growth as soon as set. Mulch with coarse manure as soon as ground freezes. Do not apply manure among the roots at planting. Home-grown Peonies are much more desirable than imported, because these may be procured and planted much earlier than imported plants can be obtained.

THE KROESCHELL GREENHOUSE BOILER

Here is the boiler that is making the most wonderful greenhouse heating record in the world. Florists and gardeners who have used other makes are constantly giving the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler the highest praise.

10,788,000 square feet of glass was equipped with the Kroeschell Boiler during the past five years. You will find the new 1910 model Kroeschell Hot Water Boiler in every state in the Union and Canada.

Our Eastern business has been exceedingly heavy the past season.

WHICH DO YOU WANT?

CAST IRON BOILERS—FOOL ECONOMY (false ratings, fuel waste, danger of breakdowns, dealers' profits), or

KROESCHELL BOILERS—FUEL ECONOMY (honest ratings, safety, quick heat, no boiler pits, no dealers' profits.)

Kroeschell vs. Cast Iron Boilers

Over 1500 Cast Iron Boilers were replaced by the Kroeschell Greenhouse Boiler during the past six years. It is a common occurrence for a Kroeschell to replace two to four cast iron boilers at a single place; this is the CENTRAL HEATING SYSTEM PLAN, and has saved many florists hundreds of dollars per season in fuel alone, besides a big saving in labor.

OUR HEATING ENGINEER has probably had more practical experience in this line than any other greenhouse man, and we place his experience at your service.

Loading No. 18 Kroeschell Boiler. Capacity, 106,000 Sq. Ft. of Glass. See American Florist, July 27, Page 10.

Do You Want True Heating Values?

Many florists, to their sorrow, have made the mistake of buying cast iron boilers, which, because of their ratings, appeared to be cheaper than the Kroeschell boiler.

The extravagant ratings of cast iron boilers are misleading and during the past cold winter have been the cause of much disappointment and serious trouble to many growers. The fuel waste is enormous when cast iron boilers are used for commercial purposes, such as greenhouses, heating, etc., etc.

Do not make a mistake when selecting your new boiler; get a Kroeschell boiler and you will never be disappointed.

It's the cheapest and best in the end.

The KROESCHELL BOILER

Has the Highest Standard of Heating Values

Immense Self-cleaning Heating Surface
Longest Fire Travel—Perfect Combustion—Free Circulation—Thin Waterways—Safety—Durability
Economy—Kroeschell Boiler Ratings are Guaranteed

The Kroeschell boiler will develop more heat per pound of coal consumed than any other boiler on the market, and we do prove it.

Read what our customers say about our boilers and be convinced. What we do for them we can do for you. Take our advice on boilers and you will make no mistake.

Read What the Users Say About KROESCHELL BOILERSKroeschell Better Than Cast Iron

"I bought a No. 6 Boiler in 1903. It has now 10,000 sq. ft. of glass, and we could add 3,300 more. This is ahead of five or six cast iron boilers which I have used. I saved $50 per season on the coal bill."

M. C. WARD, Quincy, Mass.

Kroeschell vs. Cast Iron

"I have one of your new 1910 model Kroeschell Boilers, and same has proven very satisfactory. We have no trouble to keep temperatures in the coldest weather. We fire once or twice during the day, and once at night, and have had the best satisfaction I have ever experienced in a boiler. Formerly I had two cast iron boilers; one cracked and I took both of these boilers out. My coal bill with the cast iron boilers ran from $195 to $207 per season during the past seven years. This year, with your boiler and soft coal, my coal bill was only $103, and I still have some coal left. Your boiler is the best and cheapest on the market, not alone for the price, but also in fuel saving. I am very glad that you are so well known in Buffalo, N. Y. I have never heard anything but praise, in which I join heartily. Wishing you every success, I remain,

MAX BUEHLER, Forks, N. Y."

Cost of Heating One-Half Less Than With Cast Iron Boilers

"I bought a No. 3 Boiler in 1901. We had a corrugated cast iron fire box boiler and a sectional cast iron boiler before we bought yours in 1901. The cost of the heating with your boiler is one-half less than it was with my cast iron boilers. Your No. 8 Boiler, which we bought recently of you, is not being run to its capacity."

WM. GEENEN, Kimberly, Wis.

Has enlarged place and installed another No. 6 Kroeschell.

ADVANCE CO., RICHMOND, INDIANA

Our Steam Burnham Number 36 is Just 6 Inches Higher Than the Water Boiler.
That 6 Inches Makes the Big Steam Dome
That Helps so in Getting Dry Hot Steam.

Dry steam is the economical steam. Economical, because it's hottest. Hottest because it's free from water. The wetter the steam, the less it heats, and the slower it circulates. Positively the only way to secure dry steam and prevent water from going over into the pipes, is to have a large expanding space, or dome, at the top of the boiler.

We have just been comparing the size of domes on the various cast iron boilers being sold for greenhouse heating, and find that The Burnham has the largest dome of any of them. Boiler makers skip their steam domes to cut down manufacturing cost. It does it all right, but the buyers pay for it dearly in the additional coal they must burn.

You may pay a little more for Burnham Steam boilers, but you certainly get more for what you pay and secure a boiler that has a greenhouse economy record that no other cast iron boiler can prove to have.

Other makers claim theirs to be "just as good as the Burnham" but none have the assurance to come right out and claim them to be better. This means that Burnham's must be the better boilers—the standard. Otherwise it would not be used as a comparison, standard for other boilers. Did you ever stop to think of that before?

Can ship either steam or water Burnham's at once. If in hurry, wire at our expense.

VENTILATING APPARATUS

The Steam Coal Situation.

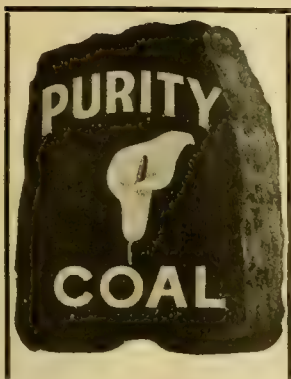

GENERAL AND CHICAGO REVIEW.

Certain underlying causes, since the strike and mine suspensions last spring have slightly increased prices, with an inclination toward a further advance. This is attributed to a scarcity of anthracite, the exportation of eastern coal, a greater demand for coal than last year, the incapacity of the railroads to care for the orders and the unusual fact that certain coal fields have not increased their production. It is believed that the principal cause of higher prices will be a lack of cars. Another influence is that the storage period of May, June and July has passed and the stocks have not been replenished.

A trip to the Zeigler mines in Illinois revealed a very interesting coal fact. To show the value of the coal as it lies in the mine, a sample from top to bottom of the seam was taken. The cuttings were immediately put in a tight jar and so remained until analyzed by an expert, with the following result: Moisture, 8.76%; volatile matter, 31.04%; fixed carbon, 51.58%; ash, 8.62%; sulphur, 0.85%. One pound of this coal would yield sufficient heat to evaporate 12.39 pounds of water at 212° F. and, if 70% of this heat were utilized, 8.67 pounds of water at the same temperature. One pound of dry coal contains 13,117 British thermal units, sufficient heat to evaporate 13.58 pounds of water; if 70% of the total heat present in one pound of dry coal was utilized it would show an evaporation of 9.50 pounds of water at 212° F. into steam. One pound of combustible or pure coal contains 14,509 heat units, sufficient to evaporate 15.02 pounds pressure of water; if 70% was utilized in actual practice, one pound of this combustible would evaporate 10.51 pounds pressure of water into steam at 212° F.

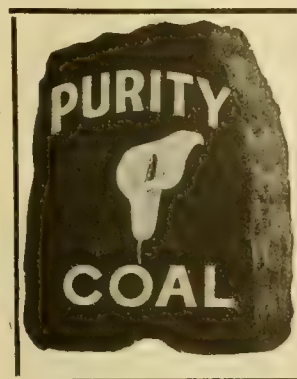

The sulphur content is remarkable as it marks the coal as one that can be used with perfect safety in any furnace operations, or in the manufacture of gas demanding a low sulphur coal, a condition that as a rule cannot be met with coal from the middle west. E. L. Hedstrom & Co. extends a hearty welcome to the florists to visit these mines.

HARTFORD, CONN.—The Connecticut Pomological Society held a field meeting at the State Agricultural College August 13-14. The invitation was extended by President Chas. L. Beach and Prof. A. G. Guiley of the college horticultural department, and the members of the Hartford Market Gardeners' Association and the Connecticut Horticultural Society also were invited.

The sweetness of low prices never equals the bitterness of poor quality and preparation. Many steam users have lost a dollar trying to save a nickel or a dime on their fuel expenditures.

Investigate PURITY Sootless.

PURITY Sootless Coal contains more heat units and less ash than any produced in Franklin County. It is the most economical and goes farthest, and is more preferable in every way than the mixed grades of Smokeless, Hocking, Pittsburg No. 8, Youghioghenny and Pittsburg, and other ancient Eastern grades. PURITY Sootless is free from impurities, contains no rough coal, bone or cannel formation. All pure PURITY Sootless Coal. Mined in all sizes from 6-inch chunks, which average 12 inches square, down to the size of old-fashioned Anthracite Small Range size.

Mr. William MacLachlan,

Dear Sir:

It is with pleasure that we add a word of praise for the Morehead Trap System which we installed in our plant last fall. We feel that the results obtained fully justify the cost of the system; in fact, we have already saved the cost of the machines in a saving of fuel, in-as-much as we have used no more coal this winter, which has been an extremely long and severe one, than we did last winter which was an unusually mild one. We have been put to no expense in its upkeep and has given us no trouble whatever. Wishing you all the success that your system deserves, we are,

Yours very truly,

How do You Handle Steam Condensation?

Are you saving the heat and turning it back into the boilers?
Can you take care of condensation without poor steam circulation, leaks or repair expenses?
These are questions that are worth a thoughtful answer—they decide between heating economy or heating waste, good or poor stock, success or failure.

Our Big Advance Ventilating Apparatus will be on exhibition at the Coliseum during the S. A. F. Convention, and we want you to inspect same.

Step right up and make yourself acquainted with our representatives. They take a certain pleasure in answering your questions because the material which they will exhibit has all the points of merits of any other apparatus and 50 to 100 per cent more. Let us get acquainted.

Up to the present time we have sold over 800 of these BIG ADVANCE MACHINES, and every one has given far better satisfaction than the purchaser expected.

If you are in need of ventilating equipment, do not fail to give our line careful consideration before placing your order. We are always glad to estimate upon your needs, and your inquiries are solicited.

In addition to ventilating apparatus, we manufacture a complete line of greenhouse fittings.

TWENTIETH CENTURY PRODUCTS

SCALINE

This is the new oil and sulphur composition—a scalicide and fungicide combined—which supplies the crying demand from the East, West, North and South, for an insecticide that can be employed at all seasons of the year, for the destruction of the San Jose scale, Oyster Shell scale and all sap-sucking insects infesting trees, shrubbery and hardy stock.

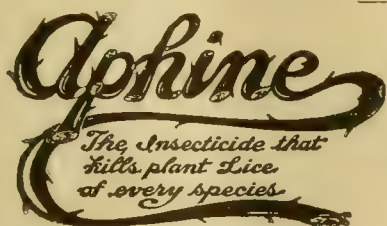

It can be applied as safely in the growing as in the dormant season.

SCALINE is an excellent summer spray for the cottony scale, pine tree aphis, apple aphis, red spider, thrips and plant lice generally.

The sulphur contained in SCALINE makes it effective as a fungicide for various blights which affect hardy stock.

It is readily soluble in water, contains no sediment and can be sprayed through the finest spray nozzle.

$1.50 per gallon, 10 gallons $10.00, 50 gallons $37.50.

THE RECOGNIZED STANDARD INSECTICIDE.

It is a concentrated liquid, its chief constituents being essential oils and nicotine, mixing readily with water at various strengths, as directions on can.

APHINE destroys green, black, white fly, thrips, red spider, mealy bug, white and brown scale and can be applied to the most delicate foliage—in fact, it invigorates plant life. It is an excellent cleanser for decorative stock.

APHINE is not a cure all, but a specific remedy for plant life, and enjoys a reputation as the insecticide that does excel all.

$1.00 per quart, $2.50 per gallon.

APHINE and FUNGINE are equally effective in the greenhouse and in the garden.

Our products are universally endorsed by commercial and private growers of reputation. We possess hundreds of endorsements, many of them published in the past, from eminent entomologists and expert floriculturists, but we have reached the conclusion that there is only one convincing way for you to become familiar with the merits of these products; and that way is, test them out yourself. It will prove worth your while.

VERMINE will shortly be placed on the market by us. It is a soil sterilizer and a germicide for destroying cut, wire, eel and canker worms, grubs, sow bugs and root aphids. This product has been successfully used for a number of years. We have secured the formula, and are now conducting experiments to test to our own satisfaction just what it is capable of.

SQUITO-RID The Mosquito Repellent. Effective for man and beast wherever this pest may be—indoors or outdoors. Sent direct, express charges prepaid, at the following prices. Quarter pint 70 cents, half pint $1.00, pint $1.50.

FUNGINE

THE FUNGICIDE OF MUCH MERIT.

Its principal ingredient is sulphur in solution, so treated that it can be applied to the tender foliage without injurious effect. Used as a spraying material mixed with water.

FUNGINE is an infallible remedy for mildew, rust, wilt, spot and bench fungi affecting flowers, fruits and vegetables. It is used with much success by rose, carnation and chrysanthemum growers.

It is effective where Bordeaux mixture and lime and sulphur fail, and unlike those preparations, it does not stain the foliage but cleanses it.

WINANDY'S NEW BENCH and Heating System

See It While You Are Attending the Convention.

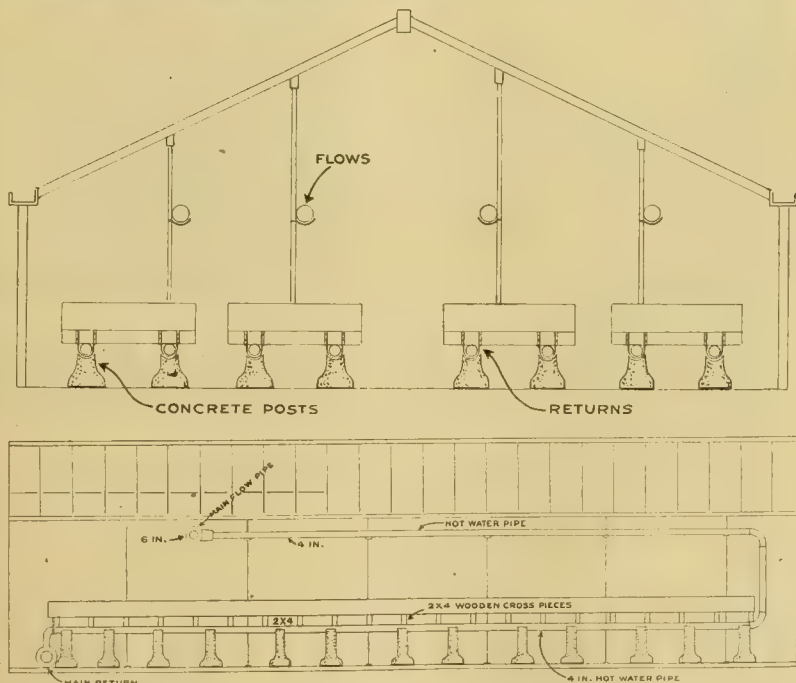

THE accompanying illustration shows our New Patent Bench and Heating System as it is installed at M. Leider's place, Oakton street and Asbury avenue, Evanston, Ill. Since we began advertising we have been asked by many out-of-town florists how and where they could see one of the newly arranged greenhouses. The coming convention next week will be a splendid opportunity for all visitors interested to inspect our new system by visiting M. Leider's place in Evanston, or Joseph Scheiden's place on Howard and Western avenues. To reach Mr. Scheiden's place, take a North Clark street car to Howard avenue and go one-half mile west to Western avenue. If you will call us up (Telephone Ravenswood 607), we will arrange to take you out to one of the above mentioned places, and will gladly explain everything in detail. Don't think of leaving the city until you have inspected this new system, for it means a big saving in your next building.

THIS new system, when well understood, will satisfy anyone that this is the best arranged for economy and gives better service than anything known of before in this line, whether for new greenhouse construction or reconstructing new benches in old houses. It was invented by Michael Winandy after he had been in the greenhouse construction business for over 35 years, and he was always held as an expert in greenhouse construction.

The new invention was patented April 9, 1912, and by right of this patent the only manufacturer and constructor of this new system for the United States is the M. Winandy Co., Mfgs.

During the last 10 months we have built 45 new greenhouses, covering a space of 200,000 square feet of glass, with this heating system, and we can refer you to all these owners as to the truthfulness of what we claim for this new system.

For full information about this new construction send to

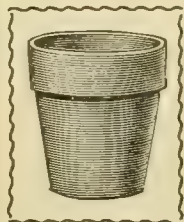

The above is an illustration of the cross and side view of the improved heating and bench construction for greenhouses and conservatories.

Triumphant Clay's

A Grand Fertilizer

AMONG nurserymen, the value of CLAY'S FERTILIZER needs little emphasis. It is, one may say, an old friend that has been tried and proved over and over again; and doubtless there are but few of our readers who do not both stock it and use it. The latest and greatest testimony to its value comes through the medium of the recent ROYAL INTERNATIONAL HORTICULTURAL EXHIBITION. Large quantities of CLAY'S were supplied for the preparation of the Royal Hospital Garden at Chelsea, and now that the process of renovation is under way, it is an interesting and significant fact that CLAY'S FERTILIZER is being exclusively used. A point for our readers to bear in mind in connection with CLAY is that thousands of amateur growers are daily awakening to the beneficial results following its use; indeed the demand from all quarters is so greatly on the increase that Messrs. Clay are almost continuously extending their works and plant.

BUSINESS SHOWS INCREASE.

Business has shown a remarkable increase. The general run of business was good and a number of funerals helped clean the market. Among the funerals was that of former United States Senator Washburn, which in itself created a heavy demand. Outside stock is still coming in in the best of shape, and with our present cool weather it no doubt will continue in good condition. The demand is well taking care of the supply. Most of the stores express themselves as satisfied with the present business.

As Summer Fades.

The moonlight shimmers on the sea;
The sunshine gilds the rustling wood;
The daisy blossoms on the lea;
The robin sings in joyous mood.
And Nature chants a merry tune
Because 'tis fragrant, leafy June.

Still shines the light of moon and sun,
But with a warmth that herely sears;
The wild flowers into weeds have run,
And oft the mercury appears Ambitious to attain the sky
In speedy flight. 'Tis now July.

A lifeless landscape greets the view;
The insects shriek in mocking joy,
So pleasures charm while they are new,
But when familiar, how they cloy!
The verdure dies upon the bough,
The song bird sneers. 'Tis August now.

Convention Proceedings.

The twenty-eighth annual convention of the Society of American Florists was called to order by Vice-President August F. Poehlmann Tuesday morning, August 20, at the Coliseum, Chicago, and well reflected the progress that has been made of late years by this society in all directions affecting its growth and usefulness. The attendance was large, while the exhibition in size and representative character was all that could have been wished or hoped for. The attendance, however, did not put itself fully in evidence at the first session, some trains arriving late, and it was not until the afternoon that the seats in the convention hall were well filled.

After calling the first session to order, Vice-President Poehlmann assured the visiting florists that they were in excellent hands, would be well cared for, and would find much in Chicago to interest and attract. He could not resist telling them something of the beauties of the city, and especially its magnificent park system, adding that the speaker whom he introduced first stood at the head and front of all movements looking to park improvement—the Hon. John Barton Payne, president of the south park commission, and in this development that florists would play a prominent part. Mr. Payne's remarks brought forth well deserved applause.

Vice-President Poehlmann next introduced the Hon. Wm. J. Vesey of Ft. Wayne, Ind., who responded to the address of welcome. Mr. Vesey referred to the fact that Judge Payne had exemplified a new beatitude, "Blessed be they who speak briefly, for they shall be called to speak again." He praised the high character of the membership of the S. A. F., as good citizens of the Union and as men and women banded together for the laudable object of improving themselves and benefiting their fellows. He felt that the convention in coming to Chicago had selected a city where they might see many successful florists as models to follow, and acres and acres of glass that is making the Chicago florists wealthy. "Chicago is big in all ways, but not more so in her material improvements and her magnificent buildings than in her flower merchants whose methods are worthy of study and emulation," said Mr. Vesey. The convention would certainly not only enjoy itself but would get in Chicago much of practical value, he declared. Mr. Vesey closed by returning thanks to Chicagoans for the good times and cordial hospitality which he anticipated for the convention.

Address of Welcome by Judge Payne.

Judge Payne delivered in chaste and well-chosen sentences a royal welcome to Chicago, declaring that flowers typify all that is purest and sweetest and most genuine in life, and that those engaged in more hum-drum callings may well envy the florists who devote their lives to the cultivation of the beautiful in nature. He predicted for out-door life in America wonderful growth and development in

Vice-President Poehlmann in introducing President Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., referred to him as one prominent in the work of the S. A. F., and who had given freely of his effort and time to make this convention a success. President Vincent delivered his address, which was referred to the following committee: J. A. Valentine, J. C. Vaughan, John G. Esler, C. C. Pollworth, F. R. Pier-son, Patrick Welsh and J. O. Thilow.

President Vincent's Address.

Ladies and gentlemen, members of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists:

Your generous welcome has made this day the proudest in my life, and I thank you for your reception from the depth of my heart. Strange as it may seem, for the reason that no florists' club has been more active than yours in the affairs of our national society, this is the first meeting of the S. A. F. and O. H. in this great city of Chicago since the society's organization meeting in 1884 and its annual meeting in 1887. In all the years which have passed since then no annual meetings have been held here. At the time of the great World's Fair, held here in 1893, it was thought inadvisable to hold the convention in Chicago. It was, therefore, held in your annex, the city of St. Louis, although, after that meeting, there was one week devoted to a horticultural conference in this city. Later, at the time of the Milwaukee convention, our members were lavishly entertained in Chicago on the closing day of the meeting. At various other times we have passed through your city en route to our annual meeting tryst, and at such times we have been well and heartily received.

There is no city in the United States to which we can come with greater hope of a successful meeting than this, for your inhabitants claim your city to be the center of commerce, of population and of civilization. Their claim is well put and we agree with them. We feel that our stay in this city is going to be one of wonderful interest and that our sessions will be marked by progress of a notable character. For the recommendations I am about to make I invite your earnest consideration. Some of them may, and probably will, meet with opposition, but generally through opposition only is a principle best worked out. My desire is that when we leave Chicago it will be with the knowledge that something tangible has been done for the future welfare of the society of which we are all so proud to be members. Let us not indulge in dreams, but in action. On behalf of all our members I thank you for the hearty welcome received this day.

In the past history of the society, its executive board, after mature deliberation, has presented plans for the benefit of the society which have been ruthlessly torn to pieces in general meeting; in some instances the membership has been in the right; but in most cases the officers have been defeated in their efforts in the direction of betterment for the society through the fact that the members who influenced the results of the debate had not had opportunity to consider the subject from all its angles, and, therefore, from lack of this consideration were inimical to the proposed changes, and so sought to defeat them. It would be but a slight expense to the society to print and immediately place in the hands of each individual member the full text of the work of the executive board at its meetings. Members would then be in prior possession of the reasons why certain policies had been advocated and would come to a convention properly prepared and fully informed on the subject, ready to discuss and vote aye or nay, according to their convictions. I urge that in the matter of the executive board meetings more light be given each individual member.

J. K. M. L. FARQUHAR.

President-Elect Society of American Florists.

SELECTION OF SECRETARY.

The secretary of the society should devote his entire time to its business, and his compensation should be such as would justify the employment of the best man obtainable. I affirm that the appointment of a secretary should be absolutely controlled by the board of directors of this society. There has been much discussion on this subject hitherto, but my contention is that no president and board of directors of a large business house, corporation or bank, would care to run their institution if its acting secretary was under the control of the stockholders, and so not directly responsible to himself and the board. While I do not contend that the S. A. F. is a business proposition only and solely, it cannot be gainsaid that there is more of business practice in its workings than not. In other words, while our society is working both for the elevation of its members and the benefit of the people of the country at large, it is in great measure controlled by its business interests. The work to be accomplished by our society in the future will be due as much to its secretary as to its president or its board of directors, and the only men qualified to judge as to the value of the secretary to the society are those with whom he comes in direct contact, namely, its board of directors. A secretary whose time is to be given entirely to the affairs of the society can well earn a living by traveling through the country talking up the S. A. F. and obtaining members if, together with the National Flower Show, we present other salient benefits to be derived therefrom—which we can well do—such as a year book to be issued by the society, a permanent home, a school of horticulture wherein your sons or any worthy young man can be educated; all these and other features will prove attractive in leading to an enlarged membership, the limit of which should be placed at not less than 3,000.

Although membership in this society is probably worth more today than when it was originated, I do not believe that either the membership fee or the life membership fee should be increased, not, at least, until we have more inducement to offer prospective members. The most important point I have to make is in regard to regulation of membership: I urge that this society pass a rule whereby new members proposed must have the endorsement of the vice-presidents of their respective states or of their florists' clubs, or two members of the S. A. F. in good standing, before their application is granted by the society; this is to be through its secretary or a membership committee.

Much has been said with regard to increasing our membership, but actually little has been done toward that end. Several of our members have distinguished themselves by bringing in many new members, but, taken as a whole, the majority have made no great effort to influence others to join with us. One need not seek far to ascertain the reasons for this passive condition. With all that has been said and done in the matter, the fact remains that until quite recently our society held one big meeting once a year, and when that meeting adjourned the society was practically dead for the next eleven months and three weeks. The institution of the biennial National Flower Show has already worked considerable change in this apathetic condition, and a few further live moves in the right direction on the part of our society will materially alter the condition of indifference to the S. A. F. prevailing among the trade at large. When we make membership sufficiently attractive to the pocketbooks of our fellow florists, we shall obtain their adhesion, not spasmodically at each city visited as has been the case in past years, but for keeps, just as a live trade paper holds its circulation.

THEODORE WIRTH.

Vice-President-Elect Society of American Florists.

The subject of holding our annual conventions at the same time as the spring flower show created a lively debate at our meeting in Baltimore last August, and those in favor of holding the convention in the month of August had the better of the argument. Inasmuch as it is absolutely impossible to do convention work whilst a great flower show is in progress, this fact being fully demonstrated at our last national flower show held in Boston, when it was found impractical to bring our members together for a business session, although they were present in great force all through the week, it would seem just as well that this society continue its August meetings as heretofore.

CLOSER RELATIONS NECESSARY.

It is useless to further attempt to disguise facts. The society in its early days committed its first tactical error in not assuming the paternity of the Florists' Hail Association, and has gone on from year to year disregarding the requirements of its specialists in all lines until today we have strong societies which, in the value of their work and the influence they wield, are nearly at par with the work done by the so-called parent body, the S. A. F. and O. H. More discussion has been offered on the matter of closer relationship than possibly on any other subject, at our various meetings for the past ten years or so; yet, with it all, not one step in advance has been made to clear the situation or bring about the desired ends until the present year. Prospects are now brighter and, if a good working committee can be gotten together during this convention, results may follow. There is no doubt in my mind but that the most active of our societies will continue each under its own autonomy. Societies such as the Carnation, the Rose, the Gladiolus, the Sweet Pea, even the Peony, will each continue on its way, fixing their several policies to suit the needs of the hour and enlarging their organizations and scope as the years go by. In great part the men who are prominent in these societies are the men who are prominent in the S. A. F. and O. H., and it must be said of these men that they are just as loyal to the old S. A. F. as they are to the separate societies in which they take so active an interest. It is for the reasons aforesaid that every plan of affiliation which has heretofore been brought forward has been laid on the table. There must, however, be some common ground on which these societies can come together in order to form that strong, compact body of horticultural interests which could produce far more good for the business than is possible through the efforts of isolated groups and separate organizations. I ask the most thorough consideration of the plans which will be presented on this floor with that object in view, the result of a "get together" meeting held in this city.

With regard to the affiliation of the purely local horticultural societies throughout the country, we think the way should be made easy whereby these may become affiliated with our society. It is for this convention to decide as to whether it would be in opposition to an attempt to form an amateur section of the S. A. F.; our constitution and by-laws, and our national charter make provision for the admission of all interested in horticulture. I ask the privilege of appointing a committee to formulate plans to that effect, said committee to report to this convention in 1913. The admission of local horticultural societies should place no additional burden on the funds of this society, while much mutual benefit would result. The society itself would become better known locally throughout the country, while the amateur societies represented could have the assistance and advice of the society's officers whenever they were required. The S. A. F. could also afford to contribute silver and bronze medals to the various shows conducted by the affiliated amateur societies, could provide a uniform constitution and by-laws, scale for point judging, and rules for show handling among those affiliated. A feature of the affiliation should be that officials or members of the S. A. F. be in official evidence at all exhibitions of the societies, an easy detail to provide for on account of our universal membership.

LOCAL FLORISTS' CLUBS.

With regard to the florists' clubs throughout the country, the question of the affiliation of these is the next most important to that of the affiliation of the various larger societies mentioned. Can we not offer representation to these clubs on a basis that would be satisfactory to both contracting parties? The individual florist clubs form the backbone of the S. A. F. and deserve better recognition. The same committee appointed to take up the affiliation of the local horticultural societies could also consider this proposition.

Some of the lines on which our societies might be brought together and affiliated with the S. A. F. and O. H. are as follows: Liberty to join or resign—in effect state sovereignty and home rule. Affiliation along co-operative lines. Reason for affiliation being that there is strength in unity. Each society to be represented in the S. A.

F. directorate. S. A. F. to exercise the functions of our federal government. In the publication of an annual, each affiliated society could pay its proportionate expense of publication, taking as well a certain proportion of the copies printed.

In regard to attendance at meetings we most certainly need a reform in this direction. It is scant courtesy to ask a gentleman to prepare a paper on some special feature of interest and then have him lecture to a beggarly array of benches. If the members will not remain in session to hear the essays, we should eliminate them from our programs, and confine ourselves entirely to the matters of business which are presented for our consideration. In fact, it has often occurred to me that while in former days, when there were no trade journals to rely upon, the presentation of essays was most advisable; in these days such papers are not so necessary as a part of our meetings, unless they be connected with some special feature of the business which calls for elucidation or discussion. Subjects selected should be confined to those which appeal to the entire membership, for a carnation grower does not care to listen to a paper on roses, a rose grower to one on general gardening principles, and so on. Papers on cultural topics can well be confined to the societies which represent one phase of our business.

As to the convention exhibition, we can report satisfactory progress. The recent action of the executive committee, which has brought about the long advocated change to the effect that the receipts of the exhibition belong to the society, has met with unqualified success. The further supervision of the exhibitions by the society's secretary is another step in the right direction. The surplus receipts from this and other sources could well go toward the maintenance of our required headquarters. On account of the value of these exhibitions to the trade at large it does seem advisable that our conventions should be held in cities of large population. The trade exhibition is of more interest to the average attendant than any other feature of our convention, and its development should be encouraged by every means in our power.

The affiliation of all horticultural societies and florists' clubs would go far toward strengthening the hands of the gentlemen composing that committee, inasmuch as in numbers there is strength. The work this committee is called upon to handle is mainly of a nature which brings it into contention with great interests, such as the railroads, the express companies, the various national and state legislative bodies, as also the Interstate Commerce Commission. From this it will readily be seen that when this committee succeeds in winning a decision on a contested case or in obtaining a concession, it is doing great work, not alone for the society, but for the trade at large.

INTEREST SHOULD BE CONTINUOUS.

We should make a strong effort to check the deadness which so often characterizes the society between its annual meetings. A real, live society should have something doing all the time. It should not be like the annual circus which comes to town, pitches its tent, performs for a week and then fades away to remain unheard of and unnoticed for a year to come. Affiliation of societies, committees working on live issues, the national flower show and a progressive secretary always on his mettle and on the move for betterment of the society, will help greatly to remove an apathetic condition which has too often been directed against us in reproach.

For years past our successive presidents have felt called upon to make remarks upon the improvement of floricultural conditions, and I find myself joining in this acclaim with my predecessors, for certainly the development of our product has kept pace with that of all other arts and sciences which tend toward the betterment of the condition of the people of our common country. Within the past ten years there has been a wonderful "back to the land" movement on the part of our wealthy men. Consequently great amounts of money have been spent in the embellishment of estates; this movement has in no way been confined to that class, for we find that the desire is becoming universal on the part of all who own their homes to make their grounds beautiful. Civic improvement is the order of the day everywhere. The demand for the best in horticulture is increasing accordingly. As this added knowledge of plant life is gained it becomes necessary that we keep progressing, furnishing not only better but more diversified stock, meeting present wants yet encouraging the call for more expensive stock.

EXPERIMENTAL STATIONS.

There are valuable educational factors in the working out of experiments in regard to insect pests, diseases of plants, and in solving matters which could not be handled by general horticulturists. As a trade, we are in a position to obtain bulletins, state and federal, practically free of cost, and in fact any information on any reasonable subject when it is asked for of the proper authorities. In the proposed "annual" could be incorporated a list of the experiment stations and the names of the officers to whom to refer for guidance on the various subjects of insect pests, diseases, etc. The society and its members should endeavor to aid the experiment stations in every way in their power, in order that their managements may be provided with sufficient funds that they may be in no way restricted in their researches for practical knowledge. Efforts should also be made to interest the stations in horticultural studies as well as in studies purely agricultural, to which latter they mostly incline.

The national charter granted our S. A. F. and O. H. and signed by President McKinley requires that we maintain permanent headquarters in the city of Washington. We have dodged action on this subject from year to year. It is time that we took it up, got down to business and instituted our home in that city, even though its start be on a most humble scale. Let us begin by making a beginning. We want a home there for our society. With this we should institute a practical school of horticulture for our children and a permanent trial ground for our members. If this convention will take the necessary preliminary steps to establish such a home, this desirable institution can be brought about. What we will, we can do. The permanent headquarters should contain the offices of the secretary of the S. A. F.; our executive board meetings can be held there; it could be made the rallying point of horticulturists; and, in fact, the institution can be so handled as to create an added attraction to that Mecca of America—the city of Washington. Possessing such an institution, the society would take on additional vigor; it would add to its name and to its reputation, and would then be in a position to assert itself and its influence. There are many things this society should do, but none more important. If this matter is placed in the hands of an able committee at this present convention, I have no doubt that it will find ways and means to make an early start.

To still further advance the cause of horticulture, the subject of florists' publicity is expected to be brought before this meeting. We have many important subjects before us, none much more important than this. I simply allude to the subject in order that not one of you be absent when the matter is brought up for discussion. It is one which appeals to your pocketbooks in that it is desired to plan ways and means whereby a much greater interest in our business may be stimulated, to the end that a still greater volume of business may be transacted. It is proposed to do this through co-operation, and I sincerely trust that a practical method of working out this idea will be evolved. For instance, if through publicity we could influence every man on the street to wear a boutonniere and every lady a corsage bouquet, can any one figure just how many cut flowers would be required daily for this one particular custom?

OVERHEAD COSTS.

Overhead costs is a subject which must appeal to us all. How many of our members have put into practice a system whereby they can tell, weekly or monthly, just what their overhead expenses amount to in actual money? There is no point more vital to success in any business than the possession of this knowledge. Houses which understand fully their overhead costs seldom go into bankruptcy; on the other hand, they will generally be found among the more prosperous of our country's establishments. By overhead costs I refer to the thousand and one expenses of a business which, being indirect, are all too often lost sight of when making a price. These overhead expenses comprise every detail of cost which is responsible for the ability to produce your goods but which do not appear as direct expenses; for instance, rent, coal, original cost of building and ordinary wear and tear on same, the keeping of horses and wagons or automobiles, advertising, taxes and insurance, necessary travel, the salaries paid to all non-producers and petty expenses. In clearer words, overhead expenses consist of the non-productive factors in a business, all of which, however, have to be reckoned with and provided for in making a scale of charges for your product.

I would like to see a committee appointed on overhead costs, to be directed to present a report at the 1913 convention, with such figures and data as they could bring to bear on this progressive subject. When a man in business has the certainty that the price at which he is selling his stock includes all the indirect charges incidental to its production, he can feel that his business is being run at a profit, but with these factors unknown, it must be a case of "hit or miss." With the establishment of the cost system, we will soon be made acquainted with those stocks we are handling on which we are making a profit and those on which we do not make a profit, and as the tendency of modern business is to throw out everything on which it is impossible to make money, this knowledge, once fixed, will certainly be of untold value to all of us who lack that knowledge, and who set a price on their goods, not because they know it will pay them, but because of the fact that others are selling the same stock at an approximate price. This committee, if agreed upon, should have an appropriation of $100 for advice from experts as to how to correctly take up the consideration of the subject.

The chairman of the National Flower Show committee will make his report at this meeting, and from what we have gathered, the same will contain much cheering information, prospects being exceedingly bright for a first class exhibition. Charles H. Totty, its chairman, having visited the great International Exhibition at London which took place toward the close of last May, has undoubtedly gathered together many pointers which will be of service to him in handling our own American enterprise. Now that a permanent flower show committee is in operation, it should not be too much to expect that before many years have rolled around this society will be enabled to successfully hold a flower show annually.

I have elsewhere mentioned that the publication of an annual by this society would be of practical value to our membership. This annual could contain, in addition to the report of the proceedings as now published annually, much material of trade value and interest. If all our national societies affiliated, the one publication might embrace the proceedings of all the societies. Additionally, could be given all the facts and data of horticultural progress from year to year, with condensed reports of the various exhibitions taking place during the year, together with fixtures for the year following. It should contain a list of American novelties seeing the light during the year and the varieties certificated by the various societies. It would necessarily have to be a progressive book; that is to say, built on the idea of a calendar, increasing in value from year to year as the data became available. The actual value of such a book would depend, in a great measure, upon the one into whose hands it would be entrusted for publication. The cost of the work would, I believe, be met in considerable part through advertising patronage.

Inasmuch as both our great political parties now realize the fact that parcel post must become an established institution of the United States, the work which now remains is for us to assist other organized bodies in the endeavor to bring about a genuine parcel post and not a "make believe"—a parcel post institution that will be of advantage to the business men of the country, as well as to the masses, and not one that will work into the hands of the organized express or other interests. The subject is one which demands the closest attention, and I will not attempt to go into details nor advocate the passage of any particular measure now before congress or the senate, as, of the several bills now before one body or the other, there are none which are to be recommended in their entirety. I would counsel all our members to watch their daily and trade papers most carefully, and to take such action as may be recommended by these journals, assisted by their own good common sense. In this connection, it has been proven, without doubt, that if you write your congressman and senators, with conviction, a letter expressing politely but forcibly the result of your own thought in the matter, it will be given attention. My recommendation is that we pass a resolution on this floor, calling for the enactment of a parcel post bill which will give us the same low rates and privileges as to parcel post as are now being enjoyed by the people of nearly every European country. We cannot attempt to make rates, but we can protest against the charges being made so high as to render the institution of parcel post a farce.

THE TRADE PAPERS' PART.

To our trade press much is due for the advancement of horticulture in the twenty years that have passed, and for the unremitting efforts of the directors of these publications to keep us in the vanguard of events should our utmost thanks be expressed. As conducted, they keep us apprised of everything that is going on in our line throughout the entire country, often obtaining their news at great expense. Added to their educational side, they conduct business for us at extremely small returns to themselves; in fact, they act as brokers, spending the money received for advertising in efforts to improve their service to their subscribers. We have no figures showing the amount of money which changes hands as a result of the advertising contained in the columns of our trade papers, but it certainly must run up into several millions of dollars a year. The great advantage which our trade possesses over other lines of business in its use of these papers lies in the fact that it obtains direct returns from its advertising as against the very indirect and sometimes wholly unsatisfactory returns obtained by the general advertiser who may spend thousands of dollars in a campaign of education of the people, where it is only necessary for us to spend our tens.

Convention sports result in decided pleasure to a great portion of those who attend. Were it not for the sports the probabilities are that attendance at our meetings would be considerably reduced in number. It is also true that "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy." To the sports and games there can be no objection, but these events should be arranged so as not to interfere whatsoever with the business program. For that reason, I would urge that all sports take place on the fourth day of the convention, our day of recreation. All business having been transacted, everyone could enjoy the games, whether it be a bowling match, shooting, or the races, and so on, and I believe each and every member would appreciate the privilege of being able to attend. As the sports program is now conducted, many of us cannot be present on account of other duties.

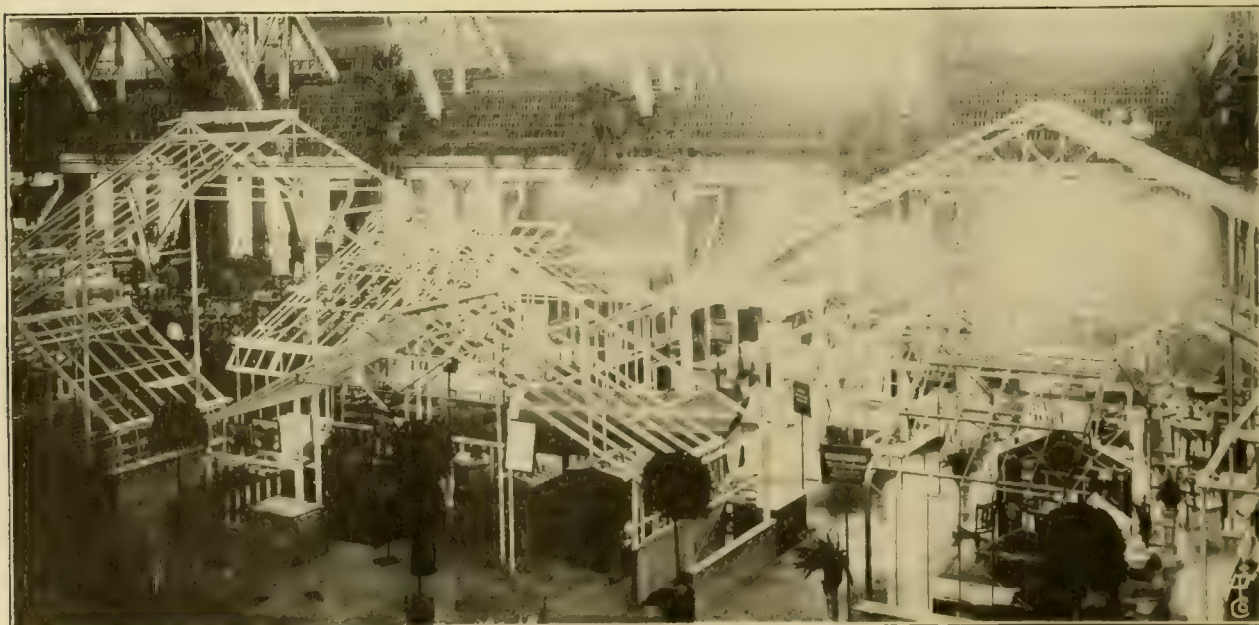

I am proud to be your presiding officer this year. Let us come together during this meeting to the material benefit of ourselves and of all mankind, so that when we leave this wonderful city we may return home rejoicing in the knowledge gained, the friendships renewed and the new ones made, which will cement us in stronger bonds to the ends of our lives. Generosity of thought and action is an attribute of the florist, because we live close to nature, and no body of men and women anywhere stands more ready to extend a helping hand to a brother or sister in trouble. We are becoming more broad minded as we mingle with the world, more united for progress and the general distribution of our discoveries in order that our fellow tradesmen may be benefited.

Let us strive to increase the love of flowers universally not only for our own selfish or money making purpose, but for the elevation of mankind. Neither should we confine our efforts to our own country, but let us make use of them freely wherever we can extend our cult from country to country the world over, in the endeavor to bring about the peace and good will which will ultimately reign throughout the world and bring us into one brotherhood of communion and fellowship. I thank you yet again for your attention and your welcome.

Secretary and Treasurer Report.

Secretary John Young, of New York City, read his report, showing the financial operations of his office, and also the condition of the membership, trade exhibition, plant registration, medals awarded during year, new members admitted, members deceased during the year, acknowledgments to trade press for courtesies, etc. The report showed that since January 1, 1912, to August 15, there were added to the membership list 135 annual and 31 life members. The present trade exhibition he stated surpassed anything of the kind heretofore attempted, and the net receipts to the S. A. F. will probably double those of the Baltimore convention. The report contained a list of those members who have sent in names of new members during the year.

GENERAL VIEW OF THE EXHIBITION HALL AT THE S. A. F. CONVENTION, CHICAGO, AUGUST 20-23, 1912.

Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, N. Y., submitted his report as treasurer, showing a healthy condition of the finances and satisfactorily and fully accounting for all moneys in his hands. The report was accepted.

William F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F., presented his report, recounting his work in appearing before the house committee on post offices and post roads, and advocating a parcel post bill for the merchants of the United States at least as good as that accorded to other nations, and also in appearing before the sub-committee of the senate committee on post roads, of which Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., is chairman. He had also had a conference with Speaker Clark of the house of representatives, whom he had found very courteous and apparently favorable to the providing of better postal facilities for the citizens of the United States.

Secretary Young's Report.

The books and other properties pertaining to the secretary's office were turned over by the outgoing secretary early in January. The books were all in good order and accompanied by an inventory covering the property of the society that is in the possession of the secretary.

MEMBERSHIP.

From January 1, 1912, to August 15, 1912, there has been added to the list the names of 135 annual members and 31 life members. Following the recommendations of the board of directors, a circular letter was sent to each name in the Florists' Directory, setting forth the advantages of being a member of this society. With this letter was enclosed a copy of the official program of this meeting and an invitation from the Chicago Trades committee to attend this convention; also an application blank. Very gratifying results are being shown.

CONDITION OF THE FINANCES.

The finances are in fair condition. The permanent or life membership fund, since the last convention, has been increased by the sum of $1,425. The fees for new members amounted to $390. The permanent fund has reached the sum of $11,125.15.

TRADE EXHIBITION.

The trade exhibition held at the time of the convention is growing in importance each year. At Baltimore the receipts of this adjunct, managed by Mack Richmond, were $3,808.05 and the expenditures $1,550.31, the net proceeds turned into the permanent fund of the society being $2,258.19. The present trade exhibition has surpassed anything of the kind ever attempted, and the net proceeds should almost double those of the Baltimore convention. It will be well for the members to pause and think of the varied interests and high quality of the exhibits in the main hall. The secretary finds that much of the printed matter and material purchased for use at this exhibition can be saved and used again next year. Without question many economies can be practiced for the next convention.

TRANSPORTATION.

Application for rates was made to all the passenger associations, and refused. They will pay no attention to such requests unless an attendance of 1,000 is guaranteed.

PLANT REGISTRATION.

The following plants have been registered since the last convention:

No. 472—September 21, 1911, Begonia, "Feastii Bunchii," by Lloyd C. Bunch, Fredonia, Kansas.

No. 489—March 9, 1912, Gladiolus, "American Wonder," by H. W. Koerner, Milwaukee, Wis. No. 490—March 9, 1912, Gladiolus, "American Giant," by H. W. Koerner, Milwaukee, Wis.

No. 493—April 27, 1912, Fern, "Pteris Cretica Andersonii," by J. F. Anderson, Short Hills, N. J.

MEDALS.

The following medals were awarded during the year: Silver Medal—F. Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette, Ind., for carnation "Rosette," offered through the American Carnation Society at its annual meeting held in Detroit. Bronze Medal—E. G. Hill & Co., Richmond, Ind., for carnation "Commodore," offered through the American Carnation Society, at Detroit. Silver Medal—J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, Ohio, for Begonia "Westwood," offered through the Cincinnati Florists' Society at their exhibition in Cincinnati, November, 1911. Bronze Medal—R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, Ohio, for carnation "President J. A. Valentine," offered through the Cincinnati Florists' Society at their exhibition held in Cincinnati, November, 1911. There were also three silver and three bronze medals offered at the International Exposition in London for plants and flowers of American origin. The secretary has not yet been notified to whom these medals were awarded.

NEW MEMBERS.

Since the first of January, 1912, the following have sent in one or more names for membership: W. P. Patterson, Jr., state vice-president Alabama, 3; H. E. Philpot, state vice-president Winnipeg, Canada, 4; Charles P. Dudley, state vice president West Virginia, 1; Florists' Telegraph Delivery, 1; Aug. Pohlman, vice-president, S. A. F., 1; President R. Vincent, Jr., life member, 1; President R. Vincent, Jr., annual member, 1; J. G. Esler (Hail Ass'n), 1; G. W. Bartholomew, 1; Dan MacRorie, state vice-president California, North, life members, 6, annual members, 35; Edw. Amerpohl, 1; Frank H. Traendly, life members, 5; C. A. Moss, vice-president South Carolina, 1; F. H. Weber, state vice-president Missouri, 5; F. Lautenschlager, state vice-president Illinois, North, life member, 1, annual members, 4; Wm. F. Kasting, annual member, 1; Jno. Evans, life member, 1; H. G. Berning, annual member, 1; J. E. Matthewson, state vice-president Wisconsin, 1;

Aug. R. Baumer, state vice-president Kentucky, 2; Nic Zweifel, state vice president Wisconsin, South, 1; J. F. Amman, state vice-president Illinois, South, 1; A. T. Pyfer, 1; J. R. Bather, 1; W. N. Rudd, 1; M. Barker, 8; Jean F. Huss, 1; A. L. Miller, state vice-president, New York, East, 1; Vaughan's Seed Store, 1; I. Bertermann, state vice-president Indiana, 1; C. E. Critchell, state vice-president Ohio, 2.

NECROLOGY.

Since the last convention the following members have died:

E. A. Mosely.
I. L. Powell
Fred Ehret.
C. A. Juengel.
J. Labo.
J. Pettigrew.
J. F. Wilcox.
J. R. Freeman.
W. H. Moon.
Frank Piorkovski.
Wm. Bester.
Charles Knopf.
W. R. Smith, ex-president and father of the charter of the society.

TRADE PRESS.

The trade press continues to publish all items of interest sent from the secretary's office and publishes all reports of the proceedings of the society; also to furnish complimentary copies of their publications for the use of the secretary.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE.

The work of the secretary has been very interesting and fascinating. I desire to thank publicly the officers and members of the society who have assisted me at all times with their advice and good council, which has made the work so much lighter and pleasant.

Treasurer Kasting's Report.

The report of Treasurer William F. Kasting showed the society to be in a good condition financially. The figures are as follows:

GENERAL FUND.

The balance on hand January 15, 1912, $9,308.07; the receipts to August 1 were $3,351.58. The disbursements were $3,056.63, leaving a balance of $9,603.02, which is invested in various banks specifically stated in the report.

PERMANENT FUNDS.

The permanent fund receipts to August 1 were $1,112.57, making a balance of $13,050.43 and a grand total of the two funds of $22,653.45.

Wm. F. Gude's Report.

Mr. Gude's report in full, which was accepted as read, was as follows:

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:

During the past year I appeared before the committee on post offices and post roads of the house of representatives several times, advocating a parcel post bill for the merchants of the United States at least as good as that accorded other nations. I also appeared before the sub-committee of the senate committee on post roads, of which Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., is chairman. I made the case as clear as I could on behalf of this society, and kindred organizations, that we wanted a parcels post that would give the greatest good to the greatest number. I have followed up my interviews by letters directed to members of the committees, and also through interviews with the secretary of the Washington chamber of commerce, Thomas Grant, who assisted me very materially in my interviews in the house and senate. I also had a conference with Speaker Clark, who was very courteous and was apparently very much in favor of securing better postal facilities for the citizens of the United States.

The present bill before congress known as the Bourne bill, which passed the senate, contains an objectionable clause in that it might seriously interfere with the seed trade of the United States. I was advised last week that it could never pass the house in its present shape, and the prospects are better today than they ever have been for securing parcels post legislation commensurate with the mail order business of the United States.

On Sunday morning, July 7, the floral world was shocked by the announcement of the death of our venerable friend, Wm. R. Smith, the father of our charter, who passed away at an early hour in his cottage at the Botanic Gardens, where he had lived for more than sixty years. The end came peacefully after an illness of eight months. The sad duty of making the final arrangements for the burial services and interment in Rock Creek cemetery was delegated to me, as it was the wish of Wm. R. Smith, often expressed while living, that I should look after this for him. I immediately telegraphed the president of this society as well as all past presidents. The president, Richard Vincent, Jr., and Past President Robt. Craig and Past President F. R. Pierson attended the funeral services. Telegrams and letters of sympathy also were received from nearly all past presidents.

The funeral services were held from the Scottish Rite Cathedral, Tuesday afternoon, July 9, at 3 p. m. The body was laid to final rest in Rock Creek cemetery with Masonic honors. A number of members as well as ex-presidents of this society were present. Mr. Smith while living often expressed the desire that this society should have a suitable home at the national capital, and I indulge the hope that at this meeting a committee may be appointed to look into the advisability of establishing a permanent home at the national capital, for the S. A. F. and O. H., which might be made a suitable memorial to our late honored member.

WM. F. GUDE,

Representative S. A. F.

At a later stage of the proceedings Mr. Gude asked leave and was given unanimous consent to present the following resolution, which was adopted by unanimous vote, the convention rising to evince their deep reverence for the memory of Past President William R. Smith:

The Smith Resolutions.

Whereas, The late William R. Smith, the father of our charter, an honored member of this organization, was for the greater part of his life a resident of the national capital, where he devoted the best efforts of his noble mind to the uplifting of the florists' calling, and for the benefit of humanity, and

Whereas, It is proposed to erect a monument to his memory in the nation's capital; therefore be it

Resolved, That the president of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists appoint a committee of five members who shall consider the question of erecting a memorial in Washington, D. C., commensurate with the magnanimous and self-sacrificing life of the late William R. Smith, and to serve as a fitting inspiration to future generations to emulate his great work as a horticulturist; and be it further Resolved, That said committee report within the week of this convention.

Benjamin Hammond, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., chairman of the committee on school gardens, read the report of that committee.

Tuesday Afternoon Session.

The afternoon session Tuesday was called to order by President Vincent. Wm. Gourlay, assistant to the general manager of the American Express Company, addressed the convention briefly on the subject of express facilities for florists, and assured the convention that his company was desirous of according all possible accommodations in the way of prompt collections and deliveries, and forwarding on special trains in case of funerals or weddings when regular trains did not fit the case. They keep special wagons on call at all times and would try properly to handle this class of business, he said. He advised that packages intended for weddings and funerals be so marked as to facilitate attention to them. His company will co-operate in all ways possible to insure prompt service. He believed that the American Express Company took as good care of the florists as they did of any others, if not a little better, and would send shipments in care of baggage master or conductor of trains whenever necessary. They were prepared to handle the business at any hour of the day. He cautioned shippers to be sure to send specific instructions as to the disposition to be made with all c. o. d. shipments in case of their being refused. As to rates, he believed that they were at present satisfactory on cut flowers and plants and he would be pleased to answer any inquiries.

Mr. Gourlay was asked whether it was true that the express companies proposed to withdraw their present rates on plants, etc., and he replied that he did not believe this to be the case; at any rate he had had no such intimation. Mr. Gude stated that he was glad to announce that the American Express Co. had established an agency at Washington, D. C., but wanted to know why it was that Washington shippers had so much trouble to secure quick deliveries or forwarding, on other than regular trains, packages of flowers, etc., destined to points south, stating that on application for forwarding such shipments on other than express trains this accommodation had been refused by the express companies on the ground that it was contrary to the regulations of the Interstate Commerce Commission. He asked Mr. Gourlay if the Interstate Commerce Commission had made any such ruling. Mr. Gourlay replied that he knew of no such regulation, and so far as he knew there is no reason why the express companies should decline to forward by baggage master on that account, that there could be absolutely no interference with the granting of such accommodations so far as the Interstate Commerce Commission was concerned.

On motion of Mr. Dorner, a vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Gourlay for his talk. Pursuant to the recommendation of the executive committee, the reports of the botanist, Prof. A. C. Bell; the pathologist, Prof. H. H. Whetzel, and the entomologist, Prof. Thos. B. Symons, were considered read and ordered incorporated in the proceedings.

The National Flower Show.

Charles H. Totty, of Madison, N. J., chairman of the committee on the National Flower Show, submitted the report of that committee, recounting the preliminaries which led up to the invitation being extended by the New York Florists' Club to the S. A. F. to hold a flower show in New York City in the spring of 1913, the invitation being accepted and the committee appointed to conduct the show being W. N. Rudd, W. A. Manda, Thos. Roland, W. P. Craig and J. A. Valentine. This committee, after satisfying themselves of the expediency and propriety of so doing, had closed a contract with the International Exposition Co. of New York City. The co-operation of the American Rose Society, the American Carnation Society, and other subsidiary societies had been solicited and certain concessions made them, and it was confidently expected that they would all co-operate and bring to the show a considerable quantity of special premiums on their own account in addition to what had been underwritten for them. The National Association of Gardeners and members of other local horticultural societies of New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, have pledged their support, and the outlook for the Third International Flower Show is now very bright.

Preliminary schedules have been prepared and mailed to every member of the S. A. F., and the final schedules will be ready just as soon as the list of prizes is received from the various societies participating. The following have been named as a local committee: F. H. Traendly, Walter F. Sheridan, Wm. H. Duckham, Harry A. Bunyard and Jos. A. Manda. This committee held meetings every week last spring until everything was well organized and under way. Cash contributions have been received from a number of wealthy people in New York and vicinity interested in the show, and from quite a number of commercial men who have shown much interest and are offering special premiums. From these two sources there has been received nearly $3,000, and besides this the following cups and medals have been promised: Four silver cups, two gold medals, six silver medals, five bronze medals and $15 worth of bulbs. Other prizes will be offered by subordinate societies not yet reported.

Each society may appoint its own judges for its section, men familiar with the product and whose judgment can be relied upon as accurate. The flower show committee feels that each society should be allowed wide latitude in its own department, and with every one working harmoniously to the same end the third International Flower Show should be by far the greatest yet held, and prove a valuable aid in affiliating the different societies with the S. A. F., besides benefiting every florist in the land. Co-operation is the life of modern business, and these exhibitions will eventually become so great a factor in the florists' industry that no live florist can afford to ignore them or be not represented. Every member is urged to feel a direct personal interest in this show. A further encouraging sign is the interest being taken by foreign exhibitors. Every man who has anything to sell the public will find it to his advantage to be represented by taking as much space as he can and exhibiting in the competitive classes, for New York and its vicinity furnish the greatest buying market of horticultural products in the world today. Further discussion of this matter, if any should be desired, was passed until later to allow time for programme matters to be first disposed of, the report having been taken up out of its regular turn.

Minutes Read and Approved.

The minutes of the executive committee meetings held during the year were now read, and without objection approved. The proposed amendment to Article V of the constitution and by-laws providing that in future the location of the place of annual meeting shall be determined by ballot at the evening session of the first day of the annual convention was now read, and adopted unanimously, on motion of Past President Asmus. A cordial invitation was extended to all visiting members and others to inspect Vaughan's greenhouses at Western Springs and Bassett & Washburn's at Hinsdale, time of trains being announced, leaving Wednesday morning, returning so as to arrive at the Union depot in plenty of time to take the train for Poehlmann Bros.' range at Morton Grove.

The auditing committee was announced as follows: Walter F. Sheridan, W. W. Coles, P. Welsh, Harry Balsley and Wm. Duckham. Tellers of election as follows: Robt. L. Graham, Fred H. Meinhardt, C. H. Maynard, I. Hendrickson and C. E. Critchell. The convention now adjourned to 3 p. m.

The Next Meeting.

Invitations for the next place of annual meeting was the next order of business. A letter from the St. Louis convention bureau was read by Secretary Young. W. A. Manda nominated Atlantic City, N. J., and Wm. F. Kasting nominated Saratoga, N. Y. A question being raised as to whether the convention could pass upon the matter legally until the evening session, the convention now adjourned until 4:15 p. m., when consideration of this matter was resumed. Mr. Manda renewed his nomination of Atlantic City. E. G. Asmus called attention to the fact that the National Flower Show to be held in New York City in March would call for support from that section largely and it would not be best to hold the convention at so near a point so closely following the show. He believed it would be detrimental to the convention and the show and would detract from the support accorded one or the other by exhibitors. He further believed that there were too many counter attractions at Atlantic City. John Westcott called attention to the difficulty of securing hotel accommodations at Atlantic City during the height of the hot season, and if it had to come in that neighborhood he would prefer it to come to Philadelphia, since the arrangements would naturally fall upon the Philadelphians anyhow, which they had always been willing to do to the best of their ability, but he did not favor Atlantic City.

Mr. Kasting believed that the twin cities of Minneapolis and St. Paul would be better for the interests of the S. A. F. and he seconded the nomination of Minneapolis, Minn., for next annual meeting. Mr. Ebel, who at first had seconded Mr. Manda's nomination of Atlantic City, now withdrew his second, believing that it would not be practicable to get proper accommodation from Chas. C. Moore, president of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, San Francisco, advising that he had delegated Angelo J. Rossi, D. MacRorie and H. Plath of San Francisco, Calif., to appear before the S. A. F. convention at Chicago as the representatives of the president of the Panama-Pacific International Exposition to extend in his name to the members of the S. A. F. an invitation on behalf of the exposition, to hold the 1915 convention and asking for them the courtesy of a hearing. Mr. Kasting moved that the privilege of the floor be at this time accorded Mr. Rossi to present the invitation, and the motion was seconded and carried unanimously.

Mr. Rossi addressed the convention briefly, extending a cordial invitation to hold the 1915 convention in his city, and presenting also a formal invitation 1915 conventions at San Francisco, and lastly he extended an invitation from the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society, assuring the convention that nothing would be left undone by them to render the convention most enjoyable. He recounted the climatic, scenic and other advantages of the state of California, and told of the 1,300 San Francisco hotels all ready to furnish first-class accommodations. He felt embarrassed in praising California, he said, because he was a native born Californian, but he hoped that some of the members present from other states would relieve him from this embarrassment by seconding the invitation and backing it up with a statement of the favorable conditions in his state. Mr. Kasting came nobly to the rescue, and confirmed all that Mr. Rossi had said, and averred that he believed the society could afford to treat itself to the luxury of a California trip at least upon this extraordinary occasion. He therefore moved that it be the sense of the convention that the 1915 convention be held at San Francisco, Calif. The motion carried unanimously.

On motion of Mr. Simmons it was voted that the reports of various state vice-presidents be considered as read, and incorporated in the regular printed proceedings of the convention. On motion the convention now adjourned to 8 p. m., to hold a reception to President Vincent at the Auditorium Hotel, the next regular session of the convention opening at 10 a. m. Wednesday, at the Coliseum.

President's Reception.

The president's reception at the Auditorium hotel on Tuesday evening was very well attended and everyone present had a most enjoyable time. The Chicago Florists' Club quartette rendered several fine selections and was heartily applauded at the conclusion of each. Vice-President Duncan A. Robertson, of the Chicago Florists' Club, assisted by Chas. W. McKellar, Fred Lautenschlager and S. A. Jamieson, had all the arrangements in charge.

Wednesday's Proceedings.

At the opening session the committee on president's address presented its report.

tions at Atlantic City during August, and also that the National Flower Show held at New York would make the selection of Atlantic City not expedient. This left in nomination only Minneapolis, and that city was, on motion of Mr. Bunyard, selected as the 1913 convention city, the secretary so casting the ballot.

AMENDMENTS LAID ON TABLE.

E. G. Hill suggested that tents might be purchased to save hall rent, when holding the conventions hereafter. Certain proposed amendments were now taken up and discussed at some length, and after sundry parliamentary points had been raised and various views presented, it was voted, on motion of Mr. Manda, to lay on the table until next year the amendments providing for changing the secretary's office from elective to appointive, and dropping the secretary from membership on the executive committee. The proposed amendment to article V, section 5, also received the same disposition.

As a substitute motion for the resolution offered to change the records of the proceedings of the society for the year 1909 in convention at Cincinnati, Ohio, the following was adopted on motion of P. O'Mara: That no man shall be known as a pioneer member unless he was a member of the Society of American Florists in 1885 and paid S. A. F. dues for twenty-five consecutive years from that date.

SAN FRANCISCO IN 1915.

Secretary Young read a communication from the president and directors of the Panama-Pacific Universal Exposition, handsomely engrossed on parchment; also an invitation from Felton Taylor, secretary of the San Francisco Convention League, to the same effect. Mr. Rossi stated that up to date some 160 fraternal and commercial organizations had signified their intention of holding Report on President's Address.

Your committee on the president's address endorses President Vincent's suggestion that more weight would be given to the recommendations if the executive board of the members of this society were more fully advised concerning the arguments advanced in the meetings of the board and to that end would recommend that a brief of such arguments should be given to the trade papers when the report of the board meetings is handed out.

We recommend that the president be authorized to appoint a committee to consider the question of affiliation with horticultural societies and florists' clubs, such committee to report at the next annual convention and we believe that such a report would prove an interesting topic for discussion. We agree with the president's strong endorsement of the interesting trade exhibit and we believe that space rates should be carefully considered for each convention, to the end that our exhibit be not at any time embarrassed by excessive expenses.

We believe that this society is not giving sufficient attention to the tariff and legislative section of our public work, and we believe that five hundred dollars or more should be appropriated for legal services and expenses to watch and guard our interests along these lines—this would also apply to postal reforms.

While appreciating the desirability of permanent headquarters and a school of horticulture, we feel that this society is not yet in a position to undertake such expensive enterprises.

We heartily approve the suggestion that a committee be appointed to investigate and report upon the subject of overhead costs, with such an appropriation as may be needed, not exceeding one hundred dollars.

A careful report might save scores of our younger members from bankruptcy and be a benefit to all our members by showing the danger of selling stocks for less than cost. Respectfully submitted,

J. A. VALENTINE, OTTO THILOW, JOHN ESLER, J. C. VAUGHAN, P. WELCH, Committee.

L. W. C. Tuthill then read his excellent paper on "Advertising, Some Wrongs to Make Right," which was well received by the large audience.

The nomination of officers being next in order, Vice-President August Pochmann nominated J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, Mass., and J. A. Valentine nominated Judge Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind.

For vice-president, Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn., was nominated by Wm. J. Stewart

For secretary, John Young, New York, was nominated by Geo. Asmus.

For treasurer, Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, N. Y., was nominated by W. N. Rudd.

President Vincent announced the appointment of committees as follows:

Committee on Wm. R. Smith Memorial—W. F. Gude; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, J. A. Valentine, Harry Papworth, and R. Vincent, with power to add to the committee from every state in the Union.

Committee on Overhead Costs—Wallace R. Pierson, A. T. De La Mare and C. E. Critchell.

Committee on Local Societies—J. F. Ammann, J. Otto Thilow and Joseph A. Manda.

Committee on Publicity—Irwin Bertermann, Nic Zweifel, Albert M. Herr and E. A. Scribner.

F. C. W. Brown's Lecture.

One of the most interesting features of the convention to the retail florist was the illustrated lecture of F. C. W. Brown on the arrangement of cut flowers. Mr. Brown's ability as an artist in floral arrangement is well known, he having had a large experience in Canada and with the best houses of the United States. He is also a fine photographer and this combination enabled him to give to the convention such results as have seldom if ever been seen before.

His photographs were thrown on the screen with a dissolving lantern, the films were colored true to nature and their arrangement was most artistic. His lecture was full of very instructive points, showing, first, designs and arrangements of cut flowers that were badly put together and why, and these views would dissolve into more perfect ones and finally they were seen presenting an artistic finish.

A bride's shower bunch was a dream and other loose arrangements showed the master hand in their simple construction. Simplicity and the avoidance of crowding too many flowers together was particularly emphasized. The use and abuse of ribbons was brought out in design work and also in decorating plant and flower baskets. In fact, the whole lecture was very instructive, completely covering the ground of floral arrangements. His audience filled the hall and showed their appreciation by the very hearty applause he was given at the close of his address.

for president, withdrew in favor of Mr. Farquhar, deeming it best that the society be headed by an eastern man for the next year.

The Exhibition.

The Coliseum was an ideal place to stage the exhibits, its immense floor area allowing an equal point of vantage to all. There were no gallery spaces, no dark corners, no stairs to climb, and there was splendid light and air during the day and grand illumination at night.

The gallery railing was decorated with wild smilax and palm leaves. Bay trees were stood along the aisles and in spaces where they would add a decorative effect. The Chicago park system arranged several large groups of palms and ornamental plants down the center of the hall, together with two large beds of scarlet geraniums and one of scarlet cannas, which added a brilliant color effect. The large displays of gladioli made by a number of exhibitors also presented a beautiful appearance with their masses of color.

The exhibits of well-grown palms, ferns and other foliage plants, samples of the stock offered for sale by growers from various parts of the country, were exceptionally fine and gained the admiration of many visitors, who did more than admire, judging from the way the orders were being given. The florists' supply men vied with each other in their displays and the extent of some of the stocks and the care taken in their arrangement showed how important they regarded this opportunity of meeting the trade. The greenhouse construction interests had also gone to much trouble and expense in erecting sections of large and small houses, showing details of construction of every part, ventilating, eaves, gutters, sills; in fact, every point of interest seemed to be brought out.

WASHINGTON PARK, CHICAGO.

Election of Officers.

The election of officers was held Thursday morning and resulted in the choice of J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, Mass., for president, and Theodore Wirth, Minneapolis, Minn., for vice-president. Secretary John Young and Treasurer William F. Kasting were both continued in office. W. J. Vesey, of Ft. Wayne, Ind., also a candidate

Heating was also a feature, and all sorts of boilers, from one that would heat 50,000 feet down to the smallest size, were to be seen. Greenhouse benches of pecky cypress with iron frames, and others of the indestructible cement were of great interest. Watering systems with pumps and pressure appliances, as well as a good supply of hose by the rubber men, were seen in elaborately decorated booths. The pot and jardiniere men made large exhibits, from the standard greenhouse staples to the most elegantly formed and colored vases and pedestals for the decoration of the house.

Ice machines for cooling and refrigerators that would fit in with the fixtures of the best stores showed the growth of the business. Greenhouse paints, putty, oils and all wood and iron preservatives had a section. Insecticides and spraying machines, all kinds of fertilizers and plant foods were offered. The bulb men displayed quantities of freshly imported stock; in fact, there was scarcely a standard stock of any kind that was not to be found at this great exhibition, which is probably the best arranged and most complete of any ever held by the society. The following is a full list of the exhibitors:

The Visit to Pochlmann's.

When the eleven cars of florists, numbering some 455, were assembled at the station awaiting the arrival of the train to take them back to Chicago after their inspection of the magnificent Pochlmann plant, where they had been so well entertained, Mr. Patrick O'Mara, of Jersey City, a life member of the S. A. F., mounted a convenient box and invited attention. He said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I am sure you will all agree with me that this has been a most auspicious occasion. You will all agree with me that we have had a delightful visit to this delightful suburb of Chicago, and that we have seen a greenhouse plant which is not eclipsed anywhere in this world. It has been my privilege to have seen recently some of the largest plants in Europe, particularly that of the Rockford place in North London, and let me tell you candidly, and I say it with the pride of an American, that the plant we have visited today is second to none in this world. We have received from the Pochlmann brothers a welcome and a hospitality and an inspiration that we shall all carry away and remember for many years. Ladies and gentlemen, I ask you for three cheers and a tiger for the Pochlmann brothers."

The cheers were given with a will, after which J. K. M. L. Farquhar, of Boston, nominee for president of the S. A. F., was called on for a speech, and said: "Ladies and gentlemen, I have been requested by the secretary of the Minneapolis Florists' Club, to which city we are to go for our annual convention next year, to introduce Mr. Dysinger, of the Minneapolis Florists' Club."

S. D. Dysinger, of Holm & Olson, Inc., St. Paul, Minn., said: "I thank you for the compliment, Mr. Farquhar, of being called upon, but I am not of Minneapolis, I am of St. Paul; yet I am of the Twin Cities, and we want every florist here to meet us in Minneapolis next year. We will try to give you just as good a time as possible. We will not say we will give you as good a time as have the Pochlmann Bros., but we will do our very best. So all of you come to Minneapolis and bring your friends along."

Mr. Farquhar now introduced August Pochlmann, vice-president of the S. A. F., and one of the firm which had been the hosts of the afternoon, whom he invited to address the gathering.

Mr. Pochlmann said: "Ladies and gentlemen, fellow members of the Society of American Florists, it gives me great pleasure to tell you how glad I am to see so large a crowd and how glad I am that you availed yourselves of our invitation to come out here. It is fortunate that we had a nice day to go with it. I hardly expected quite as large a crowd. [Laughter.] I told the caterer that we expected from four to six hundred, but in my heart I felt as though there might be only two hundred. It was all guess-work. If I had known that as large a number would have come out I think we would have made better provisions to take care of you. The service was not all that we should have liked to have had it. [A voice: "It was all right."]

"I hope when you depart from Morton Grove that you will go back feeling amply repaid for your visit out here. I know that when I go to other greenhouses I am always able to take home something that will make my trip pay, and I feel that many of you will go home feeling repaid for your time spent with us today."

"There is one thing I would like to say which may be of importance, and that is that in our society we should try to maintain a friendly feeling at all times; we should not have one man get up and try to tear another man's reputation to pieces. We are not in the political game, we are not a political society, and we should not let politics mar our harmonious relations as members of this society. As soon as politics enters a society factional feeling is aroused which we at all times should try and avoid, that we may work in harmony as we three brothers have done here. [A voice: "See the results."]

"We three boys started twenty-two years ago with practically nothing. We heated our small plant with stove pipes. We had a brick boiler under each bench. We would never have succeeded as we have if we had not stuck together, always each for all and all for each. Always work for one another. While working for yourself work also for the interest of your partners. In the same way this Society of American Florists should work with the interest of all of its members constantly in mind. If at any time differences of opinion arise let them be settled quietly aside and not be the occasion for acrimonious discussion in public. Such matters can be settled in a better way, a different way. I would like to see this society grow great and continue to extend its usefulness. We will give it all the support we can, and that is what every member should try to do. We should all work for the advancement of the parent society, and not let politics enter into it. As soon as we do, that means disintegration. As soon as we have factions we have trouble.

"Your executive officers work hard for the society. You have put them in office and they are trying to do what is right for you. They have endeavored during the course of the year to figure out the best thing to do, and to give careful consideration to all the problems that come up. Do not "knock" the men that are trying to do the work for you, trying to advance your society. I believe that is all I have to say; I just wanted to bring this matter before you at this time because there is too much wrangling in our meetings, and I hope it will be avoided in the future." [Applause.]

Ladies' Society of American Florists.

The annual meeting of the Ladies' Society of American Florists was held Wednesday morning, August 21, the president, Mrs. J. W. Boone of Baltimore in the chair, Mrs. George H. Maynard in her place as secretary. The usual order of business was dispatched. The secretary's report showed 261 members, including 34 new members taken in during the year. The report of the treasurer showed between $500 and $600 in the treasury.

Officers elected at this meeting to serve for the ensuing year were the following: Mrs. F. H. Traendly, New York, president; Mrs. Chas. W. McKellar, Chicago, first vice-president; Mrs. George Asmus, Chicago, second vice-president; Mrs. Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa., treasurer; Mrs. George Maynard, Allen, Mich., secretary. An appropriation of $25 was voted, to be in effect annually hereafter, as a prize for the ladies' bowling tournament.

When It Rains.

When it rains, a friendly feelin'
 For the whole wide world comes stealin'
 Through my heart, that sweeps it bare of unkind thought;
 All the worries stop their tensin',
 Ev'ry heartache seems a-cashin',
 And, withn, a miracle of peace is wrought.

When a gentle rain is fallin',
 Kind o' seems there's voices callin'
 From across the borderland of Long Ago;
 On the tin roof loudly hummin',
 On the window panes a-thrummin',
 Saucy rain-elves dancing two-steps, to and fro.
 Jest because the sun ain't shinin',
 Don't get blue or fall a-whinin',
 Softly hum a tune and wait—he'll shine again.
 Life has lots of rainy weather?
 Yes; but take it altogether,
 There's a leetle more of sunshine than of rain.

—Nina Gordon Modglin.

OBITUARY.

Prof. John Craig.

Prof. John Craig, head of the Department of Horticulture in the New York State College of Agriculture of Cornell University at Ithaca, N. Y., and author of many scientific works, died August 12 at Siasconsett, Mass., at the age of 48. Prof. Craig was one of the best known horticulturists in the United States, and was recognized as an authority. He was editor of the National Nurseryman and a frequent contributor to many agricultural magazines. He was born in the Province of Quebec in 1864, and early in life began to show the talent which was later to make him known to the horticulturists of the world. About ten years ago he was called to Cornell to assume the chair he held at his death, succeeding Prof. Liberty Hyde Bailey, who had been elevated to the directorship of the agricultural college. Prof. Craig had previously been professor of horticulture and extension teaching at the Iowa State College, of which institution he was a graduate, and later was horticulturist at the Central Experiment Station at Ottawa, Ont.

He was a fellow of the Royal Horticultural Society and had been secretary of the American Pomological Society and a member of the American Civic League advisory board. He had been in poor health for the last several years but retained his interest in his profession until the last. He was suddenly stricken while in Switzerland two years ago, and though his case was seen to be hopeless, his courage and will power undoubtedly prolonged his life.

Mrs. Mary A. Small.

Mrs. Mary A. Small, widow of the late John H. Small and mother of J. H. Small, Jr., of Washington, D. C., died August 12, aged 80 years. She is survived by two sons and six daughters. Mrs. Small's husband was the founder of the firm of J. H. Small & Sons, florists, and was actively engaged in the trade until his death, since which time the business has been managed by his son, J. H. Small, Jr. Private funeral services were held at the home August 14.

Milwaukee.

ASTERS BRING REASONABLE PRICES.

Plenty of asters are now coming in and they are selling at a reasonable figure. Roses also are plentiful once more and sweet peas also, but of a very poor grade as the continuous rains have made the outdoor stock very soft. Valley has again made its appearance. Plenty of gladioli are arriving daily. Smilax is also a common thing in the market again. It has been very scarce for some time. There are plenty of other greens to fill all orders.

NOTES.

Among those who will attend the convention are F. H. Holton, C. C. Pollworth, R. Leitz, Phil Weil, A. Hoge, W. Kennedy, F. Schmeling, A. Klokner, G. Baerman, E. Oestreicher, Nic Zweifel, W. Helwig, G. Heitman,

The Late Prof. John Craig.

W. Currie and wife, A. Currie, Miss Semmler, W. C. Zimmermann, A. Heath, H. Marquardt, A. Leidiger, W. Maas, F. F. Delventhal, Roy Currie and Gust Rusch.

Miss Anna Holtz, daughter of Gustav Holtz, has returned from her vacation in Indiana, and her sister Ella has gone to spend her vacation at the same place. Gustav Holtz reports business very good.

C. C. Pollworth says business is good during the summer months and the firm has all young stock in. The stock is looking good, especially the Boston ferns which are making a fine growth.

H. Plath, A. J. Rossi and Dan Mac Laren of San Francisco, Calif., were visitors in Milwaukee enroute to the convention. They are boosting their home city for the 1915 convention.

F. H. Holton and wife are spending the week with A. Zender, Rogers Park. They left in their auto on Tuesday.

J. G. Robinson of Waukesha is growing some fine greenhouse asters which are being sold by Gust Rusch & Co.

Miss Grace Pilger, of Currie & Co., is spending her vacation at Appleton, during the Panama Canal Exposition.

Roy Currie is on the job again after a couple of weeks' vacation. He reports a good time.

Chas. Menger is around the market again after being laid up with a sprained arm.

Chas. Guthrod is also back on the job after spending his vacation at St. Louis, Mo.

T. Cassidy has returned after several weeks' vacation at Cedar Lake.

R. Leitz reports business good considering the time of the year.

Holton & Hunkel are receiving some fine roses again. G. R.

Rochester, N. Y.

NO IMPROVEMENT IN TRADE.

Trade conditions are no better since the last report. Heavy rains and cool weather keep flower buyers in-doors and the small amount of funeral work there has been is hardly worth mention. All stock is plentiful and fairly good with asters and gladioli in the lead.

NOTES.

Charles Stow, formerly with the Lang Floral Co., of Dallas, Tex., is now in the employ of H. E. Wilson at the Main street store.

Edwin C. Armbrust has left the employ of J. B. Keller's Sons. He will operate a flower shop in Northampton, Mass. C. G.

A BLOOD-RED pansy of medium size and round in shape has been produced by Prof. Cuthbertson, the English horticulturist. The blotches in the center are very dark and the eye-brows white, while the eye itself is yellow. Prof. Cuthbertson says he was twenty-five years producing the new flower.

Plant Tree Where King's Tree Died.

New York.—A royal English oak tree has been set out in Central park as the official successor of the one planted by the late King Edward VII, when he visited the United States in 1860. The king's tree died in 1908.

J. C. Tait Still President.

We are informed by George Tait & Sons of Norfolk, Va., that our notice of a change in management was misleading. W. L. Tait and Robert Tait have retired, but James C. Tait, for more than twenty years president of the firm, retains all his stock and remains the head of the house. J. T. Moreland, the new vice-president, and D. B. Blackwood, the new secretary-treasurer, have been connected with the firm for many years.

Production of Calla Blooms.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—During the last winter we have grown 75 callas in 8-inch pots and 25 in 7-inch pots and they produced the following number of blooms:

November	7 flowers.
December	52 "
January	54 "
February	66 "
March	124 "
April	91 "
May	15 "

Total 409 "

We would like to know the opinion of growers as to this cut taken entirely from a commercial standpoint.

S. H.

[We should be pleased to hear from growers giving their opinions as to this cut of callas from that number of plants.—ED.]

Oil Heating Apparatus.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We are thinking of installing an oil heating apparatus for our horizontal tubular boilers, namely, one steam and two hot water boilers. We have about 20,000 square feet of glass. Kindly advise us as to cost of installing, also comparative figures of cost of burning oil versus pea coal at $4.35 per ton in cellar.

F.

Ontario.

Hard coal of the usual grade contains a heat value of about fourteen thousand to fifteen thousand (maximum) British thermal units for each pound of fuel. Pea coal probably runs considerably below this. The heat value of oil fuel is about seventeen to nineteen British thermal units per pound of fuel and in getting at a comparative cost of the two it would be necessary to reduce them to a common basis of measurement. For the burning of oil, special equipment must be installed. The oil will have to be transferred from a tank car or wagon to a storage tank. It is then pumped from the storage tank to the burners and this calls for a motor or steam driven pump, the latter preferred. Oil from the tank, pumped into the circulating system to feed the burners will be greater in quantity than that required merely as fuel, as it will be necessary to have an ample quantity in the pipe system to insure constant fuel supply. A positive pressure blower for atomizing the oil must be installed capable of delivering from one to two pounds of air. An extra burner for each boiler is necessary—a duplicate system, in fact—that the one may take the place of the other in case a burner gets out of order. It is not practicable to put in an automatic regulator for the maintenance of temperature in case of a sudden lowering or rising of the outside temperature. If the control of the oil is in competent hands the saving will be from twenty to thirty per cent if the value, per pound, of the fuels under consideration is equal at the point of delivery. However, this may be lost if oil fuel is improperly handled.

No definite estimate can be made in regard to the cost of the change from coal to oil fuel without more detailed information as regards your plant, etc. The fire boxes will have to be rearranged with the necessary baffle walls to give you the proper combustion chamber for the use of fuel oils. Each proposition requires a special study of boiler designs and settings. An oil burning device suitable for domestic purposes and hot-houses, using "distillate"—a higher grade of fuel oil used extensively in California—has been invented and is now being introduced in the middle west. The oil is forced from the storage tanks to the burner by water pressure, the city mains or stand pipes being used, the water displacing the oil as the latter is used, and is under thermostatic control. A pilot light is constantly kept burning in the fire box. The results gained from the use of this invention is not known to the writer, but the plan appears feasible. A new form of burner is used on these latter equipments, but may give a smoky flame unless closely regulated. Thermostatic control cuts off the fuel supply when the predetermined temperature is reached. When it drops below this the thermostat opens the valve and the pilot light ignites the fuel automatically. This system probably would prove successful with hot water but would hardly do for steam plants of any size or importance.

[Ed. Note.—We are indebted for the above article to Willis C. Squire, vice-president of the Hauck Mfg. Co., Western Union Building, Chicago, manufacturers of kerosene torches and oil-burning appliances.]

Division of Profits.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

One party furnishes the land, greenhouse and live stock and the other party furnishes the labor, expenses for plants, tools, etc., to be paid for by the business. How should the profits of such a business be divided?

Alabama, J. H. D.

Answering the query of "J. H. D." it would seem equitable first, for the party furnishing the labor to receive from the proceeds of the business a reasonable amount regularly for his services; second, the value of the plant land, etc., furnished by the other party should be estimated very carefully and he should be allowed from the business 5 per cent interest on his money. He should also have an allowance for depreciation or wear and tear on the buildings.

If the expenses of repairs and maintenance of the buildings come out of the business, then the depreciation should be somewhere from 5 to 10 per cent on the fair cash value of the buildings—perhaps 7 per cent would be an average. This, of course, would depend on the style of construction and the condition of the houses.

Horses and vehicles depreciate at least 10 per cent, as one must consider the danger of death of the horses and accidents to the vehicles. After these matters are agreed upon and deducted from the receipts and all other expenses are paid, the profit remaining may be divided as agreed.

In a small place of ordinary construction and ordinary value, the profits would be very properly divided evenly. In a large place of new and modern up-to-date construction, of course, the owner would be entitled to receive a larger share than the other partner.

W. N. RUDD.

[This query was answered by a number of other correspondents in our issue of June 15, page 1238.—ED.]

Revere "Non-kinking" Made in 500 Ft. lengths Old Style "Kinking"

WHY buy Garden Hose of the old style (wrapped construction) which readily kinks and the plies easily separate, necessitating couplings when lengths of more than 50 feet are desired? You can avoid all this by buying Revere Garden Hose which is made in 500-ft. lengths, so that you may have any length desired in one piece. It will withstand any water pressure. Let your next order be REVERO.

STOCK VERY PLENTIFUL.

The warm weather of the past week has changed the market conditions considerably and stock of all kinds is now much more plentiful with the exception of orchids which are still very scarce. White Killarney roses are arriving in larger quantities but the demand is good and the supply cleans up well. There are plenty of American Beauty roses in all grades and Killarney roses of exceptionally fine quality are in oversupply. Mrs. Aaron Ward roses are none too plentiful but fine lilies are a glut everywhere and do not move. The same may be said of gladioli, although America is having a fairly good call. The supply of other outdoor stock is very large and asters in very large quantities are seen in all the wholesale stores. Greens of all kinds are plentiful and some fine smilax and ferns are obtainable. The convention at the time of this writing has opened and a large crowd of florists from all sections of the country are visiting the great central cut flower market and are agreeably surprised at the large number of stores and the magnitude of some of the establishments. The large supply of stock, including chrysanthemums, is arriving in fine condition and the wholesale men are receiving a great many compliments for the fine quality of the stock that they are handling. Many of the stores have been decorated for the occasion and the supply houses have neatly arranged exhibits and the visitors are loud in their praises for the royal welcome they are receiving at the hands of the local people.

NOTES.

H. Van Gelder, the enterprising manager at Percy Jones' establishment, is having a fine 16-page catalog printed which will soon be ready for distribution. The cover is beautifully embossed and the highest quality enameled paper is used throughout. Percy Jones used to conduct his business in a space about 20x20 feet but his trade has increased so rapidly of late that a catalog and 3,500 square feet are now needed for his large cut flower and supply trade. Mr. Van Gelder has an able force in his employ and great things may be expected from his firm in the near future.

Dan MacRorie, H. Plath, Angelo J. Rossi and Julius Eppstein and wife, all of San Francisco, Calif., arrived in the city August 16 and have since been informing the trade that their city would like to have the S. A. F. convention in 1915. The party spent a few days in Milwaukee, returning in time to attend the convention. Mr. MacRorie and his friends brought with them 35 new applications from San Francisco florists for membership in the national society.

Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., president of the Society of American Florists, was met by a large delegation of the trade when he arrived in this city August 16. Mr. Vincent was accompanied by his wife and son, R. A. Vincent, also J. W. Boone and wife, Clifton Park; Harry J. Quick and James Glass, of Baltimore, Md.

N. J. Wieter is so well pleased with the fine condition of the stock in Wietor Bros.' greenhouses that he is making big preparation in anticipation of a banner fall. Gust. Alles, the old reliable storeman at their establishment, has returned from a most enjoyable visit with relatives in Wisconsin.

Herbert E. Smith and family of Danville made the trip to the convention by auto, a distance of 197 miles, leaving Danville at 4 a. m., August 18, and arriving in this city at 5 p. m. the same day.

C. L. Washburn says that work on Bassett & Washburn's new range is progressing very rapidly and that one house is already up. Mr. Washburn thinks a great deal of his new range and says when it is completed it will be second to none in the country.

C. G. Anderson, superintendent of the plant department at Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s establishment, has moved his family and household furniture from Edgebrook to Morton Grove.

Paul M. Paley, of Little Rock, Ark., arrived in the city August 15 to attend the convention and to visit his family, who have been spending the summer at Ravinia Park.

The A. L. Randall Co. had a very large and creditable display of supplies at their store and also a stand at the Coliseum during convention week.

C. C. Pollworth and H. W. Koerner of Milwaukee, Wis., arrived August 19 and immediately staged their exhibit at the convention.

Chas. H. Hudson, representing B. Hammond, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y., was one of the advance guard to the S. A. F. convention.

Zech & Mann had a large quantity of stock to show their visitors this week, particularly lilies and choice roses.

A little baby girl arrived at the home of Arthur Blewitt and wife at Des Plaines Wednesday, August 14.

Henry Wittbold arranged a 70-foot tower consisting of fruits and vegetable tables at Brand's Park this week.

Mrs. Horton of the Bassett & Washburn force has returned from an enjoyable outing at the seashore.

Allie Zech is showing his friend, Arthur Peterson, of Escanaba, Mich., around the city this week.

Mrs. J. B. Deamud is visiting with relatives at Denver, Colo.

A meeting of the Cook County Florists' Association was held at the Tavern, West Washington street, on August 15, with President Kohlbrand presiding. Eight new members were elected and two new applications for membership were received. A program is being arranged to give a number of lectures and the first of the series will be announced in the near future.

Poehlmann Bros. Co.'s store was magnificently decorated for the convention and was indeed a very pretty sight. A large number of banners bearing the firm's name and large oak sprays and asparagus strings, together with other greens artistically arranged, gave the store a very beautiful appearance.

Everybody is happy at the J. A. Budlong establishment this week, for Miss Amy Schultz, the popular young stenographer, has returned from a most enjoyable visit in Colorado. The Budlong store was neatly decorated for the convention and presented a most inviting appearance.

Chas. Ebbe of New Orleans, La., is the guest of John Zech this week and it is needless to say that he is in very good company. Mr. Ebbe had a fine exhibit of southern decorative plants and palms at the S. A. F. convention and distributed colored post cards of his store to all his callers.

The Chicago Flower Growers' Association fitted out the entire second floor of their building for the convenience of the visitors to the S. A. F. convention and the large room at times was well filled with guests who greatly appreciated the courtesies that were extended to them.

Fred C. Witthuhn and sons, Fred, Carl and Frank, and Clarence Sund made the trip from Cleveland to the convention by auto, leaving the Ohio city on August 15. The party will leave immediately after the convention for an extended tour through beautiful Wisconsin.

L. Hoeckner has taken the agency for disposing of all the Daily News Co.'s old papers and is now ready to talk business with all the wholesale stores in regard to supplying them with wrapping paper. "Stogie" guarantees best quality at lowest price.

Tim Matchen of the Peter Reinberg establishment, entertained his firm's many customers this week and the visitors were all well pleased with the royal treatment and very favorably impressed with the magnitude of the Reinberg establishment.

Hoerber Bros. will not grow any more asters after this season, having come to the conclusion that there is nothing in it, but will most likely grow more gladioli, for they have had very good success with these flowers this year.

A. L. Vaughan has been busy all week entertaining convention visitors and renewing old acquaintances. Miss Pearson, A. L. Vaughan & Co.'s efficient stenographer, is back from her vacation.

Erne & Klingel are making preparations for fall and are already well assured of a large supply of cut flowers for their ever increasing trade.

John Kruchten's leader this week is a fine grade of Golden Glow chrysanthemums which are now arriving in fairly large quantities.

Frank Ayres, Chas. W. McKellar's popular storeman, has returned from a month's outing in the Canadian wilds.

Chicago Florists' Club.

A special meeting of the Florists' Club was held at the Union Restaurant, West Randolph street, on August 15, with President Foley in the chair. The meeting was largely attended and the chairmen of the various committees made their reports. John Young, secretary of the Society of American Florists and superintendent of trade exhibitions, addressed the meeting and was given a rousing reception. He was warmly applauded at the conclusion of his interesting talk. G. L. Grant, a former president of the club, and J. A. Payne, of the New York Florists' Club, also addressed the meeting.

OMAHA, NEB.—The damage to the Wilcox greenhouse at Manawa by a cyclone has been repaired at a cost of from $200 to $400.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.—The H. A. Fisher Co., retail florists of this place, made an assignment August 8 for the benefit of their creditors.

UTICA, N. Y.—John M. Mattl, for more than 28 years florist and gardener at the Utica State Hospital, has been retired on a pension.

SEDALIA, MO.—The State Board of Horticulture has appropriated from its funds the sum of $400 for premiums for fruit exhibits at the state fair to be held here September 28-October 4.

The S. A. F. convention was a great success and everyone had a most enjoyable time, but, now that it is all over you are naturally going to knuckle down to hard labor and make preparations for the coming Fall. We would like to call it to your attention that when you place your orders for cut flowers we should be taken into consideration, for we have made arrangements with the best growers in this vicinity to handle their output and we are now receiving a full line of all kinds of seasonable stock. Our firm may be young in the field but it is nevertheless old in experience and we feel that we can give you the best of satisfaction when it comes to supplying you with cut flowers. We are so confident of this that we cordially invite you to send us a trial order.

MARKET CONDITIONS FAIR.

Market conditions are pretty fair, and the prospects for the immediate future are fairly good. The glut of the poor early asters is about over, and the better later ones arrive in quantity. These, as a whole, are a high average. Gladioli, while still in a large over-supply, are not overstocked as badly as they might be. The choice and fancy ones are selling at least. The poorer grades have no real market at all. American Beauties continue to hold up their reputation as a good seller. Their quality and numbers are both good, and they sell at sight at good prices. The other rose lines are troubled somewhat with a superfluity of short stock that moves only at buyers' prices. The choice blooms, however, sell easily and bring the usual summer prices for good stock. The lily cut of all kinds has let up somewhat and, as a result, the better blooms bring slightly better prices than for some time. There are a few valley on the market, and these sell slowly. The green goods supply is large, with but an ordinary demand in all lines except ferns, which sell well.

NOTES.

The florists' special for Chicago pulled out on due time. The car was well supplied with all accessories necessary for a trip of two thirds of a day. Among others, the party contained State Vice-President and Mrs. C. E. Critchell; A. C. Heckman, Jr.; W. A. Hollingsworth, Atlanta, Ga.; J. P. Keller, Lexington, Ky.; S. M. Harbison, Danville, Ky.; Chas. Dudley, Parkersburg, W. Va.; Chas. L. Baum and C. W. Crouch and wife, Knoxville, Tenn; and Ed. Schumann, Robert Becker, Jos. Beran, J. A. Peterson and wife and Miss Josephine Peterson; Clarence Peterson; Al. Horning; Geo. Magrie; Miss Mae Carroll; Frank Volz; Max Rudolph and wife; Ray Rudolph; August Hoffmeister and Miss Hoffmeister; Geo. Trome and wife; S. M. Schmitt and wife; R. S. Kelley. E. G. Gillett's party contained, among others, Mr. Gillett, L. H. Kyrk and wife, and C. P. Dietrich and wife, Maysville, Ky.

W. F. Haeger and wife, Chattanooga, Tenn., stopped in town Sunday, en route to Chicago, and L. D. Thompson, of the Dahl Floral Co., Atlanta, Ga., stopped on Monday.

J. W. Garvey, of Indianapolis, was on Saturday and Sunday the guest of his brother Charles of Peter Weiland's place.

Wm. Gardner came from New Castle as far as this city with his mother, who is returning to her home in Canada.

Mrs. E. G. Gillett and daughter left for Traverse City, Mich., where Mr. Gillett will join them after the convention.

O. C. Heberling and family, of Georgetown, Ky., were in the city while on an auto trip last week.

Wm. Lodder, of Hamilton, was in town on Monday. He arrived home from Quebec the previous day.

Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind., are shipping fine Kaiserin and My Maryland to L. H. Kyrk.

Gus. Brunner has hiked for northern Michigan to get out of the hay fever zone.

Ray Murphy and Wm. H. Gear left on Wednesday for the convention city.

C. E. Critchell is getting in very good smilax from the Rosebank Co.

P. J. Olinger went to Chicago on Saturday to attend the convention.

St. Louis.

TRADE AT STANDSTILL.

The weather warmed up considerably during the last week and trade was at a standstill, the only outlet being funeral work. Carnations are short stemmed and of small blooms. Tuberoses are arriving more freely. Early yellow chrysanthemums, Golden Glow, have made their appearance. Asters and gladioli are still very plentiful.

NOTES

A jolly crowd left Union depot Monday morning, August 19, enroute to Chicago. Wholesalers, retailers, and growers were all included and all were anxious for a good time. F. H. Weber, our vice-president, was all over, getting every one together. Fred is a hustler and made a hit as chaperon. He has put St. Louis on the map, getting quite a number of new members. Frank Windler, Charles Beyer and Fred Bruenig decorated the cars with pink Killarney roses and asters.

C. A. Kuehn has quite a variety of all cut flowers and is first in the field with Golden Glow chrysanthemums. He is also getting some fancy gladioli and asters. George Schreiner is drumming up trade through the telephone, trying to break up the summer dullness.

F. X. Gorly attended the convention of the Royal Order of Moose at Kansas City, August 19, and left there for the S. A. F. convention at Chicago the latter part of the week. Vincent Gorly and wife also attended.

Angelo J. Rossi, Dan MacRorie and H. Plath, all of San Francisco, Calif., stopped over August 15 to see the city. They took in the wholesale district and highly praised C. A. Kuehn's modern wholesale house.

George Angermueller has returned to the city accompanied by Mrs. Angermueller. They left here August 19 for the convention.

At H. G. Berning's a supply of good summer American Beauty roses is in. They are of good color and of medium length.

John Connon is taking a vacation in Canada. He expects to be at the convention.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS COMING IN.

Chrysanthemums are coming in. The coming reign of fall was heralded by the arrival of the Yellow Princess and Golden Glow, on August 12, but not before the violet had been welcomed by its many admirers. These two additions during the week have materially helped to give variety and a tone to florist stock it has lacked for some time. Violets alone are such a staple here that during the few months they are out of flower, nothing else seems to merit so well the popular favor. Market conditions and quotations continue the same as last week. Excellent Ulrich Bruners on four foot stems are the best roses offered. This stock is outdoor grown and sent in by the Conchi Co., of Colma. Aaron Ward is in demand and very scarce; Mrs. Taft is very poor, and one of the best sellers is the dahlia "Minnie Burgle," a splendid decorative flower originated by a local gardener. Amaryllis belladonna is coming in plentifully while sweet peas are about through. Judging by the loads of asters arriving daily and the ridiculous prices paid for them, half the area devoted to asters would be better planted to cabbage.

TRADE FAIR FOR AUGUST.

Asters and gladioli are very plentiful. The good stock sells fairly well at prices below the average, but the poorer grades find little or no sale at any price. Business has been fairly good for August so far. Carnations cut hardly any figure, so few coming in as to make it barely worthy of notice. Some outdoor stock began to arrive Saturday. Since we have had a few days of sunshine the sweet peas have shown some improvement in quality, and have a fair demand. Lily of the valley and orchids are quite scarce. Easter lilies have been hard to find the past week, but are now again on the increase. Roses of all kinds have been quite plentiful until a few days ago, when the weather turned decidedly cooler. Aaron Ward and sunburst roses are coming in now, and the color and size of the flowers are excellent. American Beauties are in good demand and stock is exceptionally fine. Dahlias are increasing in supply, some very good Sylvia arriving in limited quantity. The water lily season is nearly at an end. Pink and white Jap lilies have a good call. Greens of all kinds are plentiful.

NOTES.

The convention this week will take a number of Cleveland florists to Chicago. Ben Hart and a party left Wednesday, August 14, making the trip by easy stages and visiting friends along the way. Geo. W. Smith, L. L. Lamborn, John Kirchner and H. P. Knoble left Sunday morning in Mr. Smith's automobile. F. Wilhelm and sons also left Sunday morning. The other florists all went by rail. Mrs. Geo. W. Smith left Tuesday morning to join Mr. Smith in Chicago, from where they intend to visit Milwaukee and Lake Waukesha and other points of interest in their machine.

The florists' picnic this year was a success. Everyone reports a good time. The weather conditions were ideal.

MARKET IS SWAMPED.

Quiet as business was last week, this week is more so. The market is swamped with gladioli and asters, and there is very little demand. If there is a price for anything it is orchids, which are in very light supply. The new crop of roses are very short stemmed and of poor quality. American Beauties are improving in quality and meeting with better demand. The retailers are making extensive window displays of golden rod and hydrangeas. Carnations have practically disappeared from the market. Lilies are very plentiful.

NOTES.

Gottlieb Myer, the popular retail florist of Madison avenue and Fifty-eighth street, is now located in the Plaza Hotel, where he will conduct the flower store formerly managed by Thorley & Leikens. Mr. Myer will conduct this as a branch to his present attractive store. The store in Fifty-seventh street that was occupied by J. G. Leikens is now closed.

Joseph A. Manda, president of the New York Florists' Club, is erecting three large houses at West Orange, N. J., which will be devoted to orchids.

"Bert" Chadwick is spending his vacation in London, Canada, being missed by the local team in the convention tournament.

Mrs. A. M. Henshaw is slowly recovering from another serious operation, the second in a few months.

The "boys" at home are anxiously awaiting news of the delegation that left for Chicago Monday.

The new pink rose which Chas. H. Totty is sending to Henshaw & Fenrich is making a big hit.

Henry Siebrecht & Son are completely renovating their handsome store on Fifth avenue.

September 9 will be the next club night, at which time convention talks will be in order.

The Foley Mfg. Co. is erecting four new houses for Anton Schultheis, College Point, L. I.

John A. Payne, who represents this firm in the East, is now in Chicago.

Y.

Pittsburg.

BUSINESS REMAINS QUIET.

Business was quiet during the past week and funeral work, of which there was considerable, was the main factor in the retail stores. Not many American Beauty roses are seen, nor is there much demand for them. Good stock, for the season, of Killarney White Killarney, My Maryland and Kaiserin keeps coming in. The large and long stemmed asters are now in fair quantity. Gladioli are almost a glut, and a sprinkling of carnations is yet seen. Some very creditable dahlias were on the market Saturday, August 17, and they will soon be here in quantity. The general business outlook for this city and the Turtle Creek Valley, the seat of many great industries, is better than it has been for a number of years and the florists expect their share of prosperity.

NOTES.

The convention delegation left the Union Station at 9:15 a. m., August 19, over the Pennsylvania railroad. It included P. S. Randolph and Mrs. Randolph, P. S. Randolph, Jr., Miss McKenny, E. C. Ludwig and Mrs. Ludwig, De Forest Ludwig, Edward Ludwig, Wm. Falconer, Wm. Loew, Fred Burki and son, E. C. Reinemann, J. F. Zimmerman, and Jos. Thomas, and J. N. Harber of Greensburg. Geo. W. Burk and J. W. Jones went on an evening train.

nues. As there is no other florist in the immediate vicinity it should prove a good location.

Calvin Rice and A. S. Rice of Rice Bros., accompanied by their wives, will attend the convention and from Chicago they will proceed to Kalamazoo, Mich., their old home, to spend a week.

C. Elmer Frey, of Lincoln, Neb., spent a day looking over the stores and greenhouses of this city. The Frey family are spending the summer at their summer home at Nisswa, Minn.

The Amundson shop in the new Andrew's Hotel presents a fine appearance. Since Mr. Amundson is re-established after the old Hotel Brunswick fire he reports a good outlook.

John Munson, of the Minneapolis Floral Co., is on the sick list. Mr. Munson is suffering from stomach trouble and his doctors are undecided at this time as to an operation.

A number of local florists are this week attending the Chicago convention, and with a fair business outlook it should make the stay-at-homes hustle.

John Rovik, who has charge of the cut flowers at Rice Bros., has returned from his vacation and is in good condition now for the coming season.

The Central Floral Co., Twenty-sixth street and Central avenue is remodeling its houses and getting in shape for the coming season.

BUSINESS GOOD.

An exceptionally fine lot of outside stock is constantly coming into this market. Roses are good and carnations also are fair. Mums are coming in fine condition with a good demand. The general business the past week has been good. Some of the retailers claim business is not up to the standard but others are well satisfied and from the way stock is moving from the wholesalers they ought to be. Funeral work and a few weddings are helping out.

NOTES.

John Duncan, the landscape architect, is erecting a fine range of greenhouses at Thirty-sixth and Grand ave-

The visitor to Reading should not neglect to visit Wyomissing also, and especially if he is interested in peonies. Here is found the handsome home and nurseries of the popular president of the Peony Society, Bertrand H. Farr. He is a busy man and his home and his flowers are dear to his heart.

A visit to the range of the Heck Brothers is worth while. The range is not large, about seven thousand square feet, but it is well kept. The entire range was equipped last season; this year a new potting shed and office has been built; the grounds are beautiful with bedding work, and the Heck Brothers are both young men.

GLADIOLI IMPROVING.

The last week has been remarkable for the different kinds of weather—warm, cold, rainy, everything but what the florist would like to see. Flowers are equal to all demands and gladioli are getting plentiful and much better in quality. "America" is very good.

NOTES.

S. A. Anderson had all of his employees and their families as his guests at his summer home, Farnham, N. Y., on the south shore of Lake Erie, Tuesday, August 13. A special car took the party to Farnham, where the first part of a pleasant day started in a ride of 3 miles to the lake on a hay rack. At the home they were welcomed by Mr. and Mrs. Anderson, who had provided a sumptuous dinner, after which there was boating, bathing, ball games and a pleasant hike up the beach. Supper was served at 6 and at 9 p. m. the return trip began.

Recent visitors on their way to Chicago were S. T. Green, of Bayersdorfer & Co.; Shock, of M. Rice & Co. Edward Sceery, of Paterson, N. J., was also a visitor on his return from British Columbia, California and Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Sceery and Miss Sceery have been away about two months.

After the convention it will be up to the florists' club to get busy and have everything ready for the flower show as the growers in this vicinity are going to try and have a fine lot of stock. The park department and J. J. Albright expect some extra fine chrysanthemum plants.

W. F. Kasting, Prof. John F. Cowell and Albert Hutter motored to Chicago for the convention in Mr. Kasting's car. S. A. Anderson, D. Scott, J. Streit, J. B. Wiese, F. C. Brown and Chas. Sandford went by rail, while others went by boat.

S. A. Anderson is putting up a propagating house, 12x60.

R. Irwin, of Philadelphia, Pa., called on his way west. BISON.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9-inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

YANKTON, S. D.—The Gurney Seed & Nursery Co. has had a very successful year and has increased the stock to $100,000. This firm is also building a new tree storage and packing house, 64x100 feet. If completed in time the company will erect two greenhouses, 150 feet long, yet this fall.

CHAS. JOHNSON, Marietta, Pa., attended the first international eugenics congress, held in the great hall of the University of London, South Kensington, July 25-30. He also attended the reception given by special invitation to the members of the congress by the Lady Mayoress of London at the Mansion House, July 26.

SWEET PEAS.—In this department last week, page 278, the types made us say "Sweet pea crop reports in the west continue favorable. It now looks as if there would be peas enough to go around anyway. Just what surpluses there will be is causing some of the large jobbers considerable worry," when seed peas were intended.

AMONG the seedsmen and their representatives at the annual convention of the Society of American Florists in Chicago this week we noted President Chas. N. Page of the American Seed Trade Association, Des Moines, Ia.; J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, Mass.; W. Currie, Milwaukee, Wis.; Harry A. Bunyard, New York; D. Carmichael, Cincinnati, O.; Chas. H. Vick, Rochester, N. Y.; and Wm. Rehm, New York.

The Free Seed Abuse.

Do the people really receive any benefit from the free distribution of seed by the government through their congressmen? That is a question which that fearless congressional fighter of congressional abuses, Robert N. Page, of North Carolina, answers "no." The government this year appropriated $226,940 for free seeds, and when the bill came up Mr. Page sought in vain to cut out that appropriation, despite the fact that he is from a farming district where more than 200,000 farmers live.

In explanation of his position, Mr. Page, who has fought free seed for ten years, said on the floor of Congress

A. E. Reynolds, Crawfordsville, Ind.
President Wholesale Grass Seed Dealers' Association.

that, in his judgment, the free distribution of seed has "never met with the approval of the farmer," and that practically every agricultural organization has condemned it. The farmers know that free seed distribution is popular in congress "not because it is for the benefit of the farmer, but because it is a congressional gratuity." The farmers, says Mr. Page, are:

"Tired—eternally tired—of being fed upon the husks of legislation. They are not caring about a 5-cent package of garden seeds of doubtful value, particularly when they know that they are paying vastly more than this amount in taxes in order that they may have them. Of all classes in this country the man who digs his living out of the ground is asking less of special favor from the legislators than any other class in it. His chief complaint is that in the past he has been the victim of legislation conferring special favors upon other people. He is tired of paying the bills to meet the favoritism that has been dealt out here to other classes of people in the country.

"I have gone through my district during a campaign in September and October, have gone into the homes of my farmer constituents, one after the other, and in the old cupboard in the corner of the living-room, where the rubbish is put which they are not quite willing to throw away, but that they consider of little or no value, you will find the garden seeds I have sent them," is the frank statement of Mr. Page. When he asked why the seeds were not planted, his no less frank constituents told him that "they could not depend upon them and that they were afraid to risk them, and that their ground was worth too much to take the risk."—Richmond (Va.) Times-Dispatch.

Longevity of Seeds.

Nobody seems to have definitely answered the question how long seeds can live. We are assured by the scientists that seeds found buried with Egyptian mummies are incapable of germination, and we know as a matter of practical experience that seeds of the common food plants only a few years old can seldom be induced to grow, but the occasional instances of a much longer period of viability in certain seeds makes one hesitate to draw the line anywhere. In a recent Kew bulletin a case is recorded in which the seeds of a leguminous plant, albizzia lophantha, from southern Australia, germinated after lying dormant for sixty-eight years. The seeds of different families of plants differ very widely as regards vitality. Those of the umbelliferae or parsley family, for instance, seldom grow after a few years, while species of the pea family (leguminosae) have a reputation for being among the most resistant of seeds. The performance of the albizzia seeds, here mentioned, quite supports this reputation and extends the range of viability so far that few other seeds seem capable of surpassing it.—The American Botanist.

TRADE STILL DULL.

The usual midsummer dullness is with us—with intent to stay a few weeks longer apparently. Many are out camping and nothing specially noteworthy in the trade has happened recently. The few weddings and the usual number of funerals would not keep one-third of the tradesmen busy filling orders. This year we have had rains every few weeks that have given an unusual number of good outdoor flowers of all sorts and that practically puts the stores out of business for the time being. Field carnation plants are making an unusual growth and require constant attention. Better plants than ever before are in sight. With the exception of one firm (Van Sype & Seamons) the varieties will be the same old five sorts planted in this fall. More call for roses and a greater variety may be expected in future—for signs already show that people are tiring of carnations. Asters are coming in, but up to date they are rather inferior to our usual supply. The dahlias this season are specially good.

NOTES.

Mrs. Watson, wife of Watson, the Florist, is away on a visit to her old home and people in and near Boston, Mass. She is expecting to return by way of the southern route through New Orleans, Texas, New Mexico, Arizona and California.

Boddington's "Quality"

Christmas=Flowering Sweet Peas

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. William Sim, Cliftondale, Mass., the great sweet pea specialist sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3,000 lbs. Few kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

We Can Make Immediate Delivery of the Following:

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA-EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD. An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf and of exceptionally free-flowering qualities. Without doubt the finest early white for indoor planting. We sell one grower in Pennsylvania 35 lbs. of this variety every year; name on application. Oz. 25 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 75 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.25, lb. \$2.00.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August, flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the Winter months. Oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. 85 cts., lb. \$1.50.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to our Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer. Oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. 85 cts., lb. \$1.50.

ANGELINO. Self pink; new variety. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.75, lb. \$4.50.

CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow. Oz. 35 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.00, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.75, lb. \$3.00.

CHRISTMAS METEOR. Scarlet; fine open red flower. Oz. 35 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.00, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.50, lb. \$2.50.

CHRISTMAS STELLA MORSE. Creamy buff standard, wing slightly tinged with pink. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.75, lb. \$4.50.

FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free-flowering and early. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.75, lb. \$5.00.

FLORENCE DENZER. Pure white. Oz. 25 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 75 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.25, lb. \$2.00.

LE MARQUIS. This is the same color as Princess of Wales, violet; has very large flowers. Oz. 25 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 75 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.25, lb. \$2.00.

MRS. ALEX WALLACE. Lavender; very scarce. Oz. 35 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.00, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.50, lb. \$2.50.

MRS. F. J. DELANSKY. Daybreak pink. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.25, lb. \$4.00.

MRS. GEO. LEWIS. Large, pure white, wavy flower. Oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. 85 cts., lb. \$1.50.

MRS. E. WILD. Carmine or dark pink. Oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. 85 cts., lb. \$1.50.

MRS. HANNAN. Deep rose-pink; very pleasing shade. Oz. 40 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.25, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.00, lb. \$3.50.

MRS. W. W. SMALLEY. Satiny pink. Oz. 35 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.00, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.75, lb. \$3.00.

MRS. WILLIAM SIM. Salmon-pink. Oz. 30 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.00, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.50, lb. \$2.50.

MRS. ZVOLANEK. Blue, variegated. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.75, lb. \$5.00.

MISS HELEN M. GOULD. White, open flower; standard lilac, marbled. Oz. 25 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 75 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.25, lb. \$2.00.

MISS JOSEY REILLY. Lilac; very large flowers. Oz. 25 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 75 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.25, lb. \$2.00.

"The Kenilworth Strain" of Giant PANSY Seed

Must Not be Compared with the flimsy Trimardeau

It is much larger and of good substance; the immense flowers of 3½ to 4 inches are of perfect form; every tint and shade is produced in striking combinations and endless variations of beautiful colors and markings. The stock plants are most critically selected. It is rich with shades of brown, bronze, red, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

1912 SEEDS NOW READY

2000 seeds, 5c; 5000 seeds, $1.00; ¼ ounce, $1.25; ounce, $5.00.

Spraying Notes.

August is surely the month of blight, and whatever spraying is needed in the vegetable garden should not be neglected in this month. This applies also to insects, especially those on cabbage. All or most of the earlier work and expenditures can be lost in short order now. This applies to tomatoes, eggplants, cucumbers, melons, celery and cabbage especially. For the vine crops, as cucumbers and cantaloupes, we use the 44-50 Bordeaux, being careful to apply when the foliage is dry and when the air is right for quick drying. We always apply twice, once back and once forward over each row, to be sure of a thorough job. To this end we allow the first coat to dry so we can better see any defective spots. For tomatoes and eggplants we use the same Bordeaux, adding arsenate of lead against potato bugs on eggplants. For celery we use Bordeaux only and as we grow Golden Self-Blanching, mostly it requires constant attention up to cool weather. For cabbage there is nothing better than Paris Green dry mixed with air-slacked lime. We add enough of the "Green" to the lime to faintly color it and apply by using cheesecloth sacks as dusters. Cucumbers and cantaloupes need further attention against the root borers, for which we use tobacco stem decoction or any tobacco extract solution poured around the root crowns. Growers who have never used Bordeaux thoroughly have no idea how much the quality can be improved; in fact, it is the only way one can now produce a good Golden Self-Blanching celery or a solid, fine flavored melon or tomato.

THE BOOK OF GLADIOLUS

THE first authoritative book on this bulb ever printed in America, or possibly the world, issued April 1, 1911. This 120-page book, written by Matthew Crawford and Dr. Van Fleet, contains many chapters covering all sides of growing, propagating, storing, etc., and also some pages of valuable cultural notes gathered from reliable sources. A necessity for both amateur and grower. The book is bound in cloth and fully illustrated.

Uruguay Planting Trees.

Although millions of trees have been planted in Uruguay, the general aspect of the country is that of a great almost treeless prairie. The government, in 1911, offered prizes to stimulate the planting of trees, two landowners receiving $10,000 each and others smaller sums. The arbor-day commission did excellent work, planting some 50,000 trees during the year and conducting the holiday along lines similar to those followed in the United States. In 13 of the 19 departments the forestry census recorded 17,402,209 planted trees, principally eucalyptus, pines, poplars, paradise trees and acacias.

An agricultural defense bureau was organized during 1911, with duties similar to those of the Bureau of Entomology and the Division of Plant Pathology in the Department of Agriculture of the United States. The law creating it provides for a central committee in Montevideo, with a sub-committee under a director in each of the other civil divisions, and a director at Montevideo in general charge. To provide funds a small tax is imposed on rural and suburban real estate. The director was sent to the United States to study the organization of the Agricultural Department and will plan his work along similar lines.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

EFFECTIVE MEDICINE AGAINST BUGS

Sold by the Seedsmen of America

Send for Pamphlet on Bugs and Blights, to B. Hammond, Fishkill-on-Hudson, N. Y.

Altoona, Pa.

Myers Bros. continue to do a good business both at their Altoona and Hollidaysburg stores. They have two ranges and a large area of glass. Their new range near Hollidaysburg is an ideal site and they have also a farm there. They expect to build more houses in the near future. An event which will be of interest to many florists is their suit for $40,000 against the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. Some years ago the Pennsylvania placed a sidetrack along the front of Myers Bros.' Eldorado greenhouses, also a signal tower. As many as twelve engines at a time are stopped and pour their smoke and gases from the cylinders, continually covering the glass and Myers Bros. were forced to build another range two miles away as a result.

A. A. Whitbred continues to sustain his reputation as a grower of fine geraniums and other bedding plants, using up about one carload of pots each year. He also has a considerable glass area in cut flowers. He has now about 30,000 square feet of glass and a retail store in the heart of the city.

J. A. Wilt & Son, whose greenhouses are at Greenwood, have been selling good gladioli at their stand in the Green Avenue market.

Oklahoma City.

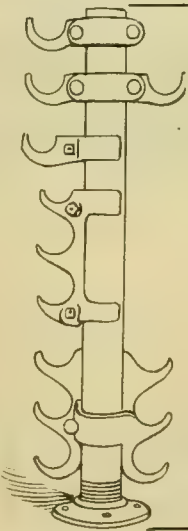

COOL WEATHER HELPS FLOWERS.

A full week of comparatively cool weather has been our lot and it seems to have had a good effect on the flower trade. The retailers say business has been quite good, some kinds of flowers being too scarce to meet the demand.

NOTES.

The bedding at some of the small parks which are scattered throughout the city is at its best now. Stiles Park in particular is looking very gay and bright.

Lon Foster, of the Barteldes Seed Co. is back from Tennessee, where he has been for a month on vacation.

Hook Burnhams Up In Batteries That's The Way To Save Coal

You save coal because you burn just the coal you need, just when you need to. No running of a big 100-horsepower boiler when you need only 25 horsepower.

By installing Burnhams in Battery you overcome the necessity of the expensive chimney that steel tubular boilers require—you avoid the costly masonry work—you cut down the cost of installation by a full third—you get away from the bother and ever-recurring expense of replacing tubes.

For ranges up to certain limitations, unquestionably, cast iron boilers in batteries are the most economical. Steel tubular boilers become an economical necessity only at the point where Burnham Batteries reach their limit. Both types do the best work in the work for which they are best adapted.

We will advise you frankly and sell you the type boiler best adapted to your particular needs.

Write us and get the advantage of the advice of our heating engineers and experts. Costs nothing and may save you much.

WHAT THE USERS SAY

—ABOUT—

KROESCHELL BOILERS

Cast Iron Boilers Crack

Our large cast iron sectional boiler cracked one section and the header last Sunday. It seemed to turn cold about the same time the break occurred. By Monday night it was 14 degrees below zero. However, by putting up coal stoves, oil stoves, lamps and pushing up the small furnace we have managed to keep most of our stock in pretty good shape, and our total loss, furnace and all, will be between $500 and $600. Just luck that it was not all gone.

New Kroeschell boiler ordered by telegraph on Sunday, shipped Monday, reached here on Friday; hauled to greenhouse on Saturday and started a fire Sunday; just seven days and ten hours after the accident. When dealing with people who will deliver a boiler as quick as that you cannot give up.

Yours very truly,
MICHLEBROS. CO., Lexington, Ky.

Took Out Cast Iron Boilers for Kroeschell.

I bought two No. 4 Boilers in 1902. They take care of 24,750 square feet of glass and could take care of one-third more. These boilers are rated at 21,000 square feet. They do very satisfactory work, better than any other boiler I ever had. I took out my cast iron boilers and put these in their place. Your boilers save at least 15 per cent coal.

JAS. S. KIRK, Chicago, Ill.

Kroeschell Versus Cast Iron.

Have no trouble to keep up temperatures in my houses with the No. 10 Kroeschell Boiler. The boiler has given entire satisfaction. We had a cast iron sectional boiler—I wouldn't have one for a gift any more.

LOUIS OTTO, Neenah, Wis.

Better Than Cast Iron.

We bought a No. 1 Boiler in 1902. It is very satisfactory. We had several cast iron boilers, but like yours much better.

THE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Continue: From Issue of August 24.

Thursday's Proceedings.

Promptly at 10:00 a. m., pursuant to the constitutional provision governing the same, President Vincent announced that the polls were regularly opened and directed the tellers—Irwin
C. Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.;
Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., and Richard A. Vincent, White Marsh, Md.— to proceed with their duties. After the balloting had been in progress for some time, President Vincent requested that it be suspended, stating that Judge Vesey had asked for the floor in order to make an announcement.
The tellers thereupon suspended operations, and Judge Vesey addressed the convention as follows:

JUDGE VESEY WITHDRAWS.

"Gentlemen: After discussing the situation that now presents itself to this society and after having consulted many of the gentlemen who were kind enough to suggest that I should be a candidate for the presidency, and after considering all that I should lose by declining the honor of standing for the presidency of this society at this time, I wish to make this announcement. I have heard many who are friends of mine, whom I have known as leaders in this society, men who have molded its course in years gone by, men who have known Mr. Farquhar of Boston for many years, all speak of him in the highest terms of praise and commendation. Even my own old friend and neighbor, E. G. Hill, who has known Mr. Farquhar these many years, says that he is the man that ought to be president of this society, that he has that dignity, learning, and knowledge of the business that the president of this association ought to have. I see too, and see clearly, with the great National Flower Show coming on at New York that Mr. Farquhar with his ability in that line and his proximity to the city of New York enabling him to be there any time upon a few hours' notice, and myself with less knowledge of that sort of thing, that perhaps I ought to ask that the honor be not now conferred upon me.
"If Mr. Farquhar were less entitled to it, if he were held less highly in the esteem of this society, it might be different, but I know now that he spent his time in Europe last year representing this society, that he may be called upon to go there again, that he is an educated florist, and notwithstanding all the compliments that were paid me yesterday by my friend Manda of New Jersey, I feel that I can fairly and with your respect and confidence say to you now that I believe that Mr. Farquhar ought to be president of this society this coming year, and I desire, if I may, to withdraw my name as a candidate for the presidency and to ask that Mr. Far-quhar's election be made unanimous."

This announcement was greeted with prolonged and vigorous applause by those who were patiently waiting in line to cast their votes as well as by those who had already voted, and a voice called out: "One year hence!"

After this interruption Judge Vesey continued: "May I request that the depositing of individual ballots be now suspended, and the election of the nominee for the various offices named upon the ticket be made unanimous by this society?"

Vice-President August Poehlmann, of Chicago, moved that the rules be suspended and that the secretary cast one ballot for the election of J. K. M.
L. Farquhar as President for the ensuing year. The ballot was so cast and the election of Mr. Farquhar duly announced by the chair. Three cheers and a tiger were proposed for President-elect Farquhar by H. B. Dörner, and were given with gusto. Similar action was taken as to the remaining nominees, there being but one candidate on the ticket for each office, and their election was duly announced, viz.:
Theodore Wirth, vice-president; John Young, secretary; William F. Kasting, treasurer.

W. A. Manda asked, and by unanimous consent was given, the privilege of the floor on a question of personal privilege, explaining that as to certain remarks that had been attributed to him reflecting upon a brother member, he had been misquoted. His announcement was greeted with applause and cheering, led by John Westcott, and this was followed by three cheers for Mr. Westcott, proposed by Patrick O'Mara. W. F. Gude, of Washington, D. C., suggested that Judge Vesey escort President-elect Farquhar to the platform. Judge Vesey complied with the request and introduced the president-elect, asking for him as kindly treatment as the members would know how to accord.

President-Elect Farquhar's Speech.

President-elect Farquhar acknowledged the honor conferred by his election, as follows:

Mr. President, Judge Vesey and fellow-members of the S. A. F. & O. H.: I thank you for the marvelous demonstration of confidence that you have tendered to me on this occasion. I left Boston with the idea that I would not run for the presidency, and so stated to my friends not only in Boston, New York and Philadelphia, but also in Chicago. They would not take "no" for an answer. They forced me here, and here I am! I keenly feel the honor that you have conferred on me, and I feel too the responsibility which attaches to and is coupled with that honor. I realize that this growing and progressive society is becoming of greater and greater importance, is doing a larger work, has a larger membership, is widening its influence each year, and that with this increased growth there is also an increasing responsibility resting on him whom you place in its first office.

As I stated before, I appreciate the honor, and I also appreciate the responsibility attaching to it and the amount of work that will devolve upon your executive head. It shall be my earnest endeavor to promote every interest of the society, and we shall need your helpful co-operation without which but little can be done; but with your help this society has wonderful possibilities. In the several societies with which I am now connected it has been my endeavor to do my duty, and I assure you, gentlemen, in thanking you again for this honor, that I shall continue the endeavor to do my duty in this larger sphere of usefulness to which you have now called me for the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists. [Applause.]

"Has any one else any special business to offer before we call for the final resolution?" asked President Vincent.

"If I am in order—and I think I am—I would ask that the privilege of the floor be accorded to Wallace R. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn., chairman of the publicity committee of the New York Florists' Club, who has something of interest to present to the society," said W. F. Gude.

W. R. Pierson's Speech.

Mr. President and gentlemen, in appearing before this body in this Coliseum, which has been the center of attraction in the greatest publicity movement that the world has ever seen, and in the hall which has been the scene of our recent great political conventions, I feel that I am addressing you as a body of business men here for business purposes, and that the principal thing in our business is the return that we can get from the flower business as a whole.

The New York Florists' Club is interested in publicity for the flower industry not only from one standpoint but from all standpoints. We have had samples of what newspaper publicity can do. American baseball is a newspaper game. Practically every large movement is a newspaper game. Are we as a body of men going to allow the greatest privilege that we may utilize as a business organization to escape from us merely because we neglect to take advantage of the opportunity that is presented to make the florists' industry one of the greatest in the world through the aid of the public press?

The New York Florists' Club have prepared a resolution that we wish to present to this society calling for a general publicity committee, such committee to include in its membership representatives from all of the florists' clubs in the United States, to meet here annually concurrently with this convention as an advisory body, to consider ways and means, so that each man when he returns to his own florists' club can take back a report to that club that it may co-operate in an organized movement for publicity in furtherance of more general use of floral decorations and the encouragement of customs and observances that will stimulate the same and thus advance our business interests.

CO-OPERATION NECESSARY.

It has been the idea of this society for years to accumulate a large permanent fund, and I do not urge that at this time it is right or perhaps proper to break into this fund for publicity disbursements, although I know of no better purpose to which this organization could apply its fund than to improve the business conditions of the florists of the country, and in that way to derive a substantial return from our financial outlays, and offer something of value to our members in return for their membership dues. We realize that in order to carry on a publicity movement properly we must have the co-operation of the retail florist, who is the hardest man to get in; but taking the example of such cities as Detroit, Minneapolis and Rochester, where they have worked together, we see a gratifying prospect of what can be accomplished.

Gentlemen, with these few introductory remarks I wish to present to you the following resolution, and will state before reading it that the cities that have approved of this plan and are back of it, in the order in which they reported to me as chairman of the New York committee, are Louisville, Rochester, Cincinnati, Denver, Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Minneapolis, Washington, Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee and New York. With a proper publicity organization which shall consist of a representative from each club in the United States, they can raise the necessary funds among themselves to carry out a consistent policy which will do much to improve business conditions of florists all over our country. As a single illustration let me cite "Mother's Day." You all know what "Mother's Day" means to the florists. This has been due to what? Merely a little sentiment originally started by newspaper work, but which meant dollars and cents for the flower business. There are other appeals to sentiment which can be practically applied in the same way. I hope to see the day come, with proper publicity, when Memorial Day will be recognized in every state in the Union, as it now is in Boston. You know that that means money for the floral industry.

In behalf of the New York Florists' Club, Mr. President and gentlemen, I therefore move the adoption of the following resolution:

RESOLUTION ADOPTED.

Resolved: That a standing committee on publicity shall be established and become a permanent committee of the S. A. F. & O. H., and that the membership of this committee shall consist of one member of each florists' club in the United States and Canada which shall organize a publicity committee and elect a representative of such committee to membership in this general committee before October 1 annually, and such representative must be a member of the S. A. F. & O. H.

J. O. Thilow seconded the motion to adopt the resolution and it carried unanimously.

Patrick O'Mara, of Jersey City, N. J., asked and obtained the privilege of the floor for Miss Mary Hayden of Kansas City, who displayed her eloquence by a graceful act rather than by words. Smilingly advancing to the front of the room she blushingly presented to President-elect Farquhar a magnificent bunch of American Beauties. Mr. Farquhar bowed his acknowledgments.

P. O'Mara on Final Resolutions.

Mr. O'Mara was again recognized, and informally presented the final resolutions. "Mr. President and gentlemen," said Mr. O'Mara, "as I understand the situation, a committee on final resolutions has not yet been appointed, or if so is not now prepared to report. As this is to be our last business session it is meet and proper that we, before finally adjourning, should take due cognizance of all that has been done for us here as a body in this splendid growing and magnificent city of Chicago, a place where we can all come to get inspiration; a place from which we can all go home feeling that we have stored up sufficient energy to suffice for another year."

"There are some things that I wish to make particular mention of. One is the splendid work done by the park commissioners here in Chicago, who loaned to us the magnificent exhibit that you have all seen down on the floor, a splendid evidence of what is being done for horticulture and by horticulturists in Chicago. It is right, proper and just, that we should take due cognizance of that, that we should place upon our records our keenest appreciation of the kindly courtesy of the Chicago park commissioners.

"It goes without saying, Mr. President and members of the society, that we are under many and lasting obligations to the Chicago florists, and also to the men in the allied trades in Chicago. They have taken care of us from the moment we arrived; they are taking care of us yet, and with true western hospitality they propose and purpose to take care of us to the last moment of our stay in Chicago. It is, therefore, due to them that we, before we finally adjourn, should also tender to them our thanks.

"What may I say for the ladies of Chicago? They, too, have done their full share in extending hospitalities with their husbands and brothers and fathers. They have done everything that could possibly be done for our wives, our sisters, mothers and children. They have made them all feel at home here, every one of them. We all owe them lasting obligations, and it is fitting that we should take note of it at this our closing session.

"These are the main features, Mr. President and gentlemen, that I wish noted at the present time and to give expression to in this way, with leave granted that later on a more formal report from the committee on final resolutions may appear in our printed proceedings. Let it be understood then that we tender to the park commissioners, to the Chicago Florists' Club, to the gentlemen of the allied trades, and to the ladies of Chicago, our heartiest thanks for all they have done for us. We wish that they may live long and prosper, every one of them. I move you that a motion to this effect be adopted by rising vote."

The convention rose in response and the resolutions thus presented by Mr. O'Mara were unanimously adopted.

On motion of Theodore Standt of Rockville, Conn., seconded by Mr. Gude, a rising and unanimous vote of thanks, gratification and appreciation was tendered to the New York Florists' Club and to Walter R. Pierson, for the inspiration of their new publicity movement. President Vincent appointed Patrick O'Mara, E. G. Hill and J. O. Thilow as a committee to formulate for publication later the final resolutions already adopted.

SECRETARY'S SUPPLEMENTARY REPORT.

Secretary Young presented a supplementary report on membership, to the effect that the annual members now numbered 298, with 38 life members.

The Smith Memorial.

W. F. GUDE'S SPEECH.

Mr. President and gentlemen, a committee of five was appointed to take up the matter of establishing a suitable memorial at the national capital for the father of our charter, the late William R. Smith. That committee was to report before this convention adjourned. In order that you may have in mind the character of the men composing that committee I will state that it consisted of J. K. M. L. Farquhar, Boston, Mass.; J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; H. Papworth, New Orleans, La.; R. Vincent, Jr., and myself, with power to add to that committee from every state in the Union if we saw fit.

The committee feel that there is a great opportunity here for the people who knew Mr. Smith best to contribute commensurate to the magnitude of his work, and therefore rather than to erect only a small monument costing a few hundred dollars, that this memorial might well take the shape of something more useful, in addition to a stone to mark the place where he spent sixty years in Washington, D. C., and the committee feel that we could get much better support from the members in the United States and Canada—we do not know whether there would be any other foreign contributions or not, but rather think there will, although the committee has not as yet decided whether to accept them or not if tendered—but we believe that we can get good substantial recognition from the membership of this society, whose charter is granted by the United States government and whose headquarters are therefore the national capital. I believe that the publicity we could get out of it would be worth more to the society itself than the money spent; in addition to which I feel confident that backed by the national organization with substantial contributions the work of the committee throughout the length and breadth of the United States would be made easier, and a monument befitting the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists that would do justice to that noble and grand character would be forthcoming in a short while.

I should like an expression from the society. I believe that Mr. Farquhar wants to say something, and I believe that other members of that committee who may be present should say a few words so that it may go out to the associate members and those who are not present here today.

PRESIDENT-ELECT FARQUHAR'S TALK.

Mr. President, ladies and gentlemen: There are many of you who know the esteem in which the late W. R. Smith was held by members of congress and by cabinet officers and other high officials at the seat of government. The national charter obtained by this society was made possible only because of the regard in which Mr. Smith was held at that time. Under the provisions of our charter we should have a home in Washington. There is a possibility, if not a probability, of our getting that home in the near future. To that end it is necessary for this society to take some action, and there is no reason why the memorial to Mr. Smith should not take the form of a building that would be suitable for occupancy as the domicile of this society.

We believe that throughout the length and breadth of this land sub-if that resolution can be modified so that the appropriation will first have the sanction of the executive board I think it would be better."

"I will amend my resolution to conform to Mr. Stewart's suggestion," said Mr. Farquhar, "with the recommendation that the executive committee be authorized to act favorably."

Parcels Post.

Several communications were now read from W. Atlee Burpee, Philadelphia, Pa., rehearsing the work done by the American Seed Trade Association in championing proper parcels post legislation, and especially commending H. R. Bill 26006 introduced July 27, 1912, by Hon. William Sulzer, chairman of the committee on foreign affairs.

Mr. Burpee concluded as follows:

"The general parcels post for fourth-class matter at ten cents per pound for the first pound and five cents per pound for each additional pound should entail no loss to the post office department and would be a great boon to all the people. The only improvement that occurs to me would be to make the flat rate one cent for each two ounces up to two pounds, then each additional pound or fraction of a pound five cents per pound. This makes the eleven pound package cost only one cent more but gives an advantage to the people on small packages without any possible danger or loss to the post office department."

W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., said: "A great part of that is now ancient history. The Bourne bill can never go through the house of representatives in its present shape. I have that from a dozen different congressmen. Since I left home the Lewis bill has passed the house and is now in conference. I do not think we need fear that the Bourne bill, or scriptions would pour in quite sufficient to do this, and it is also likely that Mr. Smith's friends in Washington, who are still numerous in congress, would be glad to support suitable legislation in congress to provide from the national government any extra amount needed for this purpose. This project should have its inception with our society, in which Washington's Grand Old Man held a unique position. It seems to us befitting at this time that we should prove that we are in earnest in this matter and show that we appreciate Mr. Smith's life and work. I, therefore, Mr. President, offer the following resolution:

Resolved, That this Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists hereby authorizes its committee on a memorial to W. R. Smith in Washington, D. C., to pledge the society for a sum not exceeding one thousand dollars to be used as a nucleus in establishing such memorial.

Now, Mr. Chairman and gentlemen, this does not mean that we must immediately pay out of our treasury $1,000; it merely puts your committee in a position to say that this society is ready to give $1,000 toward a proper memorial. I trust that this will have your earnest consideration, at this opportune time, for a memorial to one who did so much for this society.

The motion to adopt the above resolution was seconded.

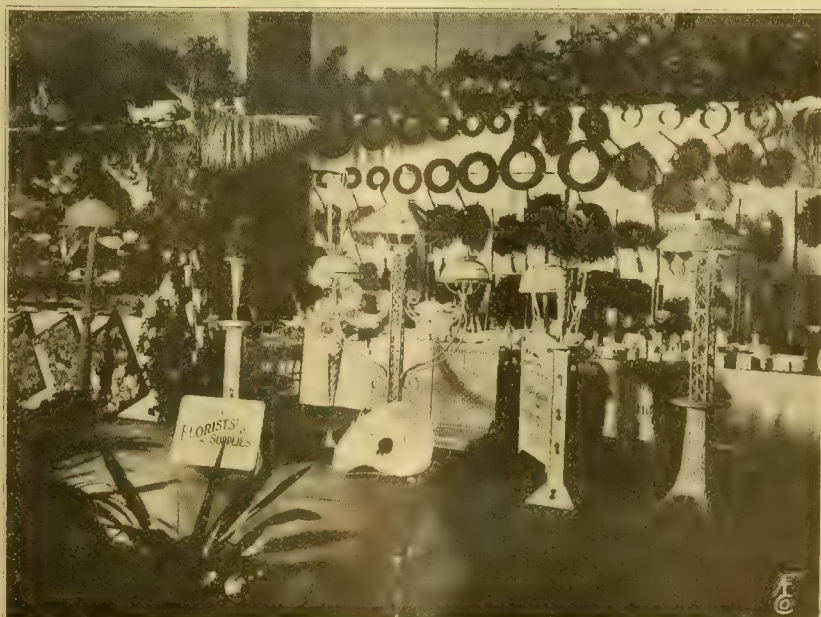

William J. Stewart, Boston, Mass., said: "I would like to remind the society that our by-laws provide that all appropriations by the association exceeding $100 in amount must first have the sanction of the executive board;

The question was put, and the resolution was adopted, with the above addition.

CONTRIBUTIONS.

Voluntary contributions were thereupon successively announced by the following members in the order named:

Benj. Hammond, Fishkill, N. Y., $100
H. Papworth, New Orleans, La., 25

a zone system increasing the rates on seeds, will ever pass the house, or that the Lewis bill will ever pass the senate. It might not do any harm to again put in a resolution endorsing the parcels post as for the best interests of the country, so as to let congress know that we are still on the job."

SULZER BILL ENDORSED.

Patrick O'Mara, Jersey City, N. J., said: "So far as I understand the situation in congress at the present time, with the explanation by Mr. Gude and others, I really believe that the only genuine parcels post measure now before congress is the Sulzer bill, which is almost identical with the Bennett bill that was introduced sometime ago. I would rather favor the adoption of a simple resolution endorsing the Sulzer bill, asking our representatives in congress to do all they can to effect its passage. I would therefore offer as a substitute for the resolution presented by Mr. Welch the following:

"Resolved, That the Society of American Florists hereby endorses the principles embodied in H. R. Bill 26000, introduced July 27, 1912, by the Honorable William Sulzer, and that we urge upon our representatives in congress to do all in their power to effect its passage, believing that if it becomes a law we will have a parcels post measure which will facilitate the transportation of merchandise throughout the country and will be of benefit to the entire people."

This substitute was seconded by Robert Craig of Philadelphia and unanimously adopted. Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., inquired whether this matter would have the attention of a standing committee of the society during the time intervening between now and the holding of the next annual convention to which President Vincent replied that the tariff and legislative committee had done good and faithful work in this regard, and would continue to do so.

No further business offering, on motion of Patrick O'Mara the convention now adjourned until the Third National Flower Show to be held at New York City, April 5 to 12, 1913.

Report of Committee on Final Resolutions

The committee on final resolutions desire to present the following for approval:

Whereas, the twenty-eighth Annual Convention now closing will, we believe, live in the annals of the society as one of the most successful and enjoyable in the history of the organization, and desiring to recognize the efforts made to achieve these results, we therefore submit the following:

Be it resolved, that the thanks of the society are hereby extended to the officers and members of the Chicago Florists' Club for their lavish hospitality, the splendid efforts made for our comfort and pleasure, and their untiring care of us while in their midst. We desire to couple with them in this recognition the men of the allied trades in Chicago who worked hand in hand with them.

Our special thanks are due to the board of park commissioners for the great interest manifested in the exhibition, and their splendid display of plants which was such a feature.

We also desire that the thanks of the society be extended to the various exhibitors and the advertisers in the souvenir album. Our thanks are also due to the daily press of Chicago for the notices given of the convention and exhibition.

In closing, we wish to specially express our appreciation of, and tender our heartfelt thanks to, the ladies of Chicago and the Ladies Society of American Florists for all they did to entertain the visiting ladies. We recognize that the work done by them was a potent factor in the social success of the gathering.

Florists' Hall Association.

The annual meeting of the Florists' Hall Association of America was held at the Coliseum, Chicago, Thursday morning, August 22, 1912. President E. G. Hill presided and called the meeting to order promptly at 9 o'clock a. m. The attendance was larger than usual and much interest was manifested. After reading and approving the minutes of the previous meeting the following directors were elected for three years: J. A. Valentine, Denver, Colo.; H. S. Will, Minneapolis, Minn.; Fred Burki, Gibsonia, Pa.

The cost of hail insurance for the past five years was thoroughly discussed, and a resolution was adopted asking the directors to appoint a committee of three to formulate by-laws to be introduced at the next annual meeting with the design of changing the by-laws so that the rate charged would be commensurate with the cost of hail insurance during the past ten years.

N. J., secretary; Joseph Heacock, Wyncote, Pa., treasurer. President-elect E. G. Hill appointed Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., as director to take the place of Herman Ritter, who is not now a member of the association. The chair appointed J. A. Valentine, J. G. Esler and A. Rasmussen a committee on amendments to the by-laws, said committee to meet at the National Flower Show in New York April 5-12, 1913.

American Gladiolus Society.

CORRESPONDING SECRETARY'S REPORT.

A meeting of the executive committee of the American Gladiolus Society was held in New York city on December 6, with the following members present: Arthur Cowee, E. W. Fengar, A. T. Boddington, I. S. Hendrickson. The matter of a die and medals was discussed, and it was finally decided to purchase a die and offer ten sets of medals the first year to as many local horticultural societies. It was thought best to offer a silver medal for the first prize, and a bronze medal for the second prize, the ten sets of medals to cost $70.00. The matter of the registration bureau was taken up, and it was decided to combine this committee with that of the nomenclature committee already established, with trial grounds at Ithaca, New York, where all tests can be made. The matter of certificates of merit was then taken up, and it was the sense of the meeting that these certificates should be awarded only by the nomenclature committee, and not by judges appointed for the annual exhibition. Prize winners for the best

A committee was also authorized to formulate amendments to the by-laws concerning hazardous risks. The meeting thereupon adjourned.

A meeting of the directors was held immediately following the adjournment of the annual meeting of the association, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind. president; John T. Temple, Davenport, Ia., vice-president; John G. Esler, Saddle River, articles on gladioli, written for amateurs, were: Mrs. Francis King, Alma, Mich., first; Mrs. May B. Crane, Hammondsport, N. Y., second. President Hendrickson appointed Mr. Cowee and Prof. Beal as members of the color chart committee. I regret to report the death of two of our members, Professor L. B. Judson, who was one of the little party of organizers at Boston, and W. H. Dunning, of New York City, who joined our ranks but recently.

THE RACES AT RAVINIA PARK, AUGUST 23, 1912.

THE NEW MEDALS.

The face or obverse side of our new medals represents a spike of gladiolus flowers with "American Gladiolus Society" engraved around the rim. The reverse side is a simple wreath of gladiolus blooms, with space for engraving. The design is unique and beautiful. The medal is made in sterling silver, colored silver gray, and is also made in bronze. It was designed and made by the Boston Badge Co., Boston, Mass. The medals will be given to the representative horticultural societies which will offer them, in their schedules, to be competed for by amateur exhibitors of gladiolus blooms at summer shows. The conditions require that the individual exhibits shall consist of fifteen named varieties, three spikes each; the same to be correctly labeled. The silver medal is for the first prize and the bronze medal for second prize. The following societies have been given sets of these medals for their summer exhibitions: Massachusetts Horticultural Society, Boston, Mass.; Newport (R. I.) Horticultural Society; Southampton (L. I.) Horticultural Society; St. Catharines (Ont.) Horticultural Society; Pasadena (Cal.) Horticultural Society; Melrose (Mass.) Horticultural and Improvement Society; Worcester County Horticultural Society, Worcester, Mass.; and Elberon Horticultural Society, Asbury Park, New Jersey.

I have received two letters from the secretary of the National Gladiolus Society and the two numbers of their National Hand Book and have sent them copies of all of our bulletins. The secretary, Mrs. Atkinson, writes that it is the earnest desire of the National Society to exchange views and co-operate with our society in straightening out questions of nomenclature.

NEW MEMBERS.

The correspondence has been very large for the past year, and includes many letters soliciting new members which have brought quite satisfactory returns and I have fourteen to my credit. Ten more sent in by other members have been sent to me, besides some more that were sent to Financial Secretary Youell direct.

I believe it would be a good idea to offer a prize to the one securing the largest number of new members for the coming year, and I will promise not to enter the contest because I think the secretary would have a little advantage in a contest of this kind. Regarding the bulletin, as chairman of the bulletin committee I would say that there are members of our society that could give us a great deal of help in making it more readable and interesting, if they would only feel so inclined. We need items of interest and material for our question box, and any grower, whether a beginner or a man of experience, can often give us valuable suggestions. Thanking those who have given us a helping hand and earnestly asking, like Oliver Twist, for more, I submit this report for your consideration.

L. MURTON GAGE.

Illinois State Florists' Association.

The Illinois State Florists' Association held a meeting at 10:30 a. m., Thursday, August 22, 1912, in the Coliseum, Chicago, President Chas. Loveridge in the chair. Secretary J. F. Ammann reported a number of new members enrolled during the convention at Chicago, and also booth rentals paid in, which was approved of. On motion it was ordered that the chair appoint a committee to draft a resolution condemning the employment of Pontiac Reformatory inmates to print matter sent out by the Horticultural Department of the University of Illinois, and recommending that such printing be hereafter done in some regular commercial establishment. Following the meeting of the association a meeting of the executive board was held, and invitations for the next place of annual meeting from Danville, Peoria and Moline were considered. — Smith of Danville withdrew in favor of Peoria this year, and thereupon Peoria was unanimously selected as the place of meeting for 1913.

Some Exhibition Novelties.

The Robert Craig Co. staged several meritorious plants, chief among which was a new Ficus. It will make a grand specimen for exhibitors and if it propagates freely should find favor with the buying public. The leaves are broad and richly veined, giving it a distinguished appearance. Crotons for which this house is famous were a strong feature. Three seedlings which had never been exhibited before would command attention in any collection. One christened America has very brilliant foliage. The habit of the plant is good and the growth strong and vigorous, making it a decided acquisition. Real autumn-leaved coloring is seen in another new one named in honor of Mrs. August Poehlmann. This is charming in every way, a really beautiful variety. Canada is another symmetrical growth and regular marking of yellow and light green. It will become a standard in the lists.

Manda's Polypodium Maudianum, while seen before, is still a novelty and was never seen to better advantage. The large plants with their long, graceful fronds and the vase of cut fronds arranged with cut Anthuriums showing its possibilities was one of the features of the exhibition.

F. R. Pierson's moss fern should be useful in a commercial way. Its dense moss green fronds will look well in table decorations. Sawyer's astermum was one of the things that stood out, attracting great attention. Its name about describes its size, as the flowers are as large as many of the chrysanthemums. It is like the well known comet in form, but fuller in the center and much larger. Mr. Sawyer says it is the result of careful selection, of a new break in the aster family. He has been very careful to save seed from only the best flowers and has produced a commercial flower that will have great sale. It was seen in all colors.

1) Poehlmann's.

One of the features of the convention was the visit to Poehlmann Bros.' enormous range of glass at Morton Grove. More than 500 persons accepted the invitation of the firm and made the trip in a special train of twelve cars. Plant A, the first and original section of greenhouses right at the station was soon filled with the admiring visitors, who although they expected to see something wonderful were every one surprised at the extent and the marvelous system everywhere apparent. The general excellence of every kind of plant, the house after house of American Beauty roses, the range upon range of carnations, the chrysanthemums, the early varieties of which were in flower all were much admired, as the masses of color made a great showing.

House after house of orchids showed the extent to which they were going into these costly flowers. $30,000 has been put into these flowers the last three years. Cattleyas and Dendrobium Formosum are the varieties mostly grown. They expect to cut at least 25,000 to 30,000 cattleyas the coming season. After seeing plant "C," which adjoins plant A, the great extent of which only added to the amazement of the visitors, a start was made for plant B, where the tea roses are grown.

Here, as at the other divisions, the most perfect order was maintained and the general excellence was commented upon, the prevailing sentiment seeming to be wonder at the fact that it is possible to have such perfection all over a place of so great extent. Mr. Nelson, the superintendent of half of plant B, described some of the details of growing, how the temperature was not allowed below 66° during the day, steam and air being on all summer long. The soil in the rosebeds, all on benches, is half manure, all sterilized or steamed before being used; then when the new plants show that the roots have taken hold manure water is given freely. This is drained through the benches and is caught in a small pond outside the houses and used again. An immense stock of young plants are grown, all grafted, and when from any reason a bench or house fails it is taken out and replaced with young stock. There is absolutely no waste or vacant space anywhere except when a change of stock is taking place. In this plant there was growing 235,000 roses, many now flowering, and others just coming out of the drying-off stage, and others that will soon be in. As to the extent of the combined three sections, one of the partners said it would make one house 35,000 feet long and 27 feet wide, or one house nearly six miles long if 27 feet in width, or 945,000 feet of ground space covered. A question that was uppermost in the minds of very many of the visitors was: How was it possible to have built such a place in such a comparatively short time?

A fine lunch was enjoyed in the large pavilion adjoining plant B after the inspection of this range. A new plant department has just been added, in which will be grown on a large scale all kinds of house plants, such as are handled by the retail store trade. This is in charge of E. G. Anderson who says that, like everything else, plants will be handled in large quantities.

E. F. Winterson.

Chairman of Chicago S. A. F. Sports Committee.

One can describe in a short article only the main features, the immense heating plants, the manure cooking and pumping system, the soil mixing, the watering, the ventilating, the cement benches, the railway and cars that carry the soil in and out, the plant staking, the cement walks and benches, the refrigerating plant and cold storage rooms, the packing, and the hundred and one other helpful things that make this the ideal establishment of its kind in this country, or perhaps in the world. All these must be seen to be appreciated.

Robert Craig said, "It would fill a book to tell it all, and then another. Peter Henderson had great ideas, but he never dreamed of a place like this."

P. O'Mara said, "This shows exceptional ability. Grant and Lee were the only generals who could handle 100,000 men. Here we have another kind of a general who has proved his ability."

"It bewilders me. The Poehlmanns are surely scratchmen in the race," again remarked Mr. Craig.

"It is wonderful to find everything in such good condition," said A. Manda.

"A great place," observed P. Welch.

"No place like it in the world for system and production," was Mr. Farquhar's tribute.

"Marvelous where all the stock goes to? Oh, no," said Samuel Murray of Kansas City. "They can sell more than they grow. I sometimes cannot get my full orders."

"New York is first in flower production, Pennsylvania next, and then Illinois, but the next census, after what I have seen today, will surely show a change," was another way in which P. Welch paid tribute to the Poehlmann and other Illinois ranges.

Elmer Smith said, "It is the best regulated range I have ever seen. The growth has been wonderful, coming right along, not stopping for a minute; it shows great management."

"It is hard to understand how such a large place can be in the pink of condition all the time," observed Judge Vesey.

"It is simply out of sight," said P. Breitmeyer. "They used 600 carloads of manure last year. The secret of the growing is in the cooked manure and sterilized soil. We could never grow roses until we discovered this trick from them here."

"We want more scientific men like the Poehlmanns in the business. They are always ready to fill up space that is not doing its best from their great surplus of young stock. It makes your head swim, the very magnitude of it," declared Stephen Mortensen.

At the station, when all were gathered together, P. O'Mara mounted a bench and in a few words introduced J. K. M. L. Farquhar, who said:

"Ladies and gentlemen: I am sure you will all agree with me that we have had a most delightful visit to a greenhouse plant that is better equipped than any other in this world.

SOME OF THE VISITORS AT THE POEHLMANN BROS. RANGE.

I recently saw the famous Rochford place near London, and I tell you candidly that this exceeds it. We have been welcomed most hospitably, and I am sure what we have seen will be an inspiration that we can carry away and that will leave a lifelong impression."

S. D. Dysinger invited them most heartily to the twin cities next year, where he assured them a grand good time.

The race of the officials of the S. A. F. at Ravinia Park was made doubly exciting by Chas. Graham and C. E. Critchell, who were holding the tape at the finish. As August Poehlmann, Geo. Asmus and W. F. Kasting, with Poehlmann leading, approached the tape the holders started to race with it and drew the already tired runners on for quite a distance, much to the amusement of the spectators.

President Thilow of the Philadelphia Florists' Club said that every and Graham's brilliant running in left got him to the ball just in the nick of time and saved the game for his side.

The exhibits of the greenhouse builders were the most complete of any convention and could not fail to be educational to the many growers who were at all times looking over the merits of the various new ideas in building, heating and ventilating.

The lunch furnished by the club in the basement dining rooms of the Coliseum was one of the most enjoyable features of the entertainment. H. E. Klunder made a very efficient captain, ushering the ladies to seats at the tables in a most gallant manner.

The bowling matches were a howling success. There were splendid alleys, good management, good humor, good bowling and a good deal that wasn't and finally the best team won for Cleveland.

The large baskets of gladioli in the Cushman exhibit contained beautiful spikes of bloom, and their arrangement would have done credit to many of the retail shops.

Chairman Rudd is to be congratulated on his idea of the book of tickets. It was very convenient and will no doubt be adopted at all future conventions.

Theodore Shober and James Heacock, who handled the Heacock Co.'s palms, sold their exhibit the first day and took many orders.

President Foley of the Chicago Florists' Club was missed by many friends, his absence being due to death in the family.

The Philadelphia delegation wanted to come to the convention the "worst way" and arrived on the B. & O. four hours late.

M. Rice & Co. report business better than at any previous convention. The entire exhibit sold in Chicago.

John Ruppert of the Dreer display said they were much pleased with the results and made many sales.

The Bayersdorfer sales force had a busy time. All four could be seen taking orders at once.

Chas. D. Ball and his son, Chas. D., Jr., appeared pleased, having booked many orders.

VIEW OF THE LUNCHEON TABLES AT THE POEHLMANN RANGE.

August Poehlmann was persuaded to speak and amid great cheering he thanked the delegates for the great pleasure it had been to have them see the establishment. He hoped they had been repaid and found something they could carry away with them. Referring to the society he deprecated any political action. He wanted to see a united society in which all were working for the good of all, the differences, if any, should be worked out by a few in committee and not by all on the floor of the convention. "Don't knock the officers in charge. They are doing their best, and all should help them," he said. He hoped all such troubles would be avoided in the future, which sentiment met with hearty applause.

Convention Notes.

J. W. C. Deake, formerly of Asheville, N. C., blew into the convention city August 8 from Twin Falls, Idaho, where he now resides. He says Twin Falls is in the center of the original Garden of Eden. The Biblical tradition of the water being cut off by the fiery sword applies to this spot. Adam and Eve probably went to Oregon, where their descendants became web-footed. Mountain Dew, which was so freely produced at Asheville, does not grow, he says, in Idaho. There are many dams there—both dams and dam sites. A dam either makes or breaks a country.

At the ladies' reception Wednesday evening Mrs. A. M. Herr on behalf of the society presented Mrs. J. W. Boone, retiring president, with a beautiful pearl and diamond brooch. Mrs. Chas. E. Maynard, secretary, thanked the ladies for Mrs. Boone, who was suffering from severe throat trouble. Mrs. Maynard says the entertainment tickets proved a complete success.

delegate should wear a flower. "Here is a convention of florists gotten together to boost the business," said Mr. Thilow, "and not one in ten wearing a flower. We cannot ask other people to do what we are not willing to do ourselves." Every one within his hearing immediately reached for roses and table decorations disappeared at once.

The baseball game was certainly a dandy. Chicago was good but the pick of the rest of the country was just a shade better. That catch of Pierson's in deep right was a peach

The Bowling Tournament.

The bowling tournament was played in the Bensinger alleys, 29 West Randolph street. It began at 10 a. m. with the ladies, some of whom proved themselves quite as proficient as the sterner sex. Mrs. Chas. McKellar of Chicago, who scored 186 and 139, secured the first prize for the highest total in two games and the high single game. She also carried off the strike prize with a total of 8, Mrs. Frank Traendly of New York won the spare prize. There were ten other prizes. Mrs. A. Smith of Cleveland won the tenth prize from Mrs. Fetters of Detroit by one pin with a score of 192 for two games.

The men's individual contest was a very strenuous affair, there being fifty entered who finished. Some others found the pace so hot they dropped out. Ed. Schultz and C. Balluff of Chicago showed they knew something of the game with their totals of 538 and 524, respectively, in three games. Wallace R. Pierson of Cromwell, Conn., famous as a grower, showed that he can also play. His score was 507. F. H. Miller of Toronto was high with 215 for the best single game. De Forest Weeks got into the prize division of the ten highest with a score of 480. The five highest in the individual contest were entitled to roll for the Brunswick-Balk-Collender Co.'s diamond medal in competition with the highest score men of the teams, and Charles Balluff, second high individual, showed his skill here also by winning the high honor with a score of 571, which was only one pin behind the grand total of Foerster of Chicago in the team race, he making 572 in the three games.

The struggle of the teams was a very exciting affair. There were nine entries. Cleveland, Chicago and Buffalo had a hot fight the first game, Cleveland winning out with 922, which proved to be high single game in the tournament. Buffalo nosed out Chicago by one pin with 809. Cleveland was also high in the second game with 899, Chicago getting 870. There was the usual great enthusiasm and cheering as one team after another would spurt ahead and raise the spirits of the rooters, whose energy and lung power never seemed to flag. All the contests were very well managed and much credit is due to Charles Graham, chairman of the sports committee, for the manner in which the programme was carried out. The scores were as follows:

Advertising: Some Wrongs to Make Right

Paper read by L. W. C. Tuthill at the Wednesday morning session of the convention of the Society of American Florists, Coliseum, Chicago, August 20-23.

Advertising—what is it?

Some say it is a hybrid tea rose.

Others, that it is a sport of Killarney.

But I say it is the American Beauty.

It is the strong rooted, long stem-out just what advertising really is. In short, it's the quickest and surest possible way of letting it be known to the greatest number that you are in business—where you are in business—what your business is. It's the shortest short-cut method between the seller and the buyer. It's the modern power that accomplishes in two years what it used to take ten to do. But it's more than a builder—it's also a destroyer; a quick, unrelenting destroyer. Therefore it needs to be handled carefully—knowingly. It quickly builds up a business that is backed up by good goods and the square deal. It still quicker wipes off the map, destroys concerns that either misrepresent their stock, or that fail to meet their customers just a little more than half way.

"Oh well," you say, "of course I do in a way believe in advertising because when I have a few thousand extra cuttings more than I can use or am overstocked on some plants, I just send an ad. to the florist papers and unload. But as for my advertising at any other time, it's ridiculous, as I send all my stock to the commission man. What's the use of advertising to them? He knows me—knows my goods."

Listen: As old as the florist business is—it's really among the youngest there is. It's just beginning to really begin. The real beginning began about ten years ago when Doubleday, Page & Co. started their Country Life and Garden Magazines. These magazines brought a message of flowers and country beauty to thousands and thousands of people who simply needed to be thus stirred into action. Soon followed other magazines like Suburban Life, House and Garden and ones of a similar nature, and then still other mediums, and even the daily papers caught the flower fever until now the love of flowers stimulated by all these publications is fast becoming a noticeable national trait. Every time one of these country life magazines gets a convert to the joys of flowers you growers have one more possible buyer of your products.

But this national awakening to the appreciation of flowers also brings with it every year a greater discrimination in the buyers. The so-called "bread and butter" carnations are fast

President Given Silver Set.

After dinner had been served August Poehlmann and several others called the people together and then President-elect J. K. M. L. Farquhar addressed the gathering and at the finish of his speech presented President Vincent with a beautiful silver set, a token of appreciation from Mr. Vincent's many friends for his untiring work for the national society the past year. President Vincent responded and after thanking his friends for the magnificent gift spoke feelingly of the Society of American Florists and the many benefits its members derived therefrom. August Poehlmann, Robt. Craig and E. G. Hill also spoke.

med, vigorous plant that yields the deep red blooms of big business successes.

Right away many of you growers begin shaking your heads, saying, "Advertising is all right for the other fellow, but my business is different. In the first place, there isn't profit enough in the flower business to stand for advertising. [Every grower knows that isn't so the minute he has said it.] Second—I have tried it two or three times, and it was just like throwing so much money down a knot hole. Third—My business has always paid without advertising, so what's the use of blowing in my money just because those blasted magazines and papers hound the life out of me; or Hot Air Tuthill gets up there on the platform and claims advertising is the American Beauty of business—the lifesaver of profits, and all that rot."

In answer to all of which, let's back up and begin all over again, and find becoming more difficult to sell, simply because the public is rapidly getting to know flowers, and insisting on better and better quality.

Now suppose I could go into one of the Chicago florist shops and ask for not only "just roses," but roses grown by one Frank Jones—and those Jones roses bore some identifying means so that I knew I was getting Jones roses. Now don't you think it would pay both the grower and the florist to get together somehow and spend a little joint money in letting the public know that Jones' Superior roses always carried an identifying trade mark? Most assuredly it would! There is just as much opportunity to trade mark Jones Superior Roses as there is Butter-Krust bread or Borden's milk. And it's going to be done.

One of your largest eastern growers, whose stock is always of the finest, has for considerable time been suffering from substitution—stock be-pointed west. He went to the party—but it still rained. You can tie up your pocketbook and refuse to advertise, but that won't stop the storm of competitors who will be getting your business away.

So much for the future. Now, let's get right down to the brass tacks of the present day situation. First, let's find a little good-natured fault with the trade papers. What would you think of a firm that put the index of their catalogue in some obscure part so you needed an index to find the index? You would say they certainly didn't have an eye to business and that an index ought to be the easiest thing to find and placed where you couldn't miss it. By the same token, what a lot it would help every advertiser in making it easy for buyers to locate his ad. if the index to trade papers were placed every time right in the front row, on the first inside page facing the cover. As it is now, the chops and stops wastes time, timber and money. He had better not begun. Make up your mind you are going to spend so much money this year—and then spend it. Send out your message each week. Keep continually chopping away. But every week chop from a different side. In other words, change your ads. Remember that advertising is intended to arouse interest—to hold interest—and to turn that interest into an order.

Last week's paper doesn't interest you this week—so how can you expect last week's ad. to hold anybody's interest this week? In preparing your ad. make up your mind whether it is going to be a sign, or a real, full-blooded ad. Don't try to mix them. A sign is to attract people who are looking for you—a sort of guide post. An ad. is to attract and convince the people you are looking for that your goods are the goods worth looking for. Very few are looking for you.

It's up to you to look for them. Having found them, it's all your fault if you don't make them remember you and your goods—not only remember, but remember to send you their orders. People are not going to bother to keep remembering you, especially when your competitor is continually remembering them by weekly telling talks in the trade papers. The indecisive, haphazard way some men start out to advertise reminds me of my neighbor who is very handy carving wood. He started out one day last week to carve out a Duke of Wellington. The Duke was a tall man and he cut the wood too short, so he concluded to make it into a Napoleon, whom you know wasn't tall. He then cut it too narrow for the broad shoulders of Napoleon, so concluded to make it into Isaac Watts, who was very thin. Then he carelessly split it, and finally whittled it into a button for the barn door.

The moral is: If you expect to get Wellington victories, cut your expenditure big enough to land somewhere besides on a barn door.

Now for the text of your ads. What shall you say in them? What do you say to your customers to get them to buy when you see them personally? Your talk sells the goods, doesn't it? Then why not use the same line of talk in your ads? Ads., after all, are only selling talks on paper. Just forget forever and ever, that an ad., to catch and win, must be clever or funny, or have some peculiar twist or turn to it. Simply be frank and tell your straight, concise business story.

THE RACES AT RAVINIA PARK, AUGUST 23, 1912.

ing sold for his that is not his. You know! He and the ad. agency I am associated with are now working on a plan to overcome this trouble. It's been a hard nut to crack. It looks as if certain kinds of advertising and trade marking were the only thing that can make this wrong right.

While the demand for flowers and plants is still at its height, and production has not yet caught up with demand, the advertising question won't receive from you the serious attention it even now deserves. But mark my word, that just as sure as anything that's sure is sure, the stimulating influence given by the magazines, is, sooner or later, going to lose its force and some direct advertising by the growers, as well as the florists, must then be done to further stimulate the business.

Just how to set the wheels of advertising working to further this result, is going to be the cause of many a headache. Some of you who have your ears to the ground have long been turning this over in your mind and when the time comes you will be ready with the answer. One of the greatest wrongs, then, to make right, is the overcoming of the impression that the flower market can escape advertising.

The way some business men refuse to get aboard the advertising train reminds me of a cousin of mine who was determined to go to an evening party. All day it rained hard. His father said that if it rained he couldn't go, but if the wind would veer around to the west, it would surely clear off. So my cousin watched his opportunity and climbed up on the barn and tied the weather vane fast so it publisher knows where it is, but it takes a regular Sherlock Holmes for one less familiar to find it.

Now a word about starting and staying. A very serious and costly wrong that advertisers ought to make right is starting in to advertise and then dropping out before the ads. have had half an opportunity to get their good, telling work in. Some men seem to think that advertising is a sort of a wizard game that should yield extraordinary results in an extraordinary short time—a kind of waving of the wand that will back a wagon up to their doors filled with orders. It's far from it, because it is a straight business procedure and not a fairy tale. No single ax-stroke can clear a forest. The woodman who

THE RACES AT RAVINIA PARK, AUGUST 23, 1912.

Illustrate it. Don't crowd your space jam full of text. Leave some white space about it for it to breathe in. If then, you have the good goods your ad. says you have, your ad. will not only catch readers—but hold them, and influence them to write you.

Don't use up any part of your space telling how poor the other fellow's goods are. You have none too much room to tell about yours the way they ought to be told about. Besides, ten chances to one, you stir up a curiosity in your readers to find out more about those other goods. Incidentally, they then find out from the other fellow some of the weak spots in yours, and promptly you have a man's size job on your hands to land the order.

One boiler firm, for instance, which has only steel tubular boilers for sale, is making sweeping statements about the absolute worthlessness of cast iron boilers. On the other hand, as a contrast, one of the firms making cast iron boilers, comes out frankly and says that "each type of boiler has its particular uses and limitations, and that each is particularly adapted for its particular purposes." Then the advantages and disadvantages of both are freely exploited. There can be absolutely no doubt in your mind which firm you would appeal to if you wanted frank, dependable advice. It's always well to keep in mind that the important things in an ad. are the buyers' reasons for buying—not the sellers' reasons for selling. Keep sharp watch on the other fellows' ads.—not so much for pointers for what to say and do, as what not to do.

If you are too much influenced by what they do, you will follow them. If you do it the other way about, you will lead them. And who wouldn't rather be a leader! As for illustrations—by all means use them where possible. But for heaven's sake use illustrations that illustrate what you want to sell. Don't use the smirking picture of a girl showing her pearly teeth if you have carnation supports to sell. Show the supports. Better yet, show them in use. Leave the pearly teeth girls for dentists' ads.

"How much space should I use?" This is a question advertisers are continually tussling with. Lincoln said "a man's legs should be just long enough to reach the ground." By the same token, you should use enough space to show your article and tell your story as it should be told. Any more space is extravagant—any less is costly. Costly, because it's sending a boy to do a man's work. Generally the boy goes off swimming or to the ball game. Unfortunately, there exists a certain fear in some advertisers' minds that if they don't use some space in all the papers in the field, the omitted ones will in various ways conspire against them to the serious detriment of their business. In short—a mild form of blackmail, if you please.

On the other hand, there are other advertisers that feel that because they place a large amount of business with certain papers, they can dictate the policy of the paper, even to the absurdity of either excluding or giving undesirable locations to competitors' ads. Both points of view are not only highly absurd, but indicate a mighty poor business vision. Unquestionably, too small space is being used in too many mediums. Cut down the mediums half, and increase the space proportionately. In this way you cut out repeated duplication of circulation and give yourself a chance to both show and talk about your products as they should be shown and talked about.

In choosing your medium, let us always bear in mind that the ones having the largest circulations do not necessarily represent the largest buying numbers for your particular product. Large circulation often means hundreds and thousands of readers who are absolutely worthless to you. One of the trade papers, for example, has ten thousand subscribers—another only four thousand. One of our customers has proven, beyond a doubt, that for reaching a certain limited class with whom their business is large, that the four thousand paper yields greater returns than the ten thousand one.

The C. A. Kuehn Store, St. Louis, Mo.

Exterior View of Building.

On the other hand, this same concern is paying for a thirty thousand circulation in one magazine to reach a certain few—a very few, not more than five hundred, in fact—and it's a remarkably cheap buy for them at that. Cheap, because it's the only medium that reaches their logical customers the way they want them reached. The greatest help to an advertiser that established advertising agencies of reputation have to offer to their customers, is not the mere writing of the ads., but the directing of the advertiser's money in channels that shall be the most productive, regardless of personal friendships or "influences," channels concerning which these agencies possess facts, figures, and experiences to prove the soundness of the treatment and expenditures advised. This, then, is the bringing of advertising to the basis of a science, a profession that bids fair to make dollars by both the intelligently saving and spending of advertising moneys.

The way advertising used to be placed reminds me of the story of a couple of darky janitors who were sweeping the snow off neighboring steps. Suddenly Tom's feet slipped out from under him and he slid down the steps on the end of his back.

Rubbing his head thoughtfully, he slowly remarked to Sam: "Say, Sam, the Bible says 'the wicked they stands in slippery places; I don't see how the debbil they does it!'"

THE ROSE.

The Heating System.

Now is the time to take a careful survey of the piping and boilers. There is usually more or less repairing to be done or improvements to be made in and around the boiler room and adding an extra coil here and there. This is essential, for there is nothing that keeps the profits down like an inefficient heating plant. It is a great mistake to run any boiler at its fullest capacity, and in ordering a boiler at least 25 per cent over the amount of work the boiler should do should be allowed for. This refers to a small plant, where perhaps the grower (just starting) cannot afford a large boiler; but we have found that there is little economy in buying a boiler when starting into business that will only take care of the amount of glass erected the first season, for as a matter of fact one usually increases the number of houses annually, and the return tubular type of boiler of from 50 to 100 H. P. will always be found to be the best investment. We have reference to steam and always advocate the installment of steam where roses are to be the main crop.

There are many systems of steam heating, coil arrangements, etc. The gravity system is the most common in use and is entirely satisfactory. This calls for a cellar dug to a depth sufficient to keep the coils in the houses (flows and returns) at least 3 feet above the top water line of the boiler. If one is situated so the gravity system cannot be used or prefers, the vacuum system may be installed. This will allow the boiler to be kept up to the grade of the greenhouses, the air being drawn from the pipes and the steam pulled through them by suction caused by a vacuum pump. (This will be found very efficient). We do not intend to write an article on boilers, however, but to give a few suggestions in reference to them, as at this time there may still be a few who are in doubt as to what style of boiler and what method of heating to follow. The return tubular boilers are mostly of two types, the portable and the "brick-set." The portable, with its self-contained firebox, ashpit and saddle attached, is made in any desirable horsepower. This boiler takes up comparatively little room and if well covered with asbestos will be found very handy and economical. The "brick-set," as its name implies, is the type that is incased in masonry, with soot chambers in the rear, clean-out door and usually stationary grates with fire-brick lining and bridge wall. There is very little difference in price, so you pay your money and take your choice.

There are many who prefer the cast iron type of boiler, either used singly or as a battery of two or more. There are many types in this material on the market and some of them are splendid heaters as well as neat appearing and easily handled. But one should select the highest possible grade and one that has been on the market and in general greenhouse use for years—one that has proved its efficiency. Those advertised in the trade papers are of the best as a rule. At the same time one should take time in selecting and arranging the heating system, and any boiler concern will gladly furnish estimates and outline a system best adapted to their respective makes. But by all means have the boilers and coils in good condition in time and don't be stingy in the valve arrangement. We have seen boilers fitted up to heat 28,000 feet of glass without valves at the boiler, depending on the valves placed on the mains in the greenhouses, with no means of closing down for ordinary repairs on a cold night, which means at times that the fire has to be drawn or banked "dead" for repairs to coils. It won't be long now before our plants will require a little heat at night or early in the mornings, so that the boiler should be ready to start at a moment's notice from now on.

See to it that the glazing is gone over and the houses well painted. Now is the time to do these little things that count, that are so important. If there is anything a plant struggles against in vain it is a leak, and a leaky rose house is consequently very much of a failure. Another little matter is the ventilating machinery. The self-oiling machines should be gone over and if found gummed in the gear holders or reservoirs they should be cleaned thoroughly and refilled, all gears cleaned and greased if exposed, and last but not least oil the hanger of the ventilating sash. If this has not been attended to you will be surprised to find how easily the sash will lift after a good lubricating. Very often if the hinges are neglected they become rusted at the joint and so stiff that the screws are often drawn.

Caring for the Plants.

Now for the plants themselves. As we stated in our last article, the cultivating is most important. The benched stock especially will require frequent stirring, but don't gouge around the plants too deeply, merely keep the surface stirred so that the watering can be done uniformly. There isn't much that can be done at present except careful disbudding and tying, and frequent dusting with grape dust or sulphur with the bellows. Don't wait for mildew or green fly, but keep well ahead of it. It may be that in many sections it would be too warm to close down to fumigate, but by using liquid nicotine according to directions there will be no trouble from greenfly. During a continued rainy spell be rather careful when watering and ventilating. Use plenty of air-slacked lime dusted around in the walks and under the tables and by all means avoid draughts. The plants can stand an extremely higher temperature on bright days much better than to reduce the temperature by having the plants blowing around. If the soil should dry out too rapidly a light top dressing of old hot bed manure or shredded cow manure should be applied, especially where the root action is quite free as may be the case with the early planted stock. It is a good plan to prepare a good pile of manure by turning frequently and storing in a sheltered place for later mulching. If the weather, though clear, is cool, syringing once a day will be sufficient. After August 16 the afternoon spraying should cease.

FLORISTS' PALMS.

Avoid Crowding.

At this season of the year the palm growers are quite likely to get crowded for space, for the early potted stock will now be growing rapidly and every additional leaf counts. This crowded condition is quite likely to result in some ill-shaped plants unless one takes the precaution of setting over and rearranging the benches from time to time, turning those plants around that are inclined to draw to one side, and thus encouraging them to grow in the way they should. A few iron plant-stands are found very useful during this period, not only because they break the monotony of arrangement, but also on account of the space that is gained by raising a few of the plants above their fellows on the bench.

Speaking in a general way, it may be said that the fan-leaved palms suffer more from overcrowding than do the pinnate-leaved species, for they are more likely to get a long-drawn habit of growth when insufficient space is given them to spread in, and a lanky Latania or Livistona finds few friends, unless it may be among the thrifty decorators who are always looking for bargains of that character. Of course the grower may shake out these lanky specimens and bunch three or four of them together in as small a tub or pot as the roots will go in, thus providing some useful plants for decorative purposes after they have become established. But after all, a single Latania, well grown, is vastly superior to these artificial masses of foliage, and by well-grown is meant a Latania with eight to nine good leaves, free from insect scars and of good color and texture, and growing in an eight-inch or ten-inch pot with twelve to fourteen good leaves of stocky habit.

Such a plant is truly ornamental, and seldom fails to find a buyer, even though the Kentias are the favorite florists' palms. The only disadvantage about growing Latantias of such a grade is that they occupy quite a lot of space, and the trade generally hesitates about giving a fair price for such plants in proportion to the space and time they have occupied in the grower's greenhouse. It is also a good practice to grade the stock in the benches as far as possible when setting over and rearranging them, culling out those that are weak in habit or imperfect in growth, and keeping these culls by themselves. The culls may then be either made up into decorative stock, or sold off as a job lot.

A little care in the matter of sorting and grading stock at this period, while the trade is comparatively dull, will greatly facilitate the work of picking out orders for shipment later in the season. The grower is sometimes hurried when the fall rush is on, and he may fail to remember for the moment that the retailer will expect to get twelve salable plants when he orders a dozen of a given size, and not ten good ones and two poor ones. And in his hurry, the grower does not notice how conspicuous those two runty plants are until he finds they have thrown a shadow over the future orders of that retailer. Of course there are some entirely accidental errors made in filling orders during a busy season, and when such errors are discovered the wisest plan is to adjust them at once, and not to look on the purchaser of the goods as a possible crook simply because he discovered your error.

THE C. A. KUEHN STORE, ST. LOUIS, MO.

Interior View, Looking to the Rear.

But possibly the reader will say that this is not supposed to be a lecture on business ethics, so we will return to the subject of palms. The chief essentials of culture at this season are first to give plenty of water to all well-rotted stock, never allowing them to get dry at the root. Secondly to syringe vigorously every bright day, the syringing during August to be done preferably in the early afternoon, in order to retain a moist, growing atmosphere in the houses. Shade the glass moderately, that the foliage may be properly protected from the sun without making the houses so dark that the plants become very soft and the leaves thin in texture. Air freely both day and night, so long as the weather will permit and if the nights should turn cold toward the latter part of the month, have enough artificial heat on a pipe or two to correct that chilly feeling that is often experienced in an unheated greenhouse even in August.

Watch out for insects, scales, thrips, mealy bug, aphids and red spiders, which are the most likely visitants of this character. There is not one beneficial insect in the whole list, so it behooves the grower to keep busy with insecticides in addition to a good pressure of water. If any palm seeds are received let them be sown at once, either in flats or in a bench as may be most convenient, for the majority of the species grown by florists have been brought from foreign countries, and may have been packed for several weeks, or even months, and some of these species lose their vitality quite rapidly.

Duty on Statice Wreaths.

Answering an inquiry of a customs collector as to whether statice wreaths, or wreaths of cut flowers, preserved, are dutiable at 25 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 263 as cut flowers, preserved, or at the rate of 60 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 438 as wreaths of ornamental flowers, James F. Curtis, assistant secretary of the treasury, says:

"The United States Circuit Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania (T. D. 29853) held that certain statice wreaths (Ex. 5) were properly dutiable under paragraph 251 of the tariff act of 1897 as natural flowers, preserved.

"Wreaths, however, were not specially provided for in the tariff act of 1897, but are provided for eo nomine in paragraph 438 of the present tariff act. Moreover, a comparison of paragraph 251 of the former act with the corresponding paragraph in 263 of the present act shows that a significant change has been made which is apparently applicable to the merchandise under consideration.

"Paragraph 263 contains a provision for 'natural flowers of all kinds, preserved or fresh, suitable for decorative purposes,' while under paragraph 263 'cut flowers, preserved or fresh,' are provided for.

"The department has before it a sample of statice from the flowers of which the wreaths in question are made, and it would not appear from an inspection of the flowers that they fall within the category of 'cut flowers' as ordinarily understood.

"The Board of General Appraisers in Abstract 2774 (T. D. 26655), and the authorities cited therein, held that natural as well as artificial ornamental leaves fell within the purview of paragraph 425 of the tariff act of 1897.

"In view of this finding and the fact that there is no provision in the present law for natural flowers, preserved, while 'wreaths' are provided for by name, I am of the opinion that statice 'wreaths' are properly dutiable under paragraph 438 of the tariff act as 'wreaths' at the rate of 60 per cent ad valorem. It appears, however, that it is the practice at the present time to assess duty upon these wreaths at the rate of 25 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 263, and you are accordingly directed 30 days from the date hereof to assess duty upon statice wreaths at the rate of 60 per cent ad valorem under paragraph 438."

THE CARNATION.

Transferring to the Greenhouse.

Planting in is the most important part of the cultural routine at this season, for the early part of August should find this part of the work completed, the stock being much easier to care for and to control when under glass than it is outdoors, especially if the weather should take an unfavorable turn. A small plant will make more growth in the greenhouse if the season is a dry one, than it will in the field. Digging and hauling in both require some care, and also prompt action, for the less the roots are exposed to the air the better it is for the plant, and the sooner it will recover after planting. Firm planting in the beds and prompt watering both help in the general result, and frequent spraying for the first four or five days is needed if the weather is bright and windy, the latter being a weather combination that is quite common all along the Atlantic coast at this season, and one that is very trying to newly planted stock.

It is also necessary to keep the houses rather close for some days after planting, gradually increasing the ventilation as the plants show signs of growth, until at the end of a week after planting full ventilation may be given unless the wind is too strong. Then the staking and tying is in order, for it does the plants no good to sprawl over the ground for a length of time and to have the soil washed over the foliage by the operations of watering and syringing. Growers have various opinions in regard to the best way to support the carnations, but the use of a three-legged wire support around the plants in order to keep them in shape until the growth becomes long enough to reach the longitudinal wires, is a very practical method. This keeps them in bounds for the time being and makes it much easier to get among the plants for the frequent weeding and cultivating that is so needful for the next month or two.

After a period of dry and hot weather, such as we had in the early part of July, there is almost sure to be an outbreak of red spider on the plants in the field, and as though this of itself was not enough to keep the grower busy, there are frequently found some thrips working in the points of the growths. Little can be done with these pests in the field, for insecticides are not readily applied there, nor are they as effective as the same strength solution may be in the greenhouse, but after the plants are safely housed and sufficiently recovered, then comes the renewed fight against the insects, and while the weather remains bright there is every opportunity for free syringing in order to dislodge the red spider. Thrips may be overcome by regular sprayings with nicotine solution, and this may be assisted to some extent by fumigation at such times as the weather may be cool enough to allow of closing the houses for a few hours at night, but the spraying is the main reliance of the grower, from the fact that nicotine used in that way is less injurious to delicate colored flowers than it is by the fumigating method.

Common salt is frequently used in solution in fighting red spider, and when used in moderation is not injurious to the plants, but there is a limit to its usefulness, and especially as the days grow shorter, for at that season the frequent use of salt will keep the foliage too wet during the night. This has not been quite an ideal season for plant growth outdoors, being too cold at night during the spring and early summer, and afterward too dry, the result being that in most eastern sections the plants are small. This makes it necessary to double up many plants in the houses, in order to make the benches fill up properly, and this doubling process uses up a large amount of stock, with the result that there will probably not be a great surplus of plants in any locality. Plants of the Enchantress group are, as usual, among the largest, while Beacon and Mrs. Ward seem to come next, though White Wonder also makes a well-balanced field plant, and in fact is a good grower generally.

CRHYSANTHEMUMS

Chrysanthemum Buds.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

It is advised sometimes to strike chrysanthemum cuttings early and then take the tops of these and propagate them. Would not this anticipate the taking of buds next summer? Would not the first buds that show on such plants be second crown or terminal buds? F. D. B.

The main object of propagating chrysanthemums early and then take cuttings from the plants is to increase the quantity. Most of the plants grown for commercial blooms are propagated in May or June, and a plant rooted early will produce three or four cuttings that can be taken at that time and the older plant then thrown away and at the same time obtain the cuttings on the old stock plants, which will give the grower a much larger stock than to allow the stock plants to grow on until that time and then have only the tips of the suckers which have grown. This would not be advisable in growing exhibition blooms, for plants for this purpose must be propagated early and grown on to the flower, but for the commercial grower plants rooted before May grow too tall and occupy too much space. Plants rooted prior to May will generally set three buds, a first crown in June or July, a second crown in August, and a terminal bud in September, the first two being buds which stop the growth, and if the laterals which start from the eyes below the bud are allowed to grow, the bud will never produce a flower. The terminal bud marks the end of the plant's growth and is surrounded with other buds. On plants rooted in May and June there frequently will be but two buds set, which would be called crown and terminal, and plants rooted in July will often set no crown bud, the first bud showing being the terminal.

The plants which are rooted early and from which the cuttings are taken will not produce a high grade flower if grown on, for the cutting back invariably hardens the plant so that the blooms are of inferior grade, but will make plants for the production of sprays or can be planted out for stock plants for another year. W.

Pinching Out Side Growths.

One of the very important items of the general routine of the care of the plants being grown for cut flower purposes is that of pinching out the side growths. It is now drawing along to the time for many of the varieties to be forming the buds, consequently it is most important that the surplus or side shoots be cleaned off close so that the full strength of the plant be given to the main growth. It is a serious mistake to allow the side growths to become two or three inches long before removing them, particularly so at this period, when the plant is hardening up preparatory to setting its bud. For all the time they are left on they are sapping the strength from the bud. Another very important matter that requires our constant attention is that of watching the condition of the soil in the beds, which owing to the very dense growth that the plants have attained is very liable to get too wet by the frequent syringing that the weather at this season makes necessary. On the other hand there are likely to be places in the bed that do not get sufficient water, which means that the only way to keep the soil in an even condition throughout is by a close examination every few days.

Continue to attend to the tying up of the plants, never allowing the stems to become crooked before doing it. Also do not overlook the work of keeping down the aphids to save a lot of trouble and disappointment later on, because any neglect in this respect when the plants are forming their buds will give the aphids a chance to get a foothold down in the bud from which it is very difficult to remove them. To have a fine bloom ruined by this pest getting down in the petal is one of the worst disappointments a grower can have. In a very short while some of the Golden Glow and Smith's Advance will be showing color, making it necessary that the blooms be shaded to protect them from burning. When these varieties are growing in a house by themselves it is not a very difficult matter to give shade by shading the whole roof, but where they are growing in the same house with the later varieties the whole roof cannot be shaded and other means has to be provided. A good scheme is to fasten some cheese cloth above the plants, but there must be at least 3 feet of room between the blooms and the cloth.

The late varieties that have been planted during the last month will be by this time rapidly getting hold of the soil. They should be encouraged in every way to make a clean growth. The bush specimen plants being grown for exhibition will require many attentions right along. They should not be pinched back any more after this date except for an occasional growth that is getting beyond the others. These should be stopped back. These large plants at this stage will be in need of some extra nourishment, which should be given them either by mulching or by watering with liquid manure. It is also time to begin to arrange to train out these large plants and until ready a few stakes should be set throughout the plants to protect the branches. C. W. JOHNSON.

WATER GARDEN.

Some Popular Water Lilies.

New, rare and select water lilies comprise the best, most desirable, ornamental, attractive and decorative of aquatic plants, and naturally receive the greatest attention and admiration. The beauty of these is enhanced by other miscellaneous aquatic and sub-aquatic plants. Take, for instance, a pool, small or large, planted solely with water lilies, compared with another containing also plants of cyperus, alternifolius papyrus, variegated calamus, scirpus and also some marginal and sub-aquatic plants nearby. The calla pool is certainly the most picturesque, natural and pleasing. As I said before, the water lilies are most attractive, especially with the varied colors of red to crimson. White must never be omitted, nor yellow with the additional shadings of red and orange and the varied tints of blue, from the palest lavender and violet to purple shading. With all these colors harmonizing and restful is it any wonder that the water garden is always a center of attraction?

We have had the pond lilies with the addition of the hybrids for several years. Still we find a great many persons not familiar with them and desirous of further acquaintance, while others are familiar with most that are in cultivation. Few new varieties of merit have been introduced of late, though a number of varieties have been raised and introduced in France and Germany. Several of the French varieties are too much alike and the distinction is not so decided as to warrant so high a price as is usually demanded for a novelty. But as with novelties in other lines, these are tempting and catchy, though often disappointing. Among them I would mention a few very good ones: Nymphae graziella, a beautiful globular flower. In the bud a rich deep yellow, when open it is orange red. The flowers like many others change with age to deeper hues. It is a free flowering, moderate grower, but lacks size, is useful and distinct but too small, though good for tub culture. N. Sioux, a beautiful yellow flower, shaded red, lanceolate petals, flowers standing above the water, an improved N. Seignoreti. Like all yellow lilies or flowers with red and yellow, the leaves are blotched or spotted with brown. N. Paul Hariot is one of the best of the yellow bi-colored water lilies; it is probably a larger flower than N. chromatella, but I have not seen it where well established but under adverse conditions. It is a grand and magnificent flower, of the largest size among hardy nymphs, clear yellow with delicate shadings of red at base of petals.

Of American varieties N. Eugene de Land is very beautiful in the odorata group. We had a few years ago: N. O. rosea, then N. Caroliniana, then N. O. Luciana, then N. W. E. Shaw and best of all N. Eugene de Land. The two former are lost to cultivation. The latter are fine varieties in exquisite shades of rose pink and rich in fragrance. N. Helen Fowler, another of American origin, is intermediate between the tuberosa and odorata types, with the vigor of the former. The flowers are of deep rose color, borne on stout stems, making it useful for cutting purposes. It is very fragrant and is certificated by the Horticultural Society of New York. Among the older nymphæas one of the old favorites is N. Laydikeri rosea, now seldom met with, being difficult to propagate. As it is undersized it is not often called for, but it is a charming variety of a delicate pink, changing successively through darker shades to a deep rose pink. In the tender nymphæas there is nothing new of great merit, though next season should produce something good. N. Grossherzog Ernst Ludwig—the name is far too long for American pronunciation—is somewhat like its name, being extra large. It is a strong grower, flower light violet blue, big though not so choice as N. Pennsylvania and N. pulcherrima, but good for a large pond.

Among the other aquatic plants I would mention Linnanthemum plumieri. This is a most interesting plant, very similar to L. indicum, the well-known water snowflake with white flowers beautifully fringed, but in this case the flowers are a rich yellow; a very pretty and interesting aquatic plant. Another interesting plant is pondederia Montevidiensis. As its name implies it is a South American plant somewhat like our native p. cordata, but the leaves are not cordate and deep shiny green, but cordate lanceolate, and taller than p. cordata. The flowers are a pale blue, a nice addition to the aquatic list. In the select hardy nymphæas of distinct colors desirable for moderate sized ponds the Martiana group is most promising. N. M. Albida, white; N. M. rosea, pink; N. M. Chromatella, yellow. For a dark variety N. Jas. Beydon and gloriosa, five distinct and well-tried varieties either single plants or in groups. The following may be mentioned: For naturalizing in larger ponds, N. O. Luciana, W. B. Shaw, pink; N. M. Chromatella, yellow; N. Gladstoniana; N. Richardsoni; N. tuberosa maxima, white. Nelumbiums are all good for any place, N. speciosum being the only one to obtain in quantity and at a reasonable price. T.

TRUSTEES MEETING.

The quarterly meeting of the trustees of the Worcester County Horticultural Society was held in Horticultural Hall, Worcester, Mass., August 8, with President Edward W. Breed in the chair. George McWilliam, gardener for J. Marston Whitin, Whitinsville, Mass., was presented two silver medals, awarded for orchids exhibited at the cut flower show in Horticultural Hall, March 7. Leonard C. Midgley was presented the silver medal awarded to him for the seedling carnation, "Eureka," March 7. William Anderson, gardener for Bayard Thayer, South Lancaster, Mass., was given the silver medal awarded him for the seedling amaryllis, March 7. It was voted to give William Sim, the Cliftondale sweet pea specialist, a silver medal instead of the ten dollar prize awarded him for his display of sweet peas, July 18.

FREDERIC W. TAYLOR, chief of agriculture in the Philippines and life member of the Society of American Florists, cabled greetings to the members of the society assembled in convention at Chicago but the message was unfortunately delayed in Washington until after the close of the proceedings.

IN AN EDITORIAL on the distribution of flowers to Pittsburg school children on the last day of the vacation schools the Leader of that city says: "The little child is the natural fellow of the bird and the flower, and it seems especially beautiful that the hands of the little ones were filled with fragrant, glowing blossoms as a memento of that final day of associated vacation. Children are entitled to flowers. It is their right. When they are deprived of flowers they are deprived of their natural right. The child of civilization is not fully cared for, and started upon the way of good citizenship when he is merely fed and clothed with the minimum of food and clothing. He needs something more than air to breathe, meat to eat, and water to drink. He has a soul, too, which needs more than meat and drink."

NEW YORK.—King George of England will be an exhibitor at the third International Flower Show to be held here in April. R. F. Felton, the king's florist, will have charge of the exhibit, which will consist of orchids. This will be the first time the product of the royal conservatories have ever been entered in a competition outside of Great Britain.

Home Gardening Association.

W. E. Telling, a prominent citizen, has promised the managers of the exhibition of the Home Gardening Association, which will be held at Cleveland September 4 to 7, that he will place his fine tropical collection at their disposal for exhibition. The exhibition will be held in the Sweetland building, Euclid avenue. Florists and others who wish to make exhibits while not contesting for prizes will be given a special section for their displays and a large number of florists have agreed to exhibit flowers and plants. At the close of the exhibition all the flowers will be sent to the hospitals.

Fisher Corrects Battle Creek Item.

August 26, 1912.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:

In the last issue of your paper there appeared an article as follows: "Battle Creek, Mich.—The H. A. Fisher Co., retail florists of this place, made an assignment August 8 for the benefit of their creditors." Inasmuch as the H. A. Fisher Co. have had nothing to do with this business arrangement we deem it only just that you publish the facts of the case. The truth of the matter is that J. A. Fisher of the firm of J. A. Fisher & Co., of Battle Creek, Mich., has sold his interest to Mr. Aldrich, of Battle Creek, and had nothing whatever to do with the H. A. Fisher Co., of Kalamazoo, Mich. We would therefore deem it a special favor by your publishing this letter and oblige,

THE H. A. FISHER CO., Kalamazoo, Mich.

Geo. Fisher, Vice-President.

Prevention of Hail by Electricity.

A new type of hail destroyer is being tested in France on a large scale. The device is essentially a very large lightning rod of pure copper grounded by means of a copper conductor. According to the theory of the inventors, these instruments, by their effect upon currents of atmospheric electricity, are capable of preventing the formation and fall of hail stones.

The French Government, through a special commission of Senators and Deputies, is studying the process and has encouraged experiments to be undertaken. A chain of hail destroyers of the new type will be established in important vine-growing districts which heretofore have suffered heavily from hail storms, notably in the Departments of the Gironde, the Beaujolais, the Loire Inferieure, and the Charente. In Paris an "electric Niagara" will be installed in the Eiffel tower and supplementary posts will very likely be established on the dome of the Pantheon and on an edifice in the northern part of the city.

The great damage wrought by hail and lightning in France each year, with losses estimated at approximately $20,000,000 to $30,000,000, will cause the experiments now under way to be followed with close attention. Many of the posts have been completed and the results obtained will be carefully noted and studied. In order to determine the efficacy of the new device with any degree of accuracy it is realized that systematic tests during a period of years will be necessary, and to supervise the work a committee of defense has been formed, some of whose members are representatives of the French government.

The belief that electricity is largely responsible for the formation of and precipitation to the earth of hailstones has long been held by some French savants, and efforts to utilize lightning rods for purposes of protection have been previously made, but it is now believed that the instruments heretofore employed were of an imperfect type. It is claimed that the new "paragrelle" with its multiple points and perfected apparatus is capable of drawing down such great quantities of electricity from the clouds as to render them innocuous as to hail and lightning. Although this may not be a generally accepted theory as to hail, it can at least be said that experiments along the lines indicated will be of interest for scientific purposes.

The new device is comparatively inexpensive to construct. In a general way it may be described as a rod of copper at least 130 feet high terminating in a crown, or aigrette, of copper blades. The base terminates in a large pool of water, preferably flowing water. Church steeples, factory chimneys, or structures specially built may be utilized for obtaining sufficient elevation, but care is necessary in fulfilling all the requirements as to conductivity. According to the plan now followed the rods are erected at intervals of about 6 miles along a line transverse to the usual path of hailstorms. It is stated that encouraging results have been obtained thus far wherever the instruments have been placed.

Copies of the following printed reports relative to the "paragrelle" are forwarded for loan to interested Americans through the Bureau of Manufactures: (1) Report of a special commission of the General Council of the Seine, 1911. (2) Report to the Senate Committee on Agriculture by Senator Audiffred, 1912. (3) Report of the "Comite de Defense contre les Orages et la Grele," March 30, 1912. (4) Illustration of a "paragrelle" reproduced in the French scientific journal "Le Genie Civil," September 30, 1911.—Daily Consular and Trade Reports.

Oil Heating Apparatus.

ED. AMERICAN FLORIST:—

We are thinking of installing an oil heating apparatus for our horizontal tubular boilers, namely, one steam and two hot water boilers. We have about 20,000 square feet of glass. Kindly advise us as to cost of installing, also comparative figures of cost of burning oil versus pea coal at $4.35 per ton in cellar.

F.

Ontario.
The letter signed "F." does not give any idea of the price of crude oil for fuel, but if the location is anywhere near the oil regions, at the price mentioned for pea coal, it would be found cheaper to use oil, and besides there would be a large saving in labor. The cost of installation will depend to a considerable degree upon the style of burner used, since some are quite simple and inexpensive while others are much higher priced. For the three boilers, if they are of medium size, the cost of installing oil-heating apparatus, including materials and labor, would probably range from $150 to $200, aside from the cost of a storage tank for the oil and a tank wagon for hauling it.

TRADE VERY QUIET.

The demand for stock the past week has been quiet and all kinds of flowers with the exception of orchids are in great oversupply. A great improvement is to be seen in the quality of the roses which are rapidly taking on the normal condition for this season of the year. Killarney and White Killarney roses are exceptionally fine and in great abundance and American Beauty roses are now coming in in fine condition with nicely shaped buds of excellent color on long straight stems with the best of foliage. Mrs. Aaron Ward, Radiance, Prince de Bulgarie, Melody and Sunburst roses are also arriving in fine shape and have a fairly good call. Gladioli are a glut everywhere but the quality of the stock is supreme and it is a shame that such exceptionally fine America, Mrs. Francis King and Augusta that are arriving on the market now should be sacrificed at such low prices as they have been the past week. Asters are of course also in great oversupply and the quality in some instances is very fine; some exceptionally nice branching varieties of all the different colors can be obtained. Lilies are in a great oversupply and dahlias are beginning to be more plentiful and there are some flowers of a very good grade now making their appearance. There is still a great quantity of outdoor stock and a large supply of hydrangea is to be had with a great amount of rudbeckia, helianthus, marigolds, feverfew, daisies, candytuft and all other outdoor seasonable flowers. Golden Glow chrysanthemums are more plentiful and greens of all kinds are in good supply. The trade is now anxiously looking forward to the early frosts, when the mass of cheaper flowers will be cut off and trade will be more brisk. The convention, which was a very successful one, is over and the few remaining visitors yet in the city are about ready to take their departure. The market on Tuesday was much firmer with both the local and out-of-town trade quite brisk. The weather is much cooler and the prospects are very bright for a record fall. The first white chrysanthemums, Smith's Advance, arrived this week and are magnificent blooms of A1 quality.

NOTES.

A party consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. McKellar, Mr. and Mrs. George Asmus and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Ayres of this city entertained Mr. and Mrs. Frank Traendly of New York at the Wayside Inn, Morton Grove, on August 25. Mr. Traendly and wife had made arrangements previously to return to New York on the 5:40 train over the Michigan Central but they were having such an enjoyable time that it was nearly 5 p. m. before the party realized what time it really was. The majority of the party thought it was out of the question to attempt to make that train but Mr. McKellar came to the rescue by giving the New Yorkers one of the fastest auto rides they ever experienced and landing them safely at the depot barely in time to catch their train. Fortunately the officers were not on the alert, otherwise one of the prominent local wholesale men would have been arrested for exceeding the speed limit. Figure out the distance to Morton Grove and the time needed to make the 5:40 train and you have the guilty party.

Wieter Bros. are receiving an enormous supply of roses and some very choice American Beauty, Killarney, White Killarney and Richmond are now obtainable at this establishment.

This firm will have a large supply of chrysanthemums this fall for the plants are in grand shape and promise large crops.

Arthur Peterson of Escanaba, Mich., entertained Mrs. Kuhn and her daughter Frances of New York in this city this week. Arthur's friends do not like to tell any tales out of school but they say that he is likely to be a benedict very soon. Oh, you wedding bells!

Mrs. A. Kindler is very well pleased with the results of the Raedlein Basket Co.'s exhibit at the S. A. F. convention and says that her firm will be busy packing baskets for several weeks to fill the orders that were taken at the Coliseum.

L. Hoeckner, the Clybourne avenue florist, delivered several large funeral designs to the Goldman residence on August 26 when the funeral of E. G. Goldman, vice-president of Riverview Park, was held.

H. W. Koerner of Milwaukee cordially invites all the local growers to attend the Western Dahlia and Gladiolus Association's show at the Wisconsin state fair in the Cream City in September.

Arthur Pisternik, with Bassett & Washburn, has returned from his vacation and John Horstman of the same firm leaves this week to enjoy a well earned rest.

John Kruchten says that the gardenia supply still is very short but that his grower's plants are looking fine and will be in crop soon.

E. R. Tauch has returned to his home in Marquette, Mich., after having had a real good time at the convention.

Hoerber Bros. are featuring a very fine grade of My Maryland roses at their store this week.

The master mason degree was conferred upon Wilder S. Deamud, Friday, August 23, in Landmark Lodge, No. 422, by his grandfather, H. H. Wilder, who is master mechanic of the south park system. Mr. Wilder was made a mason in Landmark Lodge and in 1887 was worshipful master. This is the first time he has conferred the master mason degree since leaving the chair. After work on the six candidates had been done all the chairs were filled by past masters. Wilder Deamud was a little over 21 years of age when the degree was conferred and is some day likely to hold the same position in Landmark Lodge that his grandfather once held.

Tim Matchen says that the stock in Peter Reinberg's greenhouses is in excellent shape and that all the visitors to the convention who visited his firm's large range were agreeably surprised and well repaid for their visit. Mr. Matchen has been feeling pretty lame since the ball game at the convention and says that never again will he fall for the lure of the diamond. Just let another convention come to this city and it's dollars to doughnuts he will be Johnny on the spot.

Poehlmann Bros. Co. is cutting a large supply of all kinds of roses and other seasonable stock and particularly noticeable at the store this week are a fine grade of Smith's Advance chrysanthemums and some white orchids. The supply department is well stocked up and fall orders are coming in very freely.

Fred Lautenschlager, Kroeschell Bros. Co.'s boiler man, is always on the job and his latest stunt was to sell a boiler during the exciting baseball game at Ravinia Park last Friday, August 24. The buyer must have been a visitor who was pleased to see the S. A. F. All Stars win.

J. F. Kidwell says that trade is pretty fair at the Chicago Flower Growers' Association's store considering the present market conditions. Mr. Kidwell like several other wholesale men, thinks that the aster is a thing of the past and ought to be discarded.

A. L. Vaughan & Co. are making preparations for a busy season and the outlook is very bright for a record fall. W. E. Lynch, the well known wholesale man, is now with this firm and extends a cordial invitation to his many friends to pay him a visit.

R. E. Jones with the Advance Co., has returned to his home in Richmond, Ind., after a most enjoyable visit at the convention. Mr. Jones has the honor of being the youngest life member in the Society of American Florists.

U. J. Virgin, wife and daughter, left for their home in New Orleans on August 26, after a most enjoyable visit in this city. Mr. Virgin is one of the best known florists in the south and has a great many friends in this vicinity.

A. T. Pyfer says that the Chicago Carnation Co. is all through planting at their greenhouses in Joliet and everything for fall is well under way. His firm's new carnation, Herald, is doing fine and promises to be a winner.

A. B. Bonballet & Co. of Wichita, are shipping an exceptionally fine grade of gladioli to the E. C. Amling Co. A. B. Bonballet & Co. grow gladioli very extensively and are now trying out 60 new varieties.

John Evans' local friends were pleased to see him able to be about at the S. A. F. convention and to hear that he has fully recovered from his recent mishap.

J. A. Budlong is still supplying his customers with a fancy grade of lily of the valley and is also well fixed on all leading varieties of roses.

The next regular meeting of the Florists' Club will be held at the Union Restaurant, West Randolph street, Thursday, September 5.

Zech & Mann are showing an unusually fine line of stock with roses and lilies showing up exceptionally fine.

Fred Krauss, with the E. F. Winter-son Co., is spending his vacation with friends in Michigan.

Louis Wittbold is suffering considerably from a severe attack of hay fever.

DEMAND IS INCREASING.

The week ended with a growing demand and a healthy increase in sales of cut flowers. Stock of all kinds keeps coming in increased quantity and the quality is generally good. Valley is again more plentiful and the stock is exceptionally fine. Virginia heather salpiglossis and delphinia is good stock with a fair demand. Asters are sold in large quantities but at low prices. Gladioli too are cheap, considering quality offered. Roses are in excellent condition. Southern wild smilax can be had for decorations in limited quantities now. Easter lilies are good and are in good demand.

GENERAL CONDITIONS FAIR.

"Fair" expresses in a word the general condition of last week's market. The demand kept up fairly well but the supply was almost too great. The demand was both local and from out of town. Asters proved the best seller the entire week. Many more good white ones might have been used the first days, while toward the end of the week there were barely enough of them. Of the other colors there was just about a sufficiency. This flower alone realizes its natural price. Roses did not seem to enjoy the usual strong call they generally receive. Only the best ones sold well. Medium grades moved slowly and short not at all, even at sacrifice prices. American Beauties continued to sell but some days even they were not cleaned up. The Giganteum continues to realize a fair price owing to the average shortness of the cut. They are of good quality. Gladioli, that is the good ones, sell, but at very low prices. The green goods line is amply supplied but ferns alone sell quickly.

NOTES.

C. E. Critchell went east from Chicago. He will take a trip up the St. Lawrence river and on the Great Lakes and return through Michigan. According to present plans he will return to this city in about a month.

Jos. Beran of the J. W. McCullough Son's Co. stopped at New Castle, Ind., on his way home from Chicago.

The Hill-Heller Co. is rapidly getting its fixtures in place and will soon be ready to open its new store.

The Cincinnati Cut Flower Exchange had quite a run on fine asters last week.

Mrs. Jos. Volz passed away at her home in Cheviot on Saturday.

BUSINESS STILL DULL.

Extremely warm weather still prevails and trade is duller than ever. Large quantities of flowers are coming in. The wholesalers hold out special inducements to purchasers in big lots, anything to escape the dump pile. Tuberoses, asters and roses are especially plentiful. American Beauty roses are coming in in increased supply but their keeping qualities are poor. With theater and school openings within two weeks the market will show a more normal condition. There is very little demand for gladioli.

NOTES.

Julius Koenig, our city forester, has returned from his vacation. He visited New York, New Jersey and Washington. Mr. Koenig said that he found St. Louis in the matter of street trees as well up as any city he visited. He strongly advocates the planting of red oaks on our streets. They are especially free from bugs and need less pruning than the present varieties used here, which are mostly sycamore and maple.

At H. G. Berning's large quantities of flowers were seen but the staff, Otto Berning, Herman Niehaus and Arthur Kring, have a knack of cleaning out somehow.

Miss Matilda Waldman, who has now entire charge of her father's store, expects an increased business this fall. She has a fine location and a fast growing trade.

Andrew Meyer, Sr., was a visitor to the market again this week, having charge of his son's store while he attended the convention. He reports good business.

Some of the finest asters seen here were at George Angermueller's during the past week. Fred Alves and Al Gumz are in charge of the store and are hustlers.

Many of the visitors have returned and speak highly of the liberality and good treatment shown by their Chicago brothers during the past week.

L. H. Archias, of Sedalia, Mo., accompanied by his wife and daughter, stayed over Saturday in St. Louis and took in the sights.

Nathaniel Kingsley, of the Mullanphy Flower Co., has Wm. Seeger's work to do as well as his own. Mr. Seeger being in Chicago.

Ed. Loyet is going to handle an increased supply of goldfish at his store. He has built a new and very pretty aquarium.

George Schriever, of C. A. Kuehn's, has his hands full during the absence of the boss, who is in Chicago.

Louis A. Giger, of Council Bluffs, Ia., passed through here on his way home from the convention.

Advices received from Alex Siegel, at Mackinac, Mich., report fine weather and a good time.

Frank and George Windler speak highly of Chicago and enjoyed their visit very much.

Wm. S. Smith has returned from his vacation. W. F.

St. Paul.

TRADE EXTREMELY DULL.

Business the last week has been extremely dull and with all kinds of outside stock coming in in such an abundance a slump in most of the outside flowers is the result. Gladioli, asters, sweet peas and dahlias are coming in in the best of shape but the demand is poor. Inside stock is also moving slowly.

NOTES.

The Minnesota state fair board offers this season $1,853 in premiums for plants and cut flowers and the St. Paul florists no doubt will be represented as exhibitors. Decorative plants and cut flowers will be staged and on the different days baskets, table decorations, wreaths and panels will be exhibited. Gus Malmquist of Minneapolis has charge of the staging of exhibits. The state fair board have this season beautified their grounds with more bedding stock than in the past. G. Rudolph has charge of the landscaping and bedding and he has carried out some exceptionally fine bedding schemes which will be in fine shape by fair week, September 2-7.

J. Christensen is cutting a fine lot of the new Sunburst rose. The blooms are in fine shape and he experiences no trouble in disposing of them. He has one house planted to Sunbursts and from all indications will cut a good many this season.

The publicity committee of the flower show is using the stationery of the different business houses for advertising the exhibition. The committee prints on the envelopes in large red letters the words: "Boost the Flower Show."

E. W. Reed of the Holm & Olson's landscape department, accompanied by a crew of men, left last week for Glacier Park, Montana, where they will lay out the Great Northern Railway Co.'s grounds.

The St. Paul florists who returned from the Chicago convention are all on the job again and all are well pleased with their trip.

C. Bussjaeger, the Dale street florist, had the misfortune to break his arm. He will no doubt be laid up for a month or more.

C. N. Hanson is cutting a fine lot of Killarney roses these days, but he says he finds an exceptionally poor market.

The St. Paul Floral Co. is busy remodeling and getting its place shaped up for the coming season.

Victor Huot, of Duluth, spent a few days in St. Paul last week on his way to Montana. C. F.

New Castle, Pa.

New Castle, located in the midst of a rich agricultural region, has in recent years greatly increased in prosperity on account of the location here of a great tin plate industry. As a result business in general is in a flourishing condition and the florists are prosperous. In addition to the regular florists there are several large growers of vegetables under glass.

Butz Bros. have a good store, 35,000 square feet of glass and several acres in asters, gladioli, cannas and other stock. They have had a great cut of asters and have been shipping to Cleveland, O., Pittsburg and other cities. On account of the smoke and dust from factories near their range, they have given up rose growing and will use the space for carnations, pot stock and chrysanthemums.

Members of the Wemschenck family have gone into vegetable growing on a large scale. W. H. Wemschenck has one vegetable house 120x600 feet and another 90x226, besides several smaller houses.

J. J. Beck's range being some distance from town and further away from the factories, he continues to grow roses and a variety of other stock, having also a retail store in town.

The John C. Moninger Co. of Chicago is now erecting two houses for another firm, Wemschenck & George, which will have an aggregate glass area of nearly 40,000 square feet.

J. S. Hennon & Son have greenhouses at Waupum, with a good retail store in New Castle, which is well managed by C. E. McGrath, formerly with Butz Bros.

The Fischer range has been bought by Peterson & Engstrom, who also grow vegetables. The Fischer Bros. now devote all their attention to their retail store.

C. J. Witz & Sons have also an extensive range where both vegetables and flowering plants are grown.

DEMAND GROWING.

Conditions have materially changed during the last week for both supply and demand. The short period intervening before the opening of school has caused the return to the city of many pleasure seekers, resulting in a stiffened demand, which at present is more noticeable at the downtown shops but will shortly extend throughout the trade. There is a demand for flowering plants and very few to be obtained. Hydrangea paniculata has all cleaned up on sight. The E. James Co. is sending in some nice Bostons that are selling quite well; a lot of dwarfed Retinospora obtusa, one foot tall, cleaned up readily for $2.50 each retail. Cattleya dowiana is established a favorite with many discriminating patrons. This handsome variety, being a distinct break in color from the usual commercial kinds, is often effective where the purple tones would not harmonize. Good roses of any kind are scarce, American Beauties, rather poor, moving at $1.50 a dozen; Ulrich Bruner has jumped to $1 and $1.50 a dozen for best; Killarneys and My Maryland have advanced in price but not in quality. These with a few Richmond bring 25 to 50 cents a dozen, according to grade. Cecil Bruner goes at 8 bunches for a dollar. Aaron Ward is in demand but very scarce. Cat-tleys are coming in slowly, barely enough for the call; carnations are also coming in and are poor when they do. A limited number of mums are arriving, mostly Monrovia, bringing $2 per dozen. Lilium giganteum is not marketed but may be had from Pelicano at $1.50 a dozen stems. Valley is good at $1 for three dozen; Amaryllis belladonna is plentiful, the demand light, as blooms minus foliage do not sell well. The deluge of asters maintained over two weeks ended suddenly with a jump to 25 cents per dozen for choice, prices to correspond for inferior. Gladioli remain steady. A few sweet peas are to be had at 75 cents a dozen bunches, the same rate cleaning up every violet that shows. Green goods are plentiful.

NOTES.

The trade in general is taking an active interest in the fall show to be given at the Fairmont by the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society October 23-26. While there is some complaint that the fair commission is dilatory in starting the actual construction of the fair, it is a pleasure to note that there is nothing slow about the landscape department. Under the able supervision of Superintendent of Parks John McLaren, landscape engineer of the exposition, many thousands of sturdy young trees and shrubs are growing vigorously in the temporary nursery, shortly to be moved to the exposition nursery, which covers some 30 acres in the Presidio Reservation. An extensive range of glass will shortly be built on this plat, which is all piped, fenced and ready for occupancy. A gang of expert tree lifters is constantly engaged lifting and boxing for removal large palms, conifers, shrubs, etc., many of them weighing from 2 to 5 tons each.

The tone of letters and postals arriving from H. Plath, D. MacRorie and Aug. J. Rossi would indicate these merry travelers are having a superb time at the various points of interest on their eastern trip. The heartiest and best wishes of the trade is extended to them.

Beaver Falls, Pa.

J. J. Bolton is busy and takes a cheerful view of life. He has about 18,000 square feet of glass and a good business.

W. S. Kidd's activities are divided, like ancient Gaul, into three parts. He has a store at Beaver Falls and one at New Brighton, with greenhouses at Beaver.

ATHENS, GA.—S. M. Cruce, who recently established a modern greenhouse here, has instituted a contest to select an appropriate name for the place.

BUSINESS DULL.

The business of the past week was as good as was expected, for nobody was expecting much. Funeral work and the seasonable quota of bouquets or bunches comprised most of the trade. The season is now at hand when the thrifty suburban housewife goes into her garden, gathers a lot of old-fashioned flowers, makes them up into cheap bunches and brings them into the market places and sells them to the discomfiture of the store men. The people who comprise the greater part of Pittsburg's summer population seem to prefer garden to greenhouse stock. Of gladioli and asters there seems no end, particularly the gladioli. The stores have used them for display purposes with good effect. The large and long stemmed asters are now at their best and they fill a large place since the carnations disappeared. There are good greenhouse roses on the market, but with the average customer their demand is limited. A few chrysanthemums have appeared but they are not factors in the market. Liliun auratum and rubrum, grown outside, are plentiful.

NOTES.

On a recent visit to the greenhouses of Mrs. E. A. Williams we noticed a fine stock of Cibotium ferns. There is one house full of them in pots ranging from 8 to 12 inches. A great stock of poinsettias is also coming on at this range. There is a good stock of Boston and Amerpholia ferns and many of the smaller table ferns. Palms are kept to supply the needs of the extensive decorating business done from Mrs. Williams' Pennsylvania street store.

The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. has been receiving fine roses from its Bakerstown range during the past week. Treasurer Clarke of this firm has returned from his vacation and is again working among the boys with his sleeves rolled up.

E. C. Ludwig and family have reached home after attending the S. A. F. convention. Edward Ludwig brought with him the splendid Wittbold cup, which he won with other prizes in the athletic contests.

In going over the hills and vales of Pittsburg one comes on small greenhouses in unexpected places. Among these is that of A. M. Sturchell of Homewood, who does a good business in plants.

Emil Schloss, of Schloss Bros., New York, is in the city on his way home from the convention and is improving the opportunity by taking a lot of orders for his fine line of ribbons.

Louis Hahn, who has over 10,000 feet of glass at Westview and who has been a vegetable grower, has taken up the culture of flowering plants.

The Pittsburg Tree, Hardy Flower and Plant Co. has now a fine location at 537 Penn avenue and is making active preparations for fall business.

Faulk Bros. of the Allegheny Market do a large business in funeral work and their large stand is always attractive with good fresh flowers.

On account of the unseasonably cool nights some rose growers who have not had heat are fighting mildew.

J. A. Muller, representing the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., also visited this city the first of this week.

A noteworthy feature at the greenhouses of the Blind Floral Co. is their stock of crotons.

Edward McCallum has returned from his vacation and is hard at work.

All are well pleased with the results of the convention.

Washington.

BIG FUNERAL ORDERS.

The florists of this city were taxed to the limit August 24 for the funeral of the late Thos. Noyes, president of the Washington baseball club. J. H. Small & Sons had the family order for a casket cover of valley and orchids, and several other large designs. Gude Bros. had the largest orders for funeral work they have experienced for some time. They had the orders from the baseball clubs of the country. Some of the largest were Shrine emblems from fellow lodge members, a wreath from the National Baseball Commission, and wreaths and other designs from baseball clubs and owners, as well as from other friends.

Mrs. Fowler has installed an auto delivery wagon. She says it saves her four hours on the road. G. C. D.

Braddock, Pa.

Drewes, the Florist, has a good store in a first class location at Sixth street and Braddock avenue. He is very business-like in his methods and has a fine trade.

Towns (or boroughs) are so thick in this region that it is sometimes hard to define the lines. We believe that Edward Frederick is nearer to Homestead than to Braddock, his address being Lincoln place. He has 25,000 square feet of glass and grows many plants.

Arthur James of East Liberty, Pittsburg, who formerly had a store here, has sold it to H. C. Buchler, former manager of the South View Floral Co. of Pittsburg and Carrick.

Mrs. Hannah Porter is located at North Braddock and has a thriving business.

David Kelly has a limited glass area but does considerable garden work.

Nassau County Horticultural Society.

The monthly meeting of this society was held at Glen Cove on August 14, President J. F. Johnston in the chair. H. Ortiz, Glen Cove, was elected an honorary member. The judges of the evening's exhibits were Mackenzie, Gilder and Marshall, and the awards were as follows: One vase asters, mixed, George Barton, first; muskmelon and six ears of corn, J. W. Everatt, first; twelve vases of asters, certificate of culture to H. Boettcher; vase of Lycoris squamigeri, certificate of culture to J. W. Everatt; honorary mention to Frank Petroccia and J. Marmalote for tomatoes; honorary mention to J. Marmalote for two cucumbers. It was decided to hold the annual summer outing at Karatsonyi's, Glenwood, on August 27. Prizes are offered at the next meeting for twelve gladioli, six onions and three heads of celery.

JAMES MACDONALD,

WOOSTER, O.—The Ohio State Horticultural Society met here August 16.

HARTSDALE, N. Y.—This town's second annual flower show will be held September 6-7.

PITTSBURG, PA.—Julius Solteis of 5206 Dresden avenue is believed to be dead as his whereabouts, if he is living, are unknown.

Railway Gardening Association.

The sixth annual meeting of the Railway Gardening Association opened at Roanoke, Va., at 10 a. m., Tuesday, August 13, President Foy in the chair. F. H. La Baume, agricultural and industrial agent of the N. & W. railway, welcomed the guests on behalf of his company. Mayor S. P. Sifert represented the city, W. L. Shaffer, the chamber of commerce, and Mrs. F. E. Brown the Women's Civic Betterment Club. Geo. B. Moulder responded. The afternoon and evening sessions were devoted to the reading and discussion of papers in line with the work of the organization.

Some minor amendments to the constitution and by-laws were adopted. According to one of the amendments passed the president, secretary and treasurer shall each hold office for one year. The term of one vice-president shall expire each year and his successor be elected for four years. The election of officers resulted as follows: C. H. Tritschler, Nashville, Tenn., president; John Gipner, Niles, Mich., vice-president for four-year term; John Rinck, New Orleans, La., vice-president for three-year term; C. J. Andrews, Morton, Pa., vice-president for two-year term; R. D. Prettie, Winnipeg, Man., Can., vice-president for one-year term; W. F. Hutchinson, Sewickley, Pa., secretary; J. K. Wingert, Chambersburg, Pa., treasurer.

There were 75 or 80 present and the meeting was highly successful. While the members were busy with convention matters Tuesday, the ladies were given a reception at the club room in Elmwood Park. Wednesday there was an auto ride over the city and on Thursday the visitors made a trip over the Shenandoah Valley division of the N. & W. The secretary's report showed an increase in membership to 86, a total of 97 with the 11 associate members. The report of the treasurer showed the society to be in fair condition financially.

SIXTH ANNUAL CLAMBAKE.

Fifty-four persons were in attendance at the sixth annual clambake of the Albany Florists' Club at the Abbey, Glenmont, on Saturday afternoon, August 24. The day was beautiful and the surroundings all that could be desired. Under the direction of the committee, Louis H. Schaefer, chairman, all the details went off in a manner most pleasing. Henry Parr and son George, managers of the Abbey, provided facilities for entertainment in the way of automobile track, merry-go-round, baseball grounds, etc., all of which were enjoyed by those so inclined. The bake was indeed an enjoyable affair.

NOTES.

At the flower show of the Lenox Horticultural Society of Lenox, Mass., last week Carlos Deheredia, formerly known as Count Carlos De Heredia, of Spain, captured the gold medal offered for vegetables. He showed a magnificent array of 22 different kinds. Allan J. Jenkins, superintendent for S. P. Shotter, Shadowbrook Farm, and Mrs. Robert Winthrop and the Elm Court farm were awarded prizes for annuals and perennials.

Henkes Brothers, Newtonville, are about to break ground for two houses, King construction, 28x75 feet, for Easter stock. It is expected that they will be completed in October.

PITTSBURGH, PA.

SUPPLY GREATLY EXCEEDS DEMAND.

The conditions in the wholesale cut flower market could hardly be worse than they are at present. The supply of most everything far exceeds the demand. Outdoor flowers especially are arriving in great quantities. Most in evidence are gladioli, asters and hydrangeas, which have to be disposed of at extremely low prices. Roses of the new crop are arriving in great number and as the bulk of these shipments are short stemmed and poor quality they have to be disposed of quickly by the box. As many of the growers have planted Sunburst, Lady Hillingdon, Bulgarie and Aaron Ward, the supply of these varieties is such at present that they do not sell for more than the standard kinds, and the outlook is that the coming season will see a sufficient supply of these newer varieties of roses to satisfy all demands. The supply of American Beauties is increasing and the quality is good, but the prices obtained are lower than previous quotations. There is a sufficient supply of lily of the valley to meet all calls. Orchids are scarce, in fact very few are on the market, which tends to keep prices for these up to top notch figures.

NOTES.

The visitors to the Chicago convention are returning in parties of three or four, and all those who have got back are enthusiastic about the kind treatment and entertainment provided for them by the Chicago Florists' Club.

Wertheimer Bros. are much elated because of the many awards they received at the convention; also because of the large business they booked there.

Frank H. Traendly and Mrs. Traendly stopped off at Buffalo to be the guests of Wm. F. Kasting for a few days.

Jonathan Nash, of Moore, Hentz & Nash, with Mrs. Nash is spending his vacation at Sea Cliff, L. I.

A. T. Bunyard reports business at his Newport, R. I., branch as far exceeding his expectation.

E. Bonnot and Mrs. Bonnot, of Jersey City, arrived from Europe Friday on the Mauretania.

John R. Weir and Mrs. Weir are at Bradley Beach, N. J., the guests of Joseph S. Fenrich.

P. O'Mara and party are returning by way of the Great Lakes.

E. C. Horan is spending his vacation at Lake George, N. Y.

Philadelphia.

TRADE VERY QUIET.

Rah! Rah! Rah! for Chicago. The brethren there were alive to the occasion and the visitors never had a dull moment. The exhibition was great, this city as usual taking up about half of the space—leave out the gladioli and greenhouse exhibits, and we believe this was the case. All reported good sales. There is little of an encouraging nature to be said of the business here. It has been very quiet indeed. The rose stock is improving, there being a better body to the flower and added length to the stems. Very fine double pink Killarneys are seen. Kaiserins are also much improved. The new crop of American Beauties are also offered. The asters look like a different flower, the recent rains doing them a world of good. Some of the best whites look like small chrysanthemums. Hydrangea Paniculata is handled in quantity and gladioli are so plentiful that only the best command any sort of a price. Mamman Cochet roses from out of doors are a welcome addition to the rose section. This outdoor summer rose makes a beautifully formed flower, being much larger than the greenhouse whites at this season.

NOTES.

Ravinia Park is a very pretty place, admirable for entertaining such a large crowd. Nobody from this city played in the ball game, which was a red hot contest. Bowling? Did anybody say bowling? Well, we were first anyway—from the bottom. The nearest Philadelphia got this year to the prizes was when Shober came in third in the race for men 200 or over and received $5.

Raymond Kester, long the buyer for Pennock Bros., has resigned his position and gone west to open up a store in Indianapolis for the Hill, Lemon & Heller Co., which is starting a chain of stores for the sale of cut flowers at low prices. Mr. Kester is a bright young man and we wish him success.

Edward Reid and family spent one day at the convention, coming in on Thursday. From Chicago they went to visit relatives in Dakota.

Craig's new crotons, America, Canada and Mrs. Aug. Poehlmann, made quite a hit at the convention as did this firm's Ficus.

Dennis Connor had his hands full showing the fine points of the Foley flat rafter houses.

Reading, Pa.

John H. Giles is among the busiest of the growers. In addition to his extensive range and store, he now has a large nursery to look after. About a year ago he purchased forty acres of land at Sinking Spring, Pa., which is being rapidly transformed into a first class nursery, the product of which, in connection with his greenhouses, will enable him to supply practically everything that is needed in his large and increasing retail trade.

We regret to state that Mrs. Clara Blackman, who for twelve or fifteen years has conducted a retail store at 116 N. Ninth street, has been very ill for the past eight weeks. She has been removed to the country, where it is hoped that the change of air will cause improvement. During her illness the store is conducted by her son, Paul Blackman, Jr.

A noteworthy feature at Reading is the railroad gardening. The Reading Company has a "kitty" cornered piece of land near their station. It is surrounded by buildings, train-sheds, etc., and, possibly because it could not well be used in the interest of work-a-day ugliness, it has been landscaped and made into a beauty spot.

Like their brethren of the craft in other cities, the Reading florists are feeling the summer dullness, though it cannot be said that they are idle. Those who have greenhouses are repairing and making active preparations for another season.

Frederick Frank, who succeeded J. H. Anderson in the ownership of the Brookside greenhouses, has been building and repairing and is getting the range in good shape. His asters under glass are very fine.

G. W. Beears, formerly at 206 N. Ninth street, has taken a partner in the retail business and removed to 9 N. Second street. The new firm name is Beears & Palm.

J. C. Bauder is making great improvements in his greenhouses by tearing out old board benches and substituting concrete.

Herman Stabenow, formerly of Stabenow Bros., is improving his place and building up a good business.

Boston.

MARKET CONDITIONS POOR.

There is nothing worth mentioning in the flower line. Asters still dominate the market. Some of the late clip are certainly fine. There are some good roses coming in from young stock, and then there are some badly mildewed. Golden Glow mums are arriving. The demand is not up to the supply. Vacationists are returning home, and we hope next month that trade will again run in its usual channels.

NOTES.

Henry R. Comley, 6 Park street, has a sign in his window "Scotch Heather expected September 15." We may expect to see all patriotic Scotchmen blockading that street for a piece of the genuine flower.

The election of John Farquhar to the presidency of the S. A. F. brings to Boston another honor.

Those who have returned from the convention report a fine time and feel repaid for the trip.

John W. Duncan, of Spokane, Wash., attended the park superintendents' convention.

Carmichael of Wellesly has begun glazing his big King greenhouse.

MAC.

GREENVILLE, TEX.—E. D. Barlow is doubling the capacity of his greenhouse. When the building is finished he will have 5,000 square feet of glass.

QUINCY, ILL.—F. William Heckenkamp has opened a new floral shop and completed an addition to his greenhouses.

Richard Forrest, long a well known florist here, has turned over the business to his daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Swarthout, who has a good store at Main and Bean streets. James Brownlee, formerly of Kenilworth, Ill., took charge of the greenhouses for Mrs. Swarthout about a month ago and is getting them in good shape. Though Mr. Forrest claims that he has retired and that he is growing old, he is yet active and in good health.

Earl J. Sedman is now in charge of the store of Warrick Bros., and the Washington Floral Co., 25 North Main street. W. J. Warrick is also largely interested in the latter company. They are now planting a fine stock of carnations.

A. A. McGowen grows large quantities of bedding plants. He had between twelve and fifteen thousand geraniums this season, and other plants in proportion.

Murray C. King, formerly with the A. W. Smith Co., of Pittsburg, now has the retail store at 60 South Main street, formerly occupied by E. C. Dunn.

Edward Culberson has sold his interests here and removed to Oregon.

Reed, senior member of the Reed-Snee Co., of Claysville, has gone to Washington, D. C., and will continue his journey to the Chicago convention.

Uniontown, Pa.

Uniontown is this week celebrating its first "Old Home Week" and active preparations have for some time been in progress. It is probable that the florists will have an active part in the entertainment of the former residents.

Charles Cramer, though active as a banker, owns 35,000 square feet of glass, where a variety of stock is grown and also has a good store.

Stenson & McGrail have a large glass area and grow a great variety of stock.

Hagan Brothers have a modest range and seem prosperous.

Wm. B. Steele has a good retail store in an excellent location and is doing well.

Connellsville, Pa.

The old and reliable firm of P. R. De Muth & Sons continues to do a good business. In fact, they not only supply their own store but have a good shipping trade to neighboring towns. Chas. M. Little, formerly with Chas. Cramer of Uniontown, has recently taken the management of their store here. Mr. Little is a very capable and genial young man and will doubtless be successful.

The region around this city has suffered severely this summer from heavy rains and consequent floods.

We are growing all our Kentias above 6-inch size in neat Cedar Tubs, made especially for us, with electric wire hoops, and painted green. These tubs cost several times the price of pots, but we sell the plants at the same price as though grown in pots. The buyer has the advantage of receiving his plants without breakage of pots and in handsome tubs in which they have become well established, and in which they will continue to do better than in pots.

When in Philadelphia Be Sure to Look Us Up

We are easily reached—only 25 minutes from Reading Terminal, 12th and Market Streets, Philadelphia. We have fine train service—fifty trains each way every week day—so you can suit your convenience, both going and coming. Then you will see our Palms of all sizes, from 2½-inch pots to 12-inch tubs. We are strong on Decorative Palms, in 7-inch, 9 inch and 12-inch tubs (made-up or single plants), which we can supply in any quantity. All our Palms are home-grown (not an imported plant on the place), and well established in the tubs. They are strong and healthy.

With increased glass devoted to our Palms, our stock is much larger than ever before and never in better condition.

Next annual convention, June, 1913.

EVANSVILLE, IND.—The Ohio Valley Seed Co. will build a new warehouse in the near future.

GIBSON CITY, ILL.—The Oxley Seed Co. will open up for business here in the near future.

ERFURT, GERMANY, August 15.—Cool and continued wet weather is likely to cause poor seed crops in this district.

CHICAGO.—Prices on the Board of Trade August 28, for grass seed were noted as follows: Timothy, $4 to $5.25 per 100 pounds.

THE fifth annual convention of the Vegetable Growers' Association of America will be held at Rochester, N. Y., September 4-6.

VAUGHAN'S SEED STORE, Chicago, received two carloads of Dutch bulbs August 28, probably the earliest date on record for such large shipments.

WELLAND, ONT.—The Lake Shore Seed Co. and the Dunkirk Seed Co. have combined and will build a two-story brick building here, 45x100 feet.

GENERAL seed trade reports received by THE AMERICAN FLORIST indicate a very general shortage of vegetable seeds and consequently high prices.

QUINCY, ILL.—The Eber Seed Co. has incorporated with a capital stock of $15,000. The incorporators are Suzanne Eber, William H. Eber and Eugene Eber.

FRENCH flower seed crops were looking very well the first week in August. Many German wholesalers have plantations there and there seems to be plenty of almost all stock.

REPORTS from Illinois Red Top seed producing districts indicate a good yield of seed, but a week or so of good drying weather will be necessary to enable the farmers to commence threshing and begin to put the seed on the market.

THE Frisco railroad is operating ten demonstration farms in Arkansas and Missouri for the purpose of showing the farmer how to increase his annual yield. Particular attention is paid to the choice of seed, only the very best qualities being used.

AT Chicago the onion set crop has been lifted and is in the crates. Sets are rather large this year, owing to the cool wet season. The yield is perhaps 15 to 30 per cent better than last year but quite a percentage of this increase will be taken out in screening.

MARSHALLTOWN, IOWA.—The Marshalltown Seed Co., a new firm organized for the purpose of raising and selling field and garden seed, has incorporated with a capital stock of $10,000. T. C. Cartwright, Fred S. Hynds and F. G. Pierce are the incorporators and also the directors.

Catalogues Not Affected.

W. Atlee Burpee writes under date of August 24: "Let us rejoice; Congress will probably adjourn tonight after passing modified Bourne plan as agreed by the conferees, but expressly stating 'This act shall not in any way affect the postage rate on seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots, scions, and plants as fixed by section 482 of the postal laws and regulations.'"

Catalogues also are entirely unaffected, remaining as now.

Bulb Transaction.

This was a claim by W. N. Alke, made and N. M. Alkemade (trading as W. N. Alkemade & Co.), of Noordwijk, Holland, against W. Smith, Nurseyman, Kirkburton, for £88 12s. 3d. for bulbs supplied.

A counter-claim was raised for bad quality of bulbs supplied. The evidence was very conflicting (as is usual in these cases), and also very lengthy, the case lasting over three days.

The plaintiff stated he had supplied 100,000 Narcissus poeticus and 450,000 Spanish Iris, and defendant would not pay, alleging bad quality. In cross examination he stated the narcissi were bought in England and then grown one year in Holland, but he did not sell them as "Dutch." Some amusement was created by the suggestion by his Lordship, that if these were "Dutch," those grown two years in Holland were "double Dutch."

Mr. Smith, defendant, stated that when plaintiff called in 1909 he complained of previous lot of 60,000 Poeticus and arranged to buy a further lot of 100,000 at 3/6 a thousand, a reduction of 2/- on previous price, and that conditions were that they should be Dutch grown and give a flower for each bulb, but goods were afterwards invoiced at 4/6. He sold some of these and planted the rest, but all were alike, unsatisfactory and did not show enough flower to pay for labor. Evidence was called to support statements as to bad quality, but no evidence was proffered as to conditions of the bargain.

His Honor in summoning up said, the question was whether the bulbs were sold with warranty, and if so whether they complied with it. He said that defendant had seen plaintiff's catalogue which included the condition that no warranty expressed or implied was given. Defendant could not tell of a single instance in which he had bought a bulb with a warranty, expressed or implied, and it was clear that he never ventured to sell one in that way. The reason of it was obvious—nobody could tell what would happen. The vendor had no control over the matter whatever. There was not a shadow of foundation for the statement that the bulbs were to be sold at a reduced price of 3/- per 1,000 or any stipulation that they should be Dutch grown. Defendant claimed that the goods were accepted on the condition that payment should be made as the bulbs flowered. He might have made that condition to himself, but he never communicated that to the plaintiff.

Judgment was given for plaintiffs for £87 5s. on the claim, and for plaintiffs also on the counter-claim.

The case is instructive as showing the necessity of a clear statement in writing of the conditions to a bargain, also that those who buy "bargains" do so at their own risk. It is further useful as showing there is a value in the non-warranty clause though it may not be relied upon to cover every case. —Horticultural Advertiser.

Value of the Finished Fertilizer.

Control stations are, or at least ought to be, more concerned with the nature of the finished fertilizer than with the nature of the components of that fertilizer, according to a writer in the American Fertilizer of July 27. If it could be shown that any given fertilizer shows the requisite amount of food material in an available form, it would suffice to safeguard the interests of the farmer, and the source of such materials then becomes of secondary importance. Recent tests made at the Rhode Island Agricultural Experiment Station seem to bear out the opinion that wet processing will render inert nitrogen available, but, as pointed out by the experimenters, the results were not conclusive. Extended investigations of the changes involved in the process and accompanying field tests are necessary for an ultimate decision. It was shown, however, that the wet process did materially increase the availability of such low grade ammoniates as were under observation. It is common opinion that most of the inert compounds yield their nitrogen content after the second year in the ground, and if the wet mixing supplies the nitrogenous needs of the first crops, it will supersede preliminary acidulation of these materials as now practiced.

New Planter.

A new planter invented by R. Allen, Mason, Okla., according to the Scientific American, will plant the seed at varying depths and thereby secure a better stand. As with this planter some of the seed are planted near the surface, while other seed planted nearby are planted an inch deep, the farmer using this planter will be certain in all cases of obtaining a good stand no matter what the weather conditions may happen to be.

"The Kenilworth Strain" of Giant PANSY Seed

Must Not be Compared with the flimsy Trimardeau

It is much larger and of good substance; the immense flowers of 3½ to 4 inches are of perfect form; every tint and shade is produced in striking combinations and endless variations of beautiful colors and markings. The stock plants are most critically selected. It is rich with shades of brown, bronze, red, mahogany and many others too numerous to mention. Light, Medium or Dark Mixtures.

Boddington's "Quality"

Christmas=Flowering Sweet Peas

WE ARE SUPER-HEADQUARTERS

All true stocks of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas will be scarce this season. Some varieties are a total failure owing to the exceptional season in California this Spring. Our advice to intending planters is to order at once.

Mr. William Sim, Clifondale, Mass., the great sweet pea specialist sows our seed almost exclusively.

Our stocks of Christmas-flowering Sweet Peas have stood the test for years, and we can refer you to the largest growers of this increasingly popular flower, as to the trueness and quality of our seed, earliness of blooming period and strength and habit of plants.

The following varieties are the "best by test" and include Zvolanek's and our own introductions, grown for seed from selected stocks by the leading California grower and specialist in Sweet Peas.

Our output last year was nearly 3,000 lbs. Few kicks and plenty of testimonials as to quality, germination and trueness to type.

We Can Make Immediate Delivery of the Following:

BODDINGTON'S EXTRA-EARLY CHRISTMAS WHITE SNOWBIRD. An exceptionally early Sweet Pea for indoor flowering—will bloom six weeks after sowing. Color clear white, upon long stems; habit fairly dwarf and of exceptionally free-flowering qualities. Without doubt the finest early white for indoor planting. We sell one grower in Pennsylvania 35 lbs. of this variety every year; name on application. Oz. 25 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 75 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.25, lb. \$2.00.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS PINK. This is the earliest and most profitable and useful Sweet Pea in cultivation, as by sowing the seed under glass in latter part of August, flowers can be cut from Thanksgiving on during the Winter months. Oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. 85 cts., lb. \$1.50.

BODDINGTON'S CHRISTMAS WHITE. A companion to our Christmas Pink. Just as free and profuse a bloomer. Oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. 85 cts., lb. \$1.50.

ANGELINO. Self pink; new variety. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.75, lb. \$4.50.

CANARY. Similar to the above, but flowers of an exceptionally good yellow. Oz. 35 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.00, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.75, lb. \$3.00.

CHRISTMAS METEOR. Scarlet; fine open red flower. Oz. 35 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.00, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.50, lb. \$2.50.

CHRISTMAS STELLA MORSE. Creamy buff standard, wing slightly tinged with pink. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.75, lb. \$4.50.

FLAMINGO. Color scarlet; free-flowering and early. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.75, lb. \$5.00.

FLORENCE DENZER. Pure white. Oz. 25 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 75 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.25, lb. \$2.00.

LE MARQUIS. This is the same color as Princess of Wales, violet; has very large flowers. Oz. 25 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 75 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.25, lb. \$2.00.

MRS. ALEX WALLACE. Lavender; very scarce. Oz. 35 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.00, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$1.50, lb. \$2.50.

MRS. F. J. DELANSKY. Daybreak pink. Oz. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.50, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.25, lb. \$4.00.

MRS. GEO. LEWIS. Large, pure white, wavy flower. Oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. 85 cts., lb. \$1.50.

MRS. E. WILD. Carmine or dark pink. Oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 50 cts., $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. 85 cts., lb. \$1.50.

MRS. HANNAN. Deep rose-pink; very pleasing shade. Oz. 40 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. \$1.25, $\frac{1}{2}$ lb. \$2.00, lb. \$3.50.
